Harris was coming home last night from his work in the Harrns, Silver Baker Company, near South Plainfield, when an automobile driven by a woman occupant turned the corner into New Market road and struck his vehicle. He was hurled ten feet in the roadway and residents of the section picked him up and sent in a call for a doctor. The automobile was removed to a garage for repairs. The motorcycle was a total wreck.

AUTO ACCIDENT RESULTS FATALLY

Nicholas Fierro Dies in Muhlenberg From Injuries Received at So. Plainfield.

FELL BENEATH TRUCK

Young Man Was Employed in Night Shift at Spicer Plant and Was on His Way Home When Accident Occurred.

Nicholas Fierro, ager 18 years, an employe of the Spicer Manufacturing Company at South Plainfield, died at Muhlenberg Hospital today, the result of injuries sustained early this morning, when he fell underneath the wheels of the company's auto truck. His injuries consisted of lacerations of the muscles of the thigh. He was hurriedly taken to the hospital, where, after an examination, it was said that his chances for recovery were slight.

Fierro worked in the night shift at the South Plainfield plant and when the fatal accident occurred the young man was climbing aboard the auto truck with other employes, en route for home. Fierro missed his hold and fell beneath the large truck.

Although first aid measures were adopted, Fierro lost consciousness, and fellow-employes realizing that the victim was seriously injured, sent him to the hospital as quickly as possible. Fierro's home was in Bound Brook. He had been employed at Spicer's for some time and was considered a good workman. He is survived by his parents who live on Lawrence avenue, Bound Brook.

TALKED TO LOCAL TROOPER OVER PHONE AT DOUGLAS

E. A. Stevenson, of West Seventh street, conversed with one of his sons over the long distance telephone at the Douglas, Arizona National Guard camp yesterday after, learning that all of the Plainfielders were well and that the Troop D men were thoroughly contented with the treatment accorded them in the west.

Mr. Stevenson has two sons with Troop D but one of these was on guard duty yesterday afternoon he could not reach him.

300 POUND MAN AND BOY DIE; ANOTHER HURT

Jersey Beaches All Under Heavy Guard—Men Familiar With the Habits of the Fish Plainly Puzzled—Two Big Ones Were Killed Near Perth Amboy by Life Guards—State Aid Asked in Hunt for "Raider."

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

Matawan, July 13.—Men armed with rifles, shotguns, eel spears and sickles are cruising about the Raritan Bay and Matawan Creek here this afternoon hunting the man-eating shark which has caused a reign of terror off the Jersey coast during the past fortnight. Excitement reached the breaking pitch late yesterday when a man and a boy were literally chewed to pieces and another boy was so badly gorged that he was removed to St. Peter's Hospital in New Brunswick. No more spectacular raid on inland or coast waters was ever made and today the resort population of New Jersey is in a frenzied state.

Sharks have been seen at Morgan's Beach, north of Keyport and below Perth Amboy, and two were slain by life guards yesterday afternoon. One of these was twelve feet long and weighed 300 pounds. Yesterday's victims are:

STILLWELL, LESTER, twelve years old, son of William Stillwell, of Matawan. His body is believed to have been devoured by the shark.

FISHER, STANLEY, twenty-four, merchant, Matawan. Died in Memorial Hospital, Long Branch, at 7:30 last night.

DUNN, JOSEPH RALPH, ten years old, who gave his address as No. 124 East One Hundred and Twenty-eighth street, New York city. Leg badly bitten, but it was said today in St. Peter's Hospital, New Brunswick, that he would not lose his leg and would recover unless there are complications.

Little Lester Stillwell, with his brother and Albert O'Hara, was swimming when the shark made its appearance at Close's Dock. The big fish struck O'Hara with its tail, hurling him about eight feet into the air. Then it made a dash for Stillwell. Joseph Fisher, on the pier, turned at the sound and saw a fin cutting through the water toward the lad. Still screaming, with hands upraised, Lester was snatched under the water and was not seen again.

This was at 2:30 p. m. Workmen rushing to the bank from a nearby factory began a search for the missing boy's remains. Nets were stretched, and hardy swimmers entered the water. One of the huskiest of these was 300-pound Stanley Fisher, a merchant of Matawan. More than one hundred persons watched his efforts and those of the other searchers.

At 3 p. m. the shark either returned to the scene or again took up his quest for new living food.

Stanley Fisher was treading water. The crowd heard him scream. Neither fish nor fin was seen, but when the swimmer lunged toward shore and grasped at the bank he left a red wake. Something large and alive under water bumped against the legs of Arthur Smith, standing in shallow water, and knocked him down. Fisher, while dying, said he felt Stillwell's body, and had grasped it with his arms under the water.

It was about twenty minutes later that ten-year-old Joseph Dunn, who was visiting with his mother in Cliffwood nearby, stripped off his clothes and dived into the creek a quarter of a mile below the place where Fisher and Stillwell had been seized by the shark.

Hardly had the youngster's body cut the water before he began screaming that something had hold of him. Boys reached down from the string piece and caught Joseph's arms. They tugged until they pulled him almost out of the water. When his legs came above the surface a shark's head came with them. The shark's teeth were sunk in the left leg. The boy's companions wrenched his leg out of the shark's mouth and dragged him to safety. The entire calf of the left leg was bitten out.

All night motorboats, launches and other craft hung over the boy and creek, the men carrying lanterns and flashlights. Some of them even carried sickles from the field as weapons. But at daylight not a trace of the shark had been found. It is understood an appeal is to be made today to Governor Fielder to obtain State aid in running down the shark.

Authorities on sharks differ in their opinions. Some believe the "man-eater" is a stray monster from Southern waters. Others believe there is a whole school of them, and that one fish has not caused all the recent deaths. A few suggest that it is not what is commonly known as a "man-eating" shark at all, but one of some other variety that, desperate from hunger, has ventured close to land for food.

The shark scare has struck terror to thousands in New York and New Jersey coast resorts since the "tiger of the sea" mangled his first victim, July 3, at Beach Haven.

Fishery experts in New York and Washington say sharks which ordinarily inhabit local water are not man-eaters. The man-eaters have their hunting ground farther out to sea and farther South. But it is the theory of the United States Bureau of Fisheries that one of the tiger sharks has strayed far from his normal habitat and is making raids along the New Jersey coast.

One lone marauder, between twenty and thirty feet long, equipped with teeth like bayonets and capable of darting through the water with the speed of an express train, is cruising up and down near the shore, searching for prey, it is believed. Often one single slash from the sabre teeth rips the body of the victim wide open. This was the fate of Charles E. Van Sant, of Philadelphia, the first victim of the shark.

Men familiar with the habits of fish are frankly puzzled over the shark raids. Assuming that one man-eater is responsible, it must have a long beat. It has been seen at Spring Lake, N. J., and at Bridgehampton, L. I. If it is the same shark that went to Matawan, it must have skirted all of the Lower Bay of New York, and at some time within the last few days passed Coney Island and the Rockaways.

JOSEPH O. OSGOOD'S SUCCESSOR IS NAMED

Arthur E. Owen, of Montclair, is Made Chief Engineer of New Jersey Central.

Official announcement is made of the appointment of Arthur E. Owen as chief engineer of the New Jersey Central to succeed the late Joseph O. Osgood, Sr., of North Plainfield, whose sudden death occurred recently in Newark.

Mr. Owen, whose residence is in Montclair, was assistant to Mr. Osgood and has been with the New Jersey Central for some time. He was a student at Rutgers College before talking up railroad work. He left college to become associated with the engineer of Essex county on highway and other work of a similar character.

He entered the service of the New Jersey Central as draftsman in 1898, and was rapidly advanced by successive steps from draftsman to principal assistant engineer in 1907, which position he held until his more recent appointment as chief engineer. Being associated with Mr. Osgood for so long a time he not only gained considerable knowledge from the latter, but also proved to be a valuable assistant. Mr. Owen's advancement to such an important position is a popular one with all the employes in the engineering department of the New Jersey Central.

NO BOROUGH CASES.

There have been no cases of infantile paralysis reported in the borough and the Board of Health authorities there are doing everything in their power to prevent a visit of the prevalent plague. Inspectors have been detailed to watch families that have moved to the borough since the advent of the plague in New York and Brooklyn. Quite a number of New York people have taken up their residence in North Plainfield in an effort to keep their children away from possible infection. These children are not allowed to mingle with other children in the neighbornood and, in that way, any possible infection is prevented.

TENTATIVE SCHOOL PLANS ARE KNOWN

With An Eight-room Addition the Entire Building is to Be Made Fireproof.

Since the school election last week, when the voters appropriated $50,000 for the building of an eight-room addition to School No. 1 and to improve the old structure, the Board of Education has been working on plans for the improvements in order to get them approved by the State authorities as soon as possible so that actual work may be started. Although the exact plans have not yet been announced, they have been perfected to such an extent that a general idea of what will be is possible.

What is perhaps the most important thing to be done, considered from the point of view taken by the State Board of Education, is the remodeling of the main structure, so as to make it fireproof. One of the things to be done to accomplish this will be the tearing out of the main stairway and building one of stone and steel. There are a number of other changes besides that will be made as well.

The addition will be of eight rooms and two stories. It is the present plan to have it built on the northeast corner of the main structure, partly because the addition built a number of years ago was on the opposite corner. To conform with the rest of the building, it will probably be of brick, with four rooms on each floor. A steel stairway and all other features that tend to make a fireproof building will be employed in the structure.

With the eight rooms additional, the entire building will be composed of sixteen rooms, an auditorium and office. That, the Board of Education says, is as large as the structure can be made because after a school building reaches that size it passes under new State requirements that make it impossible to add any more to it.

FANWOOD RIFLE CLUB TO RE-ORGANIZE SATURDAY

After a year of inactivity the Fanwood Rifle Club will make another start, when a reorganization meeting followed by practice shooting will be held on the former club range on Westfield road, Saturday afternoon. It is probable that an election of officers will be held and plans for an active season made.

Organized a year ago last spring through the efforts of Captain Louis Tuzo, of Terril road, the club included most of the local young men as members. A range was laid out on Westfield road and during the two months the boys took interest in the club some excellent scores were made.

HARRIET M. SQUIRES TEACHING CORPS DEAN

Instructor in Local Schools for Thirty-four Years—Will Not Retire.

After thirty-four years of teaching, Miss Harriet M. Squires, whose summer home is in Rahway, has not yet announced her intention of retiring as teacher of the third grade in School No. 1, even though she is eligible for pension.

Miss Squire first came to Scotch Plains in the year 1882, just being out of school herself, and taught the first and second grades. Those were the days when the school was located in the building now remodeled into the Parish House. Besides Miss Squires there were three other teachers; J. P. Town, now dead, was principal and taught the seventh and eighth grades; Miss Carrie Beltman, until a short time ago Fanwood's postmistress, but now living in Orange, taught the fifth and sixth, and Alice M. Johnston, who has since died, taught the third and fourth.

Some twenty-five years ago, when the present building called No. 1 was built, the classes were removed from the Parish House. Miss Squires went to the new building and taught the various grammar grades, but for the last decade she has ben head of the third grade.

Several years ago, when S. Dana Townsend was made supervising principal, Miss Squires was rewarded by the Board of Education for her long service, by being made assistant principal, an office which she holds in addition to teaching her class.

Town Topics

Scotch Plains started out several months ago on a crusade of redemption, so to speak, in the eyes of the rest of the world, and after getting one thing that they were after, they have now settled back and things are beginning to slip along as before. Gradually, year by year, the name Scotch Plains has become lost to the public eye; first it was taken from the C. R. R. of N. J. time tables; a little later from the telephone directory; then it disappeared from the fronts of the trolley cars, and some people even dropped the first part of the name and referred to the town as the "Plains." A movement was organized in the spring to regain lost prestige. The railroad was approached and on the last time table Scotch Plains again appeared, but there the agitation stopped. The movement should be kept going until all those things that have made one of the oldest towns in the State lose its identity, are recovered.

Fanwood Borough is, as a rule, a fairly orderly place, but that the growth it has experienced in the past few years has caused more work for the police department is evidenced by the steadily increasing number of cases before Recorder Sheelen. During the night the one marshal is able to take care of things, but in the daytime, when he is off duty, there is frequently need for a policeman and realizing this, Recorder Sheelen is trying to secure several men to act as specials. Anyone becoming one is only subject to call on emergency, but even that does not seem to appeal to anybody, because the recorder is having a hard time trying to secure anybody. There are a number who could fill the position creditably, and it would be helping the borough, besides.

Infantile paralysis. That is something that is dreaded by people all over the country now, every time they hear anyone mention the disease. Local residents should have no cause for fear, because local health conditions make children practically immune from the plague. About the only avenue by which it can enter is the bringing of children from the quarter where it prevails, to this place, in an effort to get away from it, but the local health authorities are taking measures to prevent such an occurrence.

While the action of the local health authorities in postponing the annual Sunday school excursion, scheduled for July 18, will disappoint the many that have looked forward to it year after year it is really necessary if all possible steps are to be taken to prevent infantile paralysis from getting a hold here. With this annual feature postponed residents should work all the harder to make the second annual "community picnic" a success. Action has been sadly lacking in connection with the picnic for some weeks, and it may turn out that the health officials' move in calling off the excursion was a good thing for the picnic.

BLOCKED A HYDRANT.

A representative of the Horton Ice Cream Company was taken before Recorder Philip Jahn yesterday, for stopping on Park avenue yesteday in such a way as to effectually block the fire hydrant. Marshal Florence O'Sullivan made the arrest, and the Recorder gave the driver a severe reprimand.

MRS. JOHN KANDELKY DIES IN HER 34TH YEAR

Following an illness of a year's duration, Mrs. Helen Kandelky, wife of John Kandelky, of Westfield avenue, Scotch Plains, died at her home yesterday afternoon at two o'clock. She was born in Bound Brook thirty-four years ago, but had made her home in Scotch Plains the greater part of that time, coming to the borough when a young girl. Mrs. Kandelky was a member of the Methodist church and took keen interest in all the activities of the congregation and up to the time of her illness was actively engaged in the various church societies. She had a host of friends throughout the town and was quick to make friends and keep them.

Beside her husband, she is survived by two daughters, Claradora, aged twelve, and Helen Marion, aged nine years. She is also survived by her father, Thomas S. Whitenack, also of Scotch Plains.

The funeral will be held at her late home Saturday afternoon at two o'clock and the service will be in charge of Rev. Raymond E. Marshall. The interment will be in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

AUTO AND MOTORCYCLE COLLIDE IN BOROUGH

Another accident occurred at the corner of South and Martine avenues early last night when a motorcycle ridden by a Plainfied young man, who would not give his name,, and an automobile occupied by three Elizabeth women came together. The man was thrown from his machine and received a badly cut knee.

The three women were crossing South avenue to go over the railroad bridge, and reached the corner the same time as the fellow on the motorcycle, who was going toward Plainfield. Both wer going at such a rate of speed that it was impossible to stop in time to avoid a collision. A settlement was reached between the two parties, and the man was taken to his home in Plainfield.

MADISON AVENUE PROPERTY BEING SOLD FOR BUILDING

William A. Ross, of New York, who owns a considerable tract of land in the vicinity of Madison avenue, Fanwood, has made two recent sales. Robert M. Earl, of Elizabeth, has purchased a lot facing on Madison avenue with a 150-foot front and 335-foot depth. Work has been started by an Elizabeth contractor on the building of a two and one-half story modern dwelling on the lot. Charles T. Boyd, also of Elizabeth, has purchased a lot from Mr. Ross with a frontage of 100 feet on Russell road and 376 on Madison avenue. He intends building in the near future.

PARALYSIS PRECAUTIONS CAUSE HEALTH BOARD WORK

The Boards of Health of Fanwood and Scotch Plains are still working to take all necessary measures to prevent any ikelihood of infantile paralysis from getting a start there. Posters and cards have been profusely distributed and both health bodies have named special deputies to keep a watch on new comers. William Lidgate is stationed at the Fanwood station to stop all passengers coming from the infected sections of New York, and Russell Johnson is at the Park avenue trolley corner for the same purpose.

BOY SCOUT CAMP.

The Plainfield Boy Scout Camp located on Terril road, continues to amuse and instruct scouts in the open air. Every hour is filled with joy for the scout, who takes advantage of the opportunity to spend some time at Camp Ackerman. Up to date, only scouts from Troops 5, 8, 13 and 14 have been at the camp, but it is expected that every boy scout in this city will spend at least a week at the camp before it closes.

FUR MILL TO OPEN.

After being closed down for the past five years, extensive alterations are being made at the fur mill, and it will be opened by John Haely, of New York, in another ten days. Situated on Park avenue, along Greenbrook, the mill at one time turned out a large amount of felt, but in recent years has been a failure.

RESTING COMFORTABLY.

Kenneth Guttridge, the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Guttridge, of 1257 South avenue, underwent an operation for appendicitis at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday. He is under the care of Drs. J. H. Buchanan and William Murray and is resting comfortably.

LOCAL SCHOOL QUESTION REACHES FEVER HEAT; WILL BE TAKEN BEFORE COURT

Fanwood and Scotch Plains have been at odds over the local school question for some years, but since the last election when $50,000 was voted for an eight-room addition in the face of big opposition, the conditions of affairs has reached such a point that the matter is now to be taken to court and settled for good. Fanwood has been wanting for a long time to set itself off into a separate district and now Scotch Plains wants to take similar action, but up until the present time it has been thought impossible to do so. Now, however, the attorney for the borough people has found the means whereby the two places will become separate districts.

The present argument was started immediately after the election on July 5. Because there is no record at Elizabeth of Fanwood and Scotch Plains being one district, a township man has made a complaint to the State authorities that the election was illegal because Fanwood people voted. There are a number of other points that will be raised at the hearing, and several summons have been issued to insure the appearance of certain ones in court.

With the present state of affairs most local people contend that better results could be obtained with two districts, because at present the opposing sides cannot agree on anything. The litigation is being watched with interest by a number of places and will no doubt attract wide attention when the hearing is held.

POWER OF THE TRAINED MIND

History of the Age of Artificial Stone An Interesting Story.

MARKS BIG INDUSTRY

Recently there gathered in Chicago—the world's fourth city—a group of about 200 young men and women from different sections of the United States. They were drawn to Chicago by the power of an idea, an idea which drew also a group of advanced educators, great manufacturers, trained engineers, and in one significant instance, a world-renowned sculptor.

Back of this little ground—some years back—as related by one of the speakers who is today director of one of the greatest engineering schools in the middle west, could be seen a down-east farmer, who was lovingly known as "Uncle George." There were other uncles but "Uncle George," it seems, was best remembered because of his—well, his eccentricities, you might say. He was "just a lettle off," folks said, and that being the case he was an interesting character in the community. "Uncle George," for today within the "seein' things" and one of the things he foresaw was an age of artificial stone. Thereat his barefoot nephews, who had encountered so much stone on the farm that was not artificial snickered. But the age came—the age of concrete—and as one of those nephews, now director of the engineering institute mentioned, told the story, he seemed to look with smiling reverence over the group before him, and on back through the years to the kindly, prophetic figure of "Uncle George," for today within the foremost group of manufacturers of cement, which is used in the making of artificial stone, more than $200,000,000 capital is at work and the concrete age is only just beginning.

The occasion of this meeting was the first Short Course in Concrete for Manual Training and Vocational Teachers. It was held at Lewis Institute June 26 to July 1, under the auspices of the Extension Division of the Portland Cement Association, 111 West Washington street, Chicago. Both interest and attendance were beyond expectations and there is every reason to believe that this event—the first of its kind—will mark the beginning of a greatly increased interest in the work which it is intended to promote.

A "Get Together" luncheon was held in Lewis Institute gymnasium, and a welcoming address was delivered by Prof. John D. Shoop, superintendent of the Chicago Public Schools, who spoke also on behalf of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Prf. Shoop's welcome was reinforced by Director George N. Carman, of Lewis Institute, who so happily testified to the complete fulfillment of "Uncle George's" prophecy on the coming of artificial stone. Near the close of the meeting, an informal dinner was given at the Sherman Hotel to teachers and others in attendance. Short, inspirational addresses were delivered by H. E. Miles, president of the State Industrial Education Bureau of Wisconsin, and Lorado Taft, the sculptor.

Thus two sources of power converged at this meeting, the cement manufacturers as represented by the Portland Cement Association, and the power of the trained mind, as represented by eminent speakers—for one purpose, the transmission to the manual training and vocational teachers in attendance of a more thorough knowledge of how to make and use concrete, that they may in turn transmit that knowledge through the industrial training of the youth of the land, to the end that pleasing, permanent, expense-proof construction may everywhere be attained.

PUPILS OF MIDDLESEX MADE GOOD RECORDS

During the past six years the following honors were won by pupils of the public schools of the Borough of Middlesex: Ludwig Meuser, of the class 1910, was the salutatorian of his class in the grammar school and was valedictorian of his class in Bound Brook High School. He won the La Monte scholarship prize and a State scholarship to Rutgers College, where he was honor man in the class of 1918. His sophomore record has not yet been published. Miss Viola Sebring, class of 1916 Plainfield High School, was one of five P. H. S. students who competed in a State stenography contest. She won first prize in this contest, defeating representatives of all the important high schools in the State. Miss Sebring also won the Ackerman second prize of books. Ruth Thomas, class of 1916, won the Wellesley cup offered by the women of the Wellesley Club of this city. Clarence Perrene won second prize in bookkeeping.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

I have a car which has given me good satisfaction until the last 500 miles. When the machine is running at about thirty-five miles per hour or more there is a very peculiar noise which, I think, as near as I can locate, is in or around the engine, although I can put my hand on any part of the engine or frame and can feel no vibration. I have inspected every nut and bolt, and they are all in perfect condition. Can you suggest a cause of this?

My car ran nicely for 6,000 miles, then began to miss occasionally, gradually getting worse. The ignition is all right; the exhaust valves have been ground in and the cylinders cleaned. Power on the third and fourth cylinders is weak and waning, but the power is good on the first and second cylinders. The engine misses at all speeds. The magneto is in good condition. What is the matter?

Since you have weak compression on the third and fourth cylinders you could not expect good results from your motor. While the valves may have been ground only recently, this does not necessarily mean that they do not need reseating again. Very often a small particle of carbon will lodge under the seat of the exhaust valve and cause trouble even though the cylinders have just been cleaned; also the piston rings may be lined up in such a way that the openings are all in line and accordingly lose compression here. It is also possible that the spark plugs in these cylinders are not in good repair. Possibly the insulators are cracked and permit short circuits.

On a five passenger, car designed to carry the gasoline tank under the front seat would there be any advantage in hanging the tank in the rear with some form of pressure or vacuum feed? Please state advantages and disadvantages of both systems.

The only advantage obtainable by changing to either system would be to allow the use of a shorter manifold, thus increasing the vaporizing efficiency of the carbureting system and to eliminate the trouble of starving the carburetor when climbing an exceptionally steep grade. Also there is the factor of ease in filling the gasoline tank and freedom from the annoyance of gasoline being splashed over on to the upholstery or on the floor of the driver's compartment. Pressure and vacuum systems are equally efficient if properly installed. The pressure system, however, has the disadvantage of being susceptible to leakage of air pressure unless the piping and connections are very solidly installed to insure against loosening from constant vibration.

My car is very hard to start. After putting in five new dry batteries it will start fairly well, but in about a week the batteries run low, and it is necessary to prime several times and refill the radiator with hot water to start the motor. The car runs well after the engine is once started and will idle fairly well. Can you tell me what causes this trouble?

The dry batteries should be used only for starting. You are probably in the habit of letting the engine run for some time on the batteries before switching to the magneto. Just as soon as the engine has started you should switch over to the magneto in order to conserve the batteries. These dry cells soon get exhausted if they are used for continuous or closed circuit work. A dry battery is not intended for any other than open circuit work—that is, for use only at intervals. The reason the motor will not start easily is evidently because the batteries are exhausted and do not give sufficient size of spark.

Why do they not build an engine with three, five or any odd number of cylinders, and, if practical, how would cost of running be compared?

Simplicity and balance are the chief reasons for the universal use of four cylinder engines having a number of cylinders equaling a multiple of 2. In the four cycle engine there are four events that have to be completed for every power impulse per cylinder given to the crank shaft—that is, the piston has to move downward twice and upward twice to complete the cycle. Therefore the crank shaft revolves twice to receive one impulse from a given cylinder. With four cylinders there is a power impulse every half revolution, or two per revolution; with a six there are three impulses per revolution; with an eight, four. If the motor were a three cylinder there would be one and one-half impulses per revolution of the crank shaft.

With such irregularity between the power impulses and motor revolutions it is impossible to obtain a correct balance. Of course in the case of two cycle motors, where there is a power impulse from each cylinder to each crank shaft revolution, the difficulty above mentioned is not a factor. The fuel consumption per cylinder in a motor with an even number of cylinders would not be very different from one with an even number of cylinders.

What is the best way to paint the rims of a car to prevent rust?

Remove the rust from the rims by scraping and sandpapering. Clean thoroughly and then apply a coat of ordinary shellac fixed with some graphite. When this has dried thoroughly apply another coat. Some use an aluminum paint, but we have found the shellac to be more serviceable.

Does a preparation such as prepared wax injure the finish of a car body? Does it preserve the finish longer than if not used?

It is the purpose of all preparations of this nature, whether they be waxes or polishes, first to protect the surface of the body—the finish—from the action of water, rain, dirt and even to some extent the action of the sun's rays. Consequently to provide a smooth, shiny coating all of such polishes, provided they do not contain alkali or acids, do preserve the finish and make a finish last longer than if they were not used.

My car is equipped with 34 by 4 tires. Three are new, and one is about worn out. Would it injure the car either in appearance or otherwise to replace the old tire with a 36 by 4½ inch and then as the 34 by 4 inch tires wear out replace them with the oversize tires?

You cannot use 36 by 4½ tires to replace 34 by 4 tires without getting new wheels or at least new rims. The proper oversize for 34 by 4 tires is 35 by 4½. These can be used on 34 by 4 rims without changing the rims. It is better to replace first both rear tires and carry the old 34 by 4's as spares for the front. When these are gone you can put the oversize tires on the front also. To use only one oversize will make the car steer badly if on the front and too much differential action if on the rear.

My carburetor has troubled me by flooding when the engine of my car is not running. What is the cause of this? I have been told to turn the float valve in its seat and so seat it perfectly, but this does not help any. Have a great deal of trouble making the motor hit evenly when first starting up. The engine never has pulled very well on hills. Can you tell me what is wrong?

The leakage in your carburetor is possibly due to the dirt in the gasoline having lodged under the needle valve and holding it partly opened, or else the valve itself is not seating properly. Our advice in this instance would be to disassemble the carburetor for the purpose of a thorough cleaning and also reseat the needle valve. To do this properly place a small quantity of white lead on the tapered portion of the valve; then replace the valve and spin a few turns by the use of a screwdriver. Remove the valve, clean off the white lead and when replacing hold valve firmly down in its seat and tap the stem lightly with a hammer. It also would be well to adjust the float so that it stands at about one eighth of an inch below its proper level.

The trouble experienced in getting the motor to hit evenly when first starting up no doubt is due to improper handling of the carburetor dash adjustment. When starting the motor, especially if it has been standing for any time, it is advisable to move the lever regulating the dash well down on the starting side of the dial, which practically shuts off the air passage and allows a certain amount of raw gas to be drawn into the cylinder, and after the motor becomes warm the lever gradually can be moved back toward the running side of the dial to a position on which it is found the motor runs best under ordinary conditions.

The lack of power mentioned may be due to the valves not seating properly or being incorrectly adjusted, and it would be advisable for you to have these gone over—ground in, if necessary—and when adjusting leave a 0.006 inch clearance between the end of the valve stem and the face of tappet adjusting screw when the valve is properly seated. This adjustment should be made when the motor is cold. It also would be well to note whether the clutch is holding properly, as, if this slips on a hard pull, naturally the full benefit of the motor power is not being obtained.

Cylinder No. 2 on my four cylinder car leaks compression between the piston and the cylinder into the crank case, while the other three cylinders are as good as new. Would fitting the defective cylinder with new piston rings cause the compression to be more than the others and perhaps start vibration?

It is impossible to say whether the No. 2 cylinder would be benefited greatly by the use of new piston rings, because the leak might be due to bad scoring from the cylinder, in which case it would have to be rebored. If it is due simply to uniform wear the fitting of new piston rings, and more particularly the nonleaking type of piston rings, probably will prove a remedy. However, this leak may be caused by the slots in the piston rings coming in line, in which case new rings will not be necessary and you will need only to space the slots in the various rings so they do not come in line.

DRIVING WITHOUT LICENSE, GETS $20 FINE IN COURT

Albert Latzko, of Rahway road was before City Judge William G. DeMeza this morning on a charge of reckless driving on Watchung avenue yesterday afternoon. It was brought out in court that he had no license to drive a car, and he was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 or to serve forty days in the county jail. Judge DeMeza said in court that he would see that the man did not get a license to drive a car.

Latzko was driving his automobile on Watchung avenue when he had to turn out for two other machines, and he could not stop quick enough to avoid running into Virginia Quass, aged 9 years, of Watchung avenue, and knocked her off her wheel. When he saw what he did he did not stop.

CAUGHT SHOOTING CRAP, HAD LICENSES REVOKED

Charged with shooting "crap" at the North Avenue station yesterday afternoon, George Barry and James Tate, two taxicab drivers, had their licenses revoked by City Judge William G. DeMeba, this morning. The complaints against John Currin and Harold Martin were dismissed.

There has been a practice at the station for some weeks of shooting "crap" and Patrolman Martin Welsh was detailed to break it up. It was not until yesterday that he succeeded in catching anyone, but it is expected the court's disposal of the two cases will prevent a reoccurrence.

Germany's New Undersea Merchantman and Her Commander, Paul Koenig

THE PROPELLERS WHICH DRIVE THE BIG NEW GERMAN UNDERSEA BOATS

Photos, © 1916, by American Press Association.

The Deutschland is 315 feet long, with a thirty-one foot beam. The interior is a glistening marvel of polished woodwork and metal. Amidships is the engine space, on either side of which runs a long, deep narrow compartment. There are bulkheads twenty feet from each end.

The officers' quarters are forward. They are small, but very handsomely furnished. The captain's cabin, though only 7½ by 5½ feet, is lined with polished walnut. Beneath the captain's bunk is a clothes locker. Opposite is a desk, electric lighted. The purser's quarters are with those of the other officers.

CAPTAIN TELLS OF THE DEUTSCHLAND

EMDEN WAS THE PIONEER.

Then U-59 Made Trip From Kiel to the Dardanelles—Next the Moewe Captured the Appam and Now Submarine Comes to Baltimore—Captain Proud of His Vessel.

Every one, including the enemies of Germany, must admire the feats accomplished by her naval forces since the outbreak of the war. Movements never dreamed of before the war began have been carried on successfully.

The Emden was the first. Caught by the declaration of war in a Pacific port, she armed herself and evaded the warships of the allies for three months. During this time she was preying on enemy shipping and obtaining fuel and food from the ships she sank. Finally, after a most adventurous career, she was sunk off Cocos island by the Australian warship Sydney.

Then the submarine U-59 made the long journey from Kiel canal to the Dardanelles, evading the British patrols at Gibraltar. Arriving in the Mediterranean, she was a relentless foe for the allied squadron there and sank several battleships.

Then the commerce raider Moewe left Germany and began preying on allied shipping. She sank several vessels and finally held up the liner Appam. She captured this vessel, put on a prize crew, which held the passengers captive, and made for Norfolk, where the Appam interned.

At last the feat of the Deutschland, the supersubmarine that made the trip from Helgoland to Baltimore, evading the allied fleets and patrols.

Captain's Story.

Captain Paul Koenig of the Deutschland told an interesting story of his trip. He said:

"About the trip of my submarine, the Deutschland? There is little to tell. We got through the blockade without trouble. There is no blockade any more, none that you call a real blockade. In the North sea we went down once.

"It takes just a minute to get her out of sight—not two minutes nor a minute and a half, but she will get out of sight in one minute. I don't remember just where it was we went down. But we were down for two hours. There were cruisers about.

"It was our object to avoid every man-of-war and all merchant ships, for that matter. We did not meet warships in groups in the North sea or elsewhere, but only one or two at a time. At sight of them we went down out of sight and were not seen. In the channel after the fourth day we spent the night on the ground, lying right on the bottom all night. The weather was foggy. We had met only cruisers in the evening, but in the channel there were destroyers.

"And how did we live? Why, just as you do in America—on tinned food, tinned meat, tinned fresh bread, tinned fruit—everything tinned. While the destroyers might be raging overhead we lay on the ground undisturbed and peaceful. We play our graphophone. We are entertained well, and we have champagne—a little.

"Did we never try to get out of the way of cruisers or other ships? No, never. We turn back? We may sink out of sight, but we never turn back. Why do we not try to run and get out of the way? Because it is so much easier to dive. You see the Deutschland was built to dive.

"Perhaps it is all very remarkable. It is not for me to say. Our total mileage—let me see—I figure it just a little less than 3,800 miles. Now, I say this—that if any one builds a boat of this kind, like my Deutschland, he can do all that we have done—all, not too easy, not too hard.

Bad In Rough Weather.

"In rough weather, it is true, when we are closed in, it is uncomfortable. Then air gets stuffy; then it is not such a pleasant life in the submarine. But as soon as the weather is such that you can keep the hatches open, then it is very comfortable traveling. The submarine rolled a little most of the time.

"As practical? Above all, yes; I regard it as practical, the undersea freight carrer, not only one, but many. Enough to break the blockade? Yes. Or perhaps you will say that the blockade is already broken.

"The venture is bound to be a great financial success. My cargo of dyestuffs is worth $1,000,000. I have brought no bulky mail and no securities, no stocks, no bonds, no message to the president."

PRUSSIAN ROYALTY HONORED SUBMARINE.

Prince Henry Wrote Poem, and Princess Gave Star to Ship.

Prince Henry of Prussia and her royal highness the princess visited the Deutschland in the early part of June before her departure. Prince Henry presented to Captain Koenig a picture of himself with a poem inscribed in his own handwriting on the lower part of the picture. As translated by First Officer Franz W. Krapohl of the Deutschland it is:

TO THE FIRST GERMAN COMMERCE SUBMARINE.

To battle and fight is not your call.
Your mission is one of peaceful trade.
Go on, then! God speed you and bless the trip!
Be courageous and brave as true Germans are!
All Germany wishes you good luck and a safe return home from the depths of their hearts.

Her highness the princess also presented to the boat a silver star showing the Deutschland in relief and the rising sun. This is mounted on teakwood and is fastened on the starboard side of the central station, which is the controlling position. On the port side is a signed copy of Prince Henry's poem, presented to the boat and crew.

FEAST OF REAL CRABS ENJOYED BY THE ELKS

Baltimore, Md., July 13.—A mammoth crab feast was the only thing of importance on the program of the Elks, in annual convention here yesterday. Twenty thousand of them kept five steamships plying continuously between Baltimore and Love Point, and they ate more crabs than most persons believed were in the Chesapeake.

The old guard of the convention were still playing politics today. Not satisfied with having won at yesterday's session, they turned their attention to the Boston convention of next year. Before they were through they had mapped out a complete slate, with "Fred" Harper, of Lynchburg, Va., for grand exalted ruler Garry Herrmann, of Cincinnati, who is the most powerful individual member in the order, was the leader in this conference.

The big parade will be held today, and the New York delegates, with a band all their own, will play a big part.

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JULY 13, 1916.

UNLESS WAR IS DECLARED SOLDIERS HAVE NO VOTE.

That the New Jersey militiamen will be kept at the international border until after election is eminent and suggestion has been made that a special session of the State Legislature be called to pass an act giving to the Jerseymen the right to cast a ballot in November even though they may be stationed in a Western State. Some have argued that there is no need for an extra legislative session, claiming that the law passed in 1898 adequately provides for this emergency. However, the matter has been brought to the attention of Secretary of State Martin and he maintains that in the event of the New Jersey soldiers being retained in Mexico during the primaries and general election and in the meantime there being no declaration of war, not one of the soldiers will be entitled to vote. In the year 1815 the Legislature of this State passed an act giving a soldier in the actual military service under a requisition from the President of the United States or the Governor of this State, the right to "vote in the field." In 1864 an attempt was made to procure some legislation embracing this subject, but was voted down, upon the ground that a majority of the members of the Legislature were of the opinion that such a method of voting would be unconstitutional. There was no voting "in the field" during the War of the Rebellion. In 1875 the Constitution of this State was amended so that "in time of war" no soldiers or sailors should be deprived of his vote by reason of his absence from his election district, and the amendment provided that the Legislature should have power to provide the manner in which such absent electors should be permitted to vote. In the revision of the general election law of this State, passed in 1898, provision is made for carrying into effect this amendment to our Constitution, but the privilege so granted cannot be exercised unless we are actually at war.

DO NOT USE COLORED MOSQUITO NETTING.

Physicians have sounded a timely warning against the use of colored mosquito netting over baby carriages and cradles, it having been found that this in many instances has been responsible for infant poisoning. It is claimed that the green tint is usually imparted to the covering by arsenic and the vivid color appeals to the babies who frequently put the netting in their mouths. Since the war broke out it has been necessary to produce the coloring by cheap American dyes which are not classed as non-poisonous. When the German dyestuffs were available the danger was not so great but even when the best is at hand it is well to exercise care in the selection of carriage or cradle coverings. Flies, mosquitos and other pests may be kept from the child just as well with plain netting as with the brightly colored variety.

HEALTH CRUSADE WILL BE A RIGOROUS ONE.

City officers have combined to wage an exhaustive campaign against uncleanliness in the home and in public. The local Board of Health has issued a warning threatening arrest as the reward for even the slightest violation of the sanitary code in Plainfield and the city court yesterday went on record as being in league with the health authorities and determined to send the guilty parties "up the road." Keep your ash cans covered, do not scatter garbage or other refuse, keep dogs away from ash and refuse depositories and last but not least, be tidy and scrupulously clean in your home. If you don't live up to the prescribed rules and regulations you will find yourself behind the bars in short order. This will be for the good of the community and all classes of residents, regardless of wealth or influence, are liable.

Paterson's Board of Aldermen has had called to its attention the creditable system of saloon regulation in Plainfield by the ministerial element of the Silk City. A municipality that has encountered as much trouble as Paterson along this line would do well to investigate a system that has been tried and proven satisfactory. We'll admit that there is always room for improvement but the one we have in force appears to be just about as near perfect as humanity will allow.

As Sir Henry has admitted that for many years he was a consistent member of the Amalgamated Stay at Home Vote, we guess his attorney is right. Of course, a man who is able to keep out of politics to that extent is a firm believer in unpreparedness.

PRUDENTIAL WILL PAY ENLISTED MEN'S SALARIES

In view of the fact that 121 Prudential men are in the service of the State on the Mexican border, fifty having gone from the home office at Newark, and seventy-one from the field agencies, the executive committee has adopted resolutions, which have been approved by the board of directors, providing for the payment of salaries while the men are in the service.

In cases where the present employes of the company have been or shall hereafter be called upon for service to the State in which they reside or to the United States on account of their membership or enlistment in the National Guard or other military or naval organization, the regular salary or wages of the employes will be paid by the company during their service not to exceed six months from July 1, 1916; provided, that in cases of employes who are commissioned officers, the salary or wages paid by the company shall not exceed the excess theretofore paid by the company over the salary received by commissioned officers either from the State or the United States.

In case such military or naval service shall continue for a longer period than January 1, 1917, further consideration will then be given to the payment of salaries of employes serving beyond that date.

On the Spur of the Moment

Revenge.

'Twas long ago she won my heart,
And swore from me she'd never part.
When she gave me her maiden kiss,
I tell you, fellers, it was bliss.

I had a friend, his name was Jim;
To him she somehow took a whim.
I don't know how it came about,
But Jim, he sort of cut me out.

She was a full-blown peach, all right;
She was, in fact, a beauty bright.
But I got my revenge on Jim;
You see, she up and married him.

"Old Jim," they call him in our town;
He limps around and wears a frown.
His shoulders they are bent with toil,
And he's as sore as any boil.

She's interested in new thought,
And doesn't know the things she ought.
She hires three maids to do her work,
But Jim has not a chance to shirk.

Jim had the laugh on me all right,
When he copped out my beauty bright.
That was in the dim and dismal past;
He chuckles best who chuckles last.

The Answer.

After the war is over,
After the dead are forgot;
Ask for the cause of the carnage—
History will answer you, WHAT?

After rebuilding the cities,
Leveled by cannon and shot;
Ask for the reason they did it—
History will answer you, WHAT?

After all kings are forgotten,
Whether they caused it or not;
Down through the ages to come yet,
The echo will always be WHAT?

Advice to Drivers.

If you find your machine missing, advertise and somebody may bring it back.

Always have your ten-year-old kid drive your car when you are not using it yourself. Then you can spend your money defending damage suits and will be able to die poor, which is a very laudable ambition.

Blame your car for everything that happens, even when you run out of oil and gasoline.

Blow your horn every two minutes, for then everybody will know that you are a new driver and will get out of your way.

The Circus Is Coming.

Soon comes the day of the sawdust ring,
By jing!
The old folks all have to go
And see the show,
So as to chaperon the kids.
Outside of that their age forbids.
Don't say them nay, it is no use;
They'll go and borrow an excuse
In shape of some near neighbor's child.
The world has smiled
For years and years at silly clowns;
The ups and downs
Of mighty acrobats have thrilled.
Year after year the tents are filled,
They pay their hard-earned dough to see
The freaks perform in highest glee.
It isn't possible to pass
The gentleman who eats the glass.
The living skeleton, they say,
Ne'er grows passe.
The girl with snakes about her form
Is sure to take the crowd by storm.
The rubber-skinned man snaps his hide
And sells his photos far and wide.
The gasping crowds will stand and stare
At toothless lions in their lair.
The elephants will stand and eat
Peanuts and shift poledriver feet.
The chariots drawn by horse power,
Will speed around, three miles an hour;
And mighty crowds will gaze in awe,
The greatest thing they ever saw.
Of course, they've seen it all before
In days of yore.
Some institutions pass away
And quickly fail.
The circus, though, has come to stay,
It ne'er grows stale.

P. H. S. GRADUATE DISCUSSES ADVANTAGES OF MUNICIPAL CONTROL OF WATER WORKS

Among the members of the 1916 class of the Plainfield High School who competed for the Plainfield Daily Press prize for the best composition on a municipal topic, was Joseph J. Mutnick, Jr. His subject was "Municipal Control of the Plainfield Water Works." The composition was as follows:

The municipal control of the water works in this city is a subject which has led to a great deal of discussion in the past. There is a steadily growing sentiment on the part of the public in favor of municipal ownership. At present the water works of Plainfield are controlled and managed by a private corporation known as the Plainfield-Union Water Company. With the rapid increase in population and property building, the public feels that the city has now reached the stage where such natural monopolies ought no longer be controlled by a private corporation. The public also feels, that the local conditions affecting this problem are suitable for this reform, and that it is the duty of the city government to make this change. Therefore, only for the welfare of the general public is this change sought.

The desirability of the reform should be the predominant consideration. This reform is desirable, for (1) the service rendered by a branch of the public administration would be better than that of a private corporation; (2) it would be to the benefit of Plainfield as a measure of economy; (3) it would do away with any possible chance of corruption in our city government, which such public utility corporations bring about; (4) finally, conditions are suitable to meet this change.

It is clear, that when a city undertakes municipal ownership, it must be prepared to carry on a business-like administration. In undertaking such an administration as the control of public utilities, it is no more than natural that the people of the city would be vitally and deeply concerned. Since the quality of service is all-important, especially in the case of water supply, it is doubtlessly true, that the general public would demand the highest quality of service. The quality of service in the present system could be improved in various ways. For instance, the few water hydrants which Plainfield now possesses are without water three-quarters of the year. Could this not be improved? Why not allow the dumb beasts to have an advantage of the pure and wholesome water with which Plainfield has been gifted by nature? Private citizens have also, often been mistreated by a private corporation. It is obvious, therefore, that the quality of the service can be more easily controlled under public than under private management.

There are, however, stronger reasons why the city should control the water works. The strongest, perhaps, is that it would be to the benefit of the public of Plainfield as a measure of economy. It cannot be denied that enormous sums of money are made out of private ownership. Could not the same profits be yielded by public ownership? Yes—they could be, but they would not be. The desire for profit being removed, the charges under public ownership would be adjusted to the expense of rendering the service. The charges, therefore, will be lower. Under private ownership, profits are divided up among a few men desirous for profit; under public ownership the profits are divided up indirectly among the taxpayers. The advocates of private ownership cannot deny these facts, and I earnestly believe that these are strong reasons for our city to make a reform in this line.

Again, under municipal control of the water workks, Plainfield would be benefited politically. As a rule, private corporations seeking valuable rights from cities and attempting to escape regulations have often been mixed up in politics. Much of the corruption in our city politics has been due to these public utility corporations. Then, too, in view of the large consolidation now taking place all over the country, it is possible that if the water supply remains in the hands of a private corporation, this corporation may become part of a larger company, and the interest of Plainfield will be subordinated to those of the company or some other community. It is true to a certain extent that public ownership of utilities serves as the main source of profit for the money-hungry politician. We usually term profits which are derived from such sources as "graft."

This introduction of graft into our cities as a result of public ownership, serves as the foremost argument for the advocates of private ownership. This argument is unsound, for while graft does exist in a few large cities like New York, nevertheless, no signs of graft exists in the great majority of cities throughout the United States, where natural monopolies are controlled by the city. East Orange, a neighbor of ours, has undertaken the control of its water works, and has met with great success. Conditions are sufficiently similar at East Orange and Plainfield to admit us to make comparisons. Municipal ownership has been successful there, and the city has been noted for its clean politics. Why in the world, then, should we be led to believe that such a reform would bring about corruption in our city politics? In a city like New York politicians are often maintained in office for the sake of securing graft, despite of the unwillingness of the public. However, in a city like Plainfield, where public spirit is highly developed, abuses of this kind would at once be regarded as a disgrace to the municipal government and public opinion would drive from office men guilty of such a crime.

Finally, the conditions are suitable to meet this change. We are gifted with a large supply of pure water. It would be no difficult task for the city to gain control of the present plant, for an act which gives cities the privilege of securing control of public utilities at a fair valuation, was passed in New Jersey in 1876. The city at present is in no financial "pinch," in spite of the fact that a new building is being erected. Local conditions, therefore, are all in harmony with this reform.

There is in the United States a marked tendency to rely upon private enterprises for serving the public. The only exception has been in connection with the business of supplying water to dwellers in towns and cities. This has been undertaken by municipal government. Why? The answer is public opinion has demanded economy as well as quality. The public feels that these two demands can be best fulfilled by public ownership. In public ownership of utilities, the general public feels the responsibility, and accomplishes achievements which selfish interests cannot. Along with the progress which now Plainfield is undergoing in public building, ought to come the establishment of the municipal control of the water works, to which this city has begun to take steps years ago.

MARTINE SAYS MURPHY'S ANNOUNCEMENT IS DELICIOUSLY VAGUE AND GLOSSY

Washington, July 13.—United States Senator James E. Martine, having read and mulled over the announcement of Franklin Murphy as to the people of New Jersey that Mr. Murphy has not furnished a solitary reason why Mr. Martine should be turned out.

"Even though he does approve the Chicago platform," said Mr. Martine yesterday, as he read the Murphy statement, paragraph by paragraph, "he does not say that he would oppose any of the laws we put on the books.

"I can't find that he says anything about the currency act. It is because he knows that it has been a blessing—admitted by all fair-minded bankers and business men to be so—a protector of panics created by the same magnates that have had their clutches on the Republican party?

"He does say that he found the letter of Justice Hughes inspiring. Well, if Mr. Murphy and the Republican party can find any inspiration in that letter then God knows they are welcome to it, and we are willing to meet them on it.

"What does he mean when he says that he 'believes in the things we value as Americans, some of which have of late been stained a little?' That is deliciously vague and glossy. My good friend Mr. Murphy is very elastic. I do not know of any action of this Administration or of the Democratic party that has stained our Americanism, or that would warrant us in electing Mr. Murphy to remove the stains. Why doesn't he specify?

"Mr. Murphy also says there is hardly need for him to say any more and that his habit of mind is well known. I agree with him. He needn't say any more. The people will take care of the rest. Because they know that his habit of mind is that of the reactionary and bourbon who learns nothing and advances nowhere. In this he has few competitors."

Mr. Martine will start campaigning tomorrow in deadly earnest. He is goin to spend the remainder of the week making speeches and shaking hands in Warren and Hunterdon counties, and perhaps Mercer. The Senator also hopes to find time to look up some of his friends in Newark and find out whether he can overcome the opposition of James R. Nugent.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Bessie Barriscale, the popular Triangle star, appears today at Proctors' in a role that is totally different from anything she has ever essayed in her career on the screen, when she is presented in an absorbing drama of blind devotion entitled "The Sorrows of Love," a Thomas H. Ince production from the joint pens of Elaine Sterne and J. G. Hawks. "The Sorrows of Love" is of Italian locale, and Miss Barriscale has the part of Sister Beatrice, who is first seen as "The Lily" in the convent of St. Cecile. The plot concerns mainly her adventures in the outer world, after she has fled from the convent, believing she can find a greater mission outside its walls. How she meets and falls in love with a young labor agitator, only to meet tragedy and return again to the convent, has been absorbingly depicted. In the role of Beatrice, Miss Barriscale is credited with a remarkable characterization. Her delineation of the white-robed nun is the very essence of innate goodness, while her later portrayal of the passionate daughter of Italy is equally rich in fiery emotion. Miss Barriscale is supported by William Desmond, who will be remembered, perhaps, for his excellent work with Billie Burke as "Peggy," and with Bessie Barriscale in "Bullets and Brown Eyes." In additon to a laugh provoking Keystone comedy, Evelyn Page and Alan Forrest also appear today in a dramatic production entitled "The Stolen Master."

On Friday and Saturday, Charlie Chaplin appears in his third Mutual comedy entitled "The Vagabond," in which he is supported by the same capable cast which assisted him in "The Floorwalker" and "The Fireman." In "The Vagabond" fair Charlie greets his many admirers in his old coat, derby hat, warped shoes and ill-fitting trousers, and is given plenty of opportunites to provoke storms of laughter by his comic and eccentric capers. On Friday an Edison drama entitled "Out of the Ruins," Harry Carey in "The Wedding Quest," and "Better Halves," a Vim comedy, are shown, while on Saturday in additon to "The Vagabond," Warda Howard and Ernest Maupin are seen in "The Regeneration of Margaret," Emma Hunter and Harry Benham will co-star in "Through the Flames to Love," and a Vitagraph comedy entitled "Her Loving Relations" will complete the program.

NO CASES OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS ON COMPTON AVE.

Residents of Compton avenue, this city, are indignant over a misleading story appearing in another local newspaper last night that "a suspected case of infantile paralysis on Compton avenue, this city, is being investigated." This statement appeared under a Perth Amboy date line, but at first glance would lead one to suppose that it meant Plainfield.

There are four residences on Compton avenue, Plainfield, and it so happens that there is not a child on that short block. There is not even the suspicion of a case of the disease there.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "run-downs," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.—Adv.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Elise and Her Brothers Weave a Net.

One of the Swans Flew Over Her Head.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

BEFORE the sandman came daddy told Jack and Evelyn this story: "Once a princess, Elise, found her eleven brothers that their cruel stepmother had turned into swans. She found them beside the sea, for part of the spell was that daytimes the princes were swans and at night boys. They were so happy to find each other that they stayed awake most of the night visiting. But in the morning Elise was awakened by the rustling of swans' wings above her. She looked up to see her brothers wheeling around in great circles till she lost sight of them. The youngest brother stayed with her. All day they stayed together, the swan with his head in Elise's lap while she petted him. At sunset the other ten swans came back and took the form of princes.

"'Dear sister,' they said, 'tomorrow we must fly away and dare not return to our fatherland for a year. We cannot leave you like this. Have you courage to go with us across the sea? Surely our united strength will carry you across the water?'

"'Oh, take me with you!' cried Elise.

"So the eleven princes spent the whole night weaving a kind of net from the elastic bark of the willow bound together with tough rushes. They wove it large and strong. Elise lay down in it, and when the sun arose and the princes took the form of swans they seized the net in their bills and flew high up among the clouds with their precious sister, who was fast asleep.

"What fun, daddy!" cried Evelyn.

"When Elise woke they were far from land. She thought she must still be dreaming it seemed so strange to be carried through the air high above the sea. Beside her lay a branch of beautiful ripe berries and a bundle of sweet roots that her youngest brother had brought for her. Then she knew that it was he who shaded her with his wings from the sun.

"They were so high up that the first ship they saw looked like a gull floating on the water. A great cloud came up behind them like a mountain, and Elise saw the shadow of herself upon it, and those of the eleven swans looked like giants. It seemed to her the most beautiful picture she had ever seen. But as the sun rose higher the cloud fell behind, and at last her beautiful shadow picture disappeared," daddy ended the bedtime story, with two hugs.

"Oh, thank you, daddy!" cried the children.

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Quince and Cranberry Jelly—One pound qunices and one pound cranberries. Take quinces through food-grinder or cut into small pieces, add cranberries, cover with water and cook until tender. Put in jelly bag and let drip over night. In the morning take a cup of sugar to each cup of juice and let boil fifteen minutes. Meantime, wash and cut up a couple of apples. Take what is left in the bag, push all through a soup strainer, apples included, put back on stove with sugar and you will have a nice marmalade; not a bit of waste to anything.

Orange in Grape Jelly—A few slices of orange or lemon boiled in grape juice, when making jelly, will improve both the flavor and color.

THE TABLE

Flank Steak Braised With Vegetables—Score a flank steak, dredge well with flour, sprinkle with dots of butter and place in oblong baking pan. Over this place a thick layer of thinly sliced raw potatoes, then a layer of thinly sliced onions; over the whole pour two cups stewed tomatoes. Cover tightly and place in oven. Cook slowly 2½ or three hours. Half hour before meat is done remove cover, add a layer of boiled rice (if necessary, more moisture) and cook uncovered the remaining time. In serving, carefully transfer the steak to a hot platter, preserving the contour of the various layers. Slice down through the layers as through a loaf.

Chili Con Carne (materials required for two persons)—One-half pound chili or red kidney beans (one cup dry beans), one half pound hamburg steak, one tablespoon butter (or a little tried out fat, if liked), juice and "thin pulp" of one can tomatoes (strained), salt, pepper, sugar and paprika to taste. Soak beans over night in two quarts cold water. Next morning boil in fresh water until nearly soft, as for baked beans. Melt butter or suet in spider, put in meat, allow to get very brown and stir all the time so each little bit of meat is separate. Now put meat and "fryings" into granite or aluminum kettle, rinse spider with just a little boiling water (to get all the brown color), add cooked beans, tomato juice and seasoning; simmer very slowly over low fire or in the oven, if in use. Allow tomato juice to boil away until there remains a nice, thick gravy on the beans and meat. About two hours' slow cooking is right. Serve cabbage salad and baked apples with this. Nothing else is needed to make a good meal, with home-made bread and coffee or tea to drink.

Larded Rabbit—Soak in clear water over night, wipe dry. Punch holes in thick parts and stuff with well peppered diced bacon. Put large piece of butter in deep frying pan. Brown rabbit quickly on all sides, then put in sufficient water to almost cover and let simmer down. Lift rabbit and make gravy, as with steak.. A few pieces of bacon may be added to the gravy while simmering.

Corn Pone—Two cups corn meal, one cup wheat flour, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon soda, two teaspoons baking powder, two eggs, salt, two cups water, butter size of egg melted in pan and poured into batter last. Sift dry ingredients, add eggs, water, beat, pour in pan, bake twenty minutes.

Fudgerino—Something new for afternoon teas. Make a soft fudge: one cup light brown sugar, one cup confectioners' sugar, one-half square chocolate, one-half cup milk, butter size of walnut. Cook and stir until it thickens and sugars. Spread on thin slices of hot buttered toast. Easy to prepare; delicious.

New Party Cake—Cream one-half cup butter with 1½ cups granulated sugar. Beat in one cup milk and three cups pastry flour sifted with three teaspoons baking powder. Add one teaspoon vanilla and carefully fold in whites of three eggs. Bake in layers. Just as soon as cake is taken from oven, lay mashmallows cut in quarters over each layer. When cake is cool and marshmallows softened, cover with the following filling: Beat half cup butter to a cream, add two tablespoons cocoa dissolved in a little cold coffee. Flavor with vanilla and beat in 1¼ cups of XXXX confectioner's sugar. Beat thoroughly. Add one-third cup broken walnut meats.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

The Gordons Discover Why the Maid's Husband Divorced Her.

"Again! Is she sick again?" asked Ralph in disgust, when informed that they would have to go to the hotel for dinner. "I am going to have Dr. Ellson come over and see what is the trouble."

"I think she has some strong medicine up there that she is taking; there is a queer smell in the room. I wonder if she took opium." Ethel's tone was dispirited.

"Well, we'll just find out what she is taking. If she has to be in bed every week or so we can get along better without her," was Ralph's dictum.

"I feel sorry for the poor woman. She had an awful crying spell about her little Jamie, that's her boy, I suppose."

"What did she say?"

"I could not tell very well. The words were not distinct. It was one incoherent mass of words," replied Ethel.

"Well, I think it is time this thing was looked into," blurted out Ralph, frowning fiercely.

Dr. Ellson was eating dinner when they returned from the hotel and promised to be over in half an hour. Ralph waited for his verdict before going back to the office.

The doctor had been in Mrs. Pearson's room but a few minutes when he came into the living room with a very disgusted look on his face.

"What is it?" asked Ralph, coming toward him.

"Drunk!"

"What?"

"Just common, beastly drunk," was the disgusted answer. "I feel worse about it because I called your attention to the woman. She seemed so decent and capable."

"She did indeed and she is capable and a fine cook. This explains the divorce and the court giving her child to her husband. I thought it was strange when I heard about it and remarked about it at the time." Ralph drew his brow together in a frown.

"Nothing can be done about it till she gets over this souse, I suppose," he continued after a pause.

"Oh, she will be perfectly harmless. She will sleep it off by tomorrow morning and then you can send her away."

"I wonder where she gets the stuff and where she keeps it." Ralph started for the door. "Come on. Let's look for the supply and do away with that to keep her from getting any more."

The heavy snoring continued while they searched the room. A large bottle of rum was found behind her trunk in the closet, and placed beyond her reach.

"It is strange that Mrs. Gordon did not suspect her," remarked the doctor. "You, of course, never came near enough to her to smell her breath."

"She did speak about the smell of drugs. I suppose it never occurred to her that a woman could drink." Ralph thought sadly that the doctor would not look for anything practical in Ethel if he knew her.

MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

The Land We Love the Most.

Lord, while for all mankind we pray,
Of every clime and coast,
Oh, hear us for our native land,
The land we love the most.

Oh, guard our shores from every foe,
With peace our borders bless;
With prosperous times our cities crown,
Our fields with plenteousness.

Unite us in the sacred love
Of knowledge, truth and Thee;
And let our hills and valleys shout
The song of liberty.

—J. R. Wrexford, 1837.

Maintain Your Own Quarantine.

Until all danger of contagion is passed it will be wise to keep your children isolated from all others. No amtter how hard it may be to do so, it will be easier than caring for them after they have contracted infantile paralysis. Neither is it necessary to become overly anxious. Give the children wise, loving care and you have fulfilled your duty.

A Right Kind of Repression.

Strength of moral fiber cannot go hand in hand with inordinate self-indulgence. There must be restraints thrown around childhood's years. Not harshness, unkind treatment nor neglect, but a reasoning firmness and a wise, sympathetic repression. The kind of training that is not obtrusive, that suggests the right course, thereby giving the child a chance to exercise its own will, rather than demands it. The little soul that has learned the maxim "To thine own self be true" has a power within itself to conquer evil which far outweighs the strength of admonition and counsel.

COLORADO.

Physical Culture for Mothers—Plea for Teachers' Day—Penny Milk Station Established.

Several new and distinctive features have characterized the work in Colorado in the last few months. Among these were the physical education classes for mothers and the penny milk station fund of Denver, and the Teachers' Day inaugurated by Pueblo District.

The physical education classes have developed 200 of our women beyond belief. They have produced a latent sense of good fellowship among the members and stimulated and renewed a youthful spirit, which cannot fail to bring a kinship with the young people in the families of these mothers. The courses ended with a grand evening frolic, with folk dancing and cotillion favors. It was an unforgettable evening and will long remain a delightful memory for those who participated and those who witnessed the rejuvenation of the classes. Women from seventeen to seventy took part in the games and dances and were as happy with their balloons as children of seven.

The penny milk fund has raised enough money for one station, which will soon be in operation. This philanthropy is especially suited to the needs of Denver, because of the large number of tuberculor poor, whose children are often insufficiently nourished. Milk at a penny-a-glass will mean a definite improvement in their diet.

Look Ahead.

The mother's hardest task is not in the nursery where she can control conditions, but it is in the eradicating of prejudice and misinformation from the minds of her grammar or high school boy, who learns on the street or payground or from the moving pictures or yellow press what may offset all the influence of the home if she is not forewarned and equipped with special knowledge.

Do you know where your child is receiving his legitimate recreation?

Do you realize the influence the average moving picture has upon the mind of an adolescent boy or girl?

Do you wish to see your child a graduate in the school of crime through the medium of vicious moving pictures?

Do you know that there is such a thing as intemperance in the use of moving pictures?

WOMEN FACTOR IN DRY CONVENTION

One May Be Named For Vice President at St. Paul Session.

5,000,000 CLUB IS GROWING

Big Meeting In St. Paul Opens July 18. Leaders Expect to Have Enough Voters Enrolled to Win Election of 1920—Brief History of the Party Since Its Inception.

With the approach of the Prohibition national convention in St. Paul, July 18 to 21, discussion of the possible action of the convention in selecting the presidential candidate is rife. Some of the party leaders were inclined to the opinion that the standard bearer would be selected from among those new to the Prohibition party, recent converts to the prohibition movement, either as a party or in principle, rather than from the ranks of the old time prohibitionists.

Among newcomers to the party the names of three former governors were mentioned: J. Frank Hanly of Indianapolis, Eugene N. Foss of Boston and William Sulzer, New York. Leaders took the position that each of the three had many followers and was a potential candidate. Those who inclined to the old line candidates mentioned Frederick F. Wheeler of Los Angeles, Francis E. Baldwin of Elmira, N. Y.; W. G. Calderwood of Minneapolis, W. P. F. Ferguson of Franklin, Pa., and Sumner W. Haynes of Indiana.

Among the vice presidential possibilities were listed Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver, Frank W. Emerson of Los Angeles and others, some of whom are regarded as presidential possibilities also. In addition there has been talk that the second place on the ticket might go to a woman in recognition of the great share taken by women in the prohibition movement. Among those mentioned were Miss Marie C. Brehm of Pittsburgh, Miss Mary Harris Armor, Macon, Ga., and Mrs. Ell S. Boole of New York.

With no less than a hundred regularly accredited women delegates and fully as many alternates, with special women's conferences daily and a suffrage division in the parade, women will be an important factor.

Mrs. Maude Mahler, president of the Cook County Woman's Prohibition club, will head the delegation of Chicago women.

Mrs. Laura Leonard, who will be an alternate in the Indiana delegation, was recently nominated as the Prohibition candidate for chief of the bureau of statistics, being the first woman ever nominated on the state ticket of any party in Indiana.

Other women in attendance who will take part in convention affairs will be Mrs. E. E. Lobeck, wife of State Senator E. E. Lobeck of Minnesota; Mrs. Eugene Chafin of Arizona and Mrs. John Bidwell of California, wives of former presidential candidates; Mrs. Aaron S. Watkins of Ohio, wife of the vice presidential candidate of 1908 and 1912; Mrs. Mary Sibbit of Kansas, who has the distinction of being the first woman nominated in any state in the Union by any political party for the office of secretary of state; Mrs. Frances B. Heald of Nebraska, Mrs. Nettie Hallenbeck of Washington and Mrs. Frances Beauchamp of Kentucky, the three women members of the national committee; Mrs. V. G. Hinshaw, wife of the national chairman, and Mrs. Eva Emerson Wold of Alexandria, Minn., the only woman elected as a delegate to a national political convention in a regular primary in a nonsuffrage state.

One million voters already have been enrolled in the "Five Million" club projected by the Prohibition party and allied organizations, it was reported at convention headquarters, and it is considered probable that thousands of the number enlisted who had practically deserted the dominant political parties would attend the convention.

The "Five Million" club movement, which was originated by Virgil G. Hinshaw of Chicago, formerly of Portland, Ore., national Prohibition chairman, is regarded by Prohibitionists and other "dry" proponents as the instrument which in less than four years will "kill John Barleycorn in the United States" and aid in the election of a Prohibition president in 1920.

ROADS AND THEIR USES.

Likewise Their Materials, and Also Some Sarcastic Comments.

A road is a device of long standing, which in modern times is used for autos to wear out. Roads are also used to raise dust and taxes and kill chickens, dogs and children.

Roads are very common, almost as common as accidents. We see them everywhere. It is quite difficult, indeed, to go any distance without running across one.

Roads are made of various materials. In the northern part of this country they are made of bluestone and macadam. In the southern part they are made of mud. Of the two kinds of material the mud is likely to be more durable, which, as the Scripture so beautifully expresses it, "sticketh to one like a brother."

Roads are not always friendly with each other, and although they can be seen constantly mingling together, they are likely to be cross. When a road enters a city it becomes puffed up with importance and is then known as a street, a boulevard or an avenue.

Life in cities, however, in spite of the society, is not always agreeable to roads, which are then likely to be afflicted with various diseases, among which we may mention gaspipeitis, telegraphitis and graftonomy.—Life.

Raking 'Em Over

MANAGERS ON THEIR HONOR.

In placing the managers of the six City League teams on their honor regarding the paying of baseball players, the moguls did a wise thing. Had the heads of the league accused any one manager of paying a player, trouble would have started and it is most likely that the accusation would have been uncalled for. Personally, we do not believe that there are any league managers who are paying perfectly good coin to their players, for the simple reason that the players, around whom the suspicion centered, are no more valuable than the home boys whom one would never think of paying. Another reason why we believe that the managers of the league teams are NOT paying their stellar talent is this: There is no manager in the City League who is the proud possessor of a fortune. And there is no team in the league that clears a "fair amount of money on any game." Therefore, to pay these players, who, by the way, would demand something worth while if they thought they could get anything at all, would result in bankruptcy for somebody. As far as we can observe, none of the managers is bankrupt. Placing a man on his honor will not always "work," but we firmly believe it will in this case, because we never did see where there was cause for action.

ROYALS TO CHALLENGE.

Pete Simmons base announced that he will challenge the winner of the City League title to a series of games for the championship of the city. If Pete succeeds in getting the manager of the team that eventually carries off the league flag to arrange the series, we look forward to plenty of excitement. We believe that the Royals are entitled to a chance at the title inasmuch as they are all local fellows. But, if Mr. Simmons thinks for one moment that there is any league manager in this city who is willing to risk the honors won by his boys, by allowing them to compete against outsiders, masquerading under the name of "locals," he is far from correct in his deductions. There is not a manager in this city who would balk at leading his boys against the Royals as they are at present. The Royals are good and would stand a fine chance of taking the title, but it is only right to demand that they win the honor through the efforts of purely local talent. This is just what Manager Pete Simmons, of the Royals, has promised to do. And we feel sure that Peter will hold to his word.

TO BREAK LOSING STREAK.

The Tabs have been going along in a creditable manner during the week, but have fallen down on their Sunday assignments. If the Teetotalers really care to be classed as baseball artists they will have to do better work on Sundays than they have been doing in the past. The Tabs are good fellows and always show the right spirit of sportsmanship. But they should not fail to realize that when they are the only Sunday representatives we have, they simply MUST give us the goods. We appreciate their good work in the City League, but we want to see more of that kind of endeavor exhibited on Sundays.

VALUE OF PRESS AGENT.

Would that every organization in this city had a press agent. Alas, they have not. A press agent can boost the organization he represents almost at will and, still, get well received no matter where he goes. There is the prevalent opinion that if one appears to be forward about discussing matters for the press, he will be ostracized by that profession. That's all wrong. There is one young man who is very attentive to his duties as press agent. He represents the Tabs and was officially appointed by that organization to look out for its welfare. He has supplied us with plenty of news relative to the past and future of the society, its social life and athletic activities. The result has been that the Tabs have received more press notices than any other organization. And it is possible for each organization to get just as much notoriety. Just send out the press agent and we'll do the rest.

MIKE DOOLAN STILL THERE.

Mike Doolan seems to be able to stick in the big show. Yesterday he made his appearance in a Giant garb. He had played a couple of innings on Saturday. Fletcher is out of the game with a slight injury and Doolan was hopping around the midsection, grabbing off the hot ones as of yore. Mike is not a very big strength at the bat, but his fielding is all that one could ask. He jumped the Phils to get into the Federal League, and broke up the Phil infield. Then he was traded to the Chicago club of the Federal circuit when Joe Tinker needed someone stronger than Jimmy Smith to win a pennant. This year Mike did not get going very well with the Cubs, and he was released, along with Steve Yerkes. Steve went South, but Mike stuck around and hooked on with the Giants. He is not drawing near as big a salary with New York as he did with the Federals, but his stipend is enough to make him turn down minor offers. Fletcher may be out for several days and Mike will hold the berth. Jeff Tesreau is improving and will be able to get to work soon. Tesreau's loss at this time has been a serious blow to New York.

CLEVELAND OUT TO WIN.

President Dunn has placed his O. K. on the plan of Lee Fohl, of the Cleveland Americans, to turn loose the scouts and begin scouring the bushes at once. Lee wants a small army to try out this fall and believes now is the best time to grab up the promising kids. Especially is he looking for pitchers of the left-handed variety. Cleveland is right in the midst of the pennant fight for the Johnsonian glory and there is no chance to work any experiment stuff now, but if they get a good lead than Lee will try some rookies, and if misfortunes should force them out of the running this fall Fohl wants to get an early line of what he can expect for next season. With Dunn showing real faith in Fohl and Bob McRoy doing his little bit to boost the club, there is a lot of baseball brains and sound judgment being used to manipulate the Indian tribe just now. Not like the old days, when it was remarkable if Cleveland finished above eighth place.

FRANK HAND APPOINTED MANAGER OF WASINGTON IN "STEEL" LEAGUE

Local Catcher Succeeds Billy Pfau, Who Was Fired—Will Be Given Fair Chance to Make Good—Tommy Mullin Retained by Hand.

Having released William H. Pfau as manager of the Washington team of the Penn-Jersey League, the association decided to accept the terms of Frank Hand, of this city, who will place a team on the field to represent Washington for the rest of the season.

Besides the local catcher, four of the regulars will be retained. The four are "Red" Grimes, formerly a Pet and now a Pacer; Tommy Mullin, the North avenue lad; Twing and Vic Shankey. In addition Hand will have the services of Wolfe, McDickens and Streaser. He will also have a first-class twirler in the box and it is not unlikely that the "first-class" twirler" will be none other than Cliff Randolph, another local lad.

The release of Pfau did not come as a surprise. Billy has not had nine men on the field for the past two games. It was necessary for him to perform in one game himself in order that a full squad might be on the field. It is probable that Pfau will continue his holdings in the Perth Amboy team and that the local fellows will continue to perform on Sundays in that city.

So far as is known, this is Frank Hand's first effort as a manager and it is hoped that he will make a success of the job. He is a brainy baseball player and possessed of a lot of good sense. He will be given a fair chance to put a winning team on the field. If he fails in his attempt to do so, the backers of the Washington team intend hiring one of the fastest semi-professional nines in the State to represent that town in the league race. But it is not thought that Hand will fall down on the undertaking.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

On our way home to lunch yesterday, we encountered the Lenox A. C. baseball bunch returning from Parker Field. The boys looked fine in their new suits of white and reminded us of a large army of ambitious "white wings."

Discussing tennis makes us feel like playing it. At St. Mary's there is a court that is always in action. There are a good many racquet wielders who play there and it is expected that the fellows will get together and start a tournament in the near future.

Art O'Leary is playing with St. Joseph's team, is the announcement. Art is a fast man and while at High School was one of the most valuable members of the Red and Blue. Art is a steady second baseman and can hit. When he left P. H. S. the infield of the Red and Blue team of that year had to undergo a decided change, from which it seems to have never fully recovered.

We know that Marty McDonough is quite an outfielder and an infielder, for that matter. But we did not know that he was a pitcher. And we do not believe that he knew it himself until he tried his hand at the game. His first efforts along hurling lines have been successes and it is highly probable that the battery of McDonough and McDonough will earn plenty of praise before the season is over.

Tommy Kyle is one of our baseball friends. Tommy has two illustrious "diamond" brothers in Art and Jim, both of whom can still play the national game in a creditable manner. If we remember correctly, Eddie Kyle, an older brother, was one of the best catchers around these parts a few years ago. But to get back to Tommy, let us consider his all around ability. He can catch, play the outfield and infield and can also pitch. To be able to do all these things is to be accomplished, say we.

Willie Coogan is an enterprising little fellow. Willie runs a ball team that is known as the Nationals. Willie led this team against the Orange Park team the other day and was able to come home with a 12 to 7 victory. Bill McCann is Willie's right-hand man.

Would that we were the press agent for the Pittsburgh Nationals. We certainly would hand one hard wallop to the sport writers on the Pittsburgh papers. The scribes in that city do nothing but make fun of the home team. They refer to it as being "sometimes a ball team." Now, just supposing we started a little campaign like that and referred to one or two of the City League teams in about the same vein. We fear that we would wake up some day in the hospital.

Pugilistic engagements on baseball diamonds is going to stop in this vicinity. At least, that is the contention of the City League moguls, who discussed the question at the last league meeting. At that time the secretary was instructed to write each one of the "pugilists" a letter, remonstrating with each for unseemly conduct at recent games. We can picture one energetic infielder reading his letter.

If you think that you have done something in the athletic line that is worthy of commendation, do not hesitate to inform us of the fact, in order that you may get full recognition in these columns. ROYAL GIANTS TO PLAY AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

Colored Players Will Journey to Suburbs to Meet Hamilton's Clouters.

The Royal Giants have arranged to play in South Plainfield on Sunday afternoon. The colored lads go to the village with a "rep" that they must uphold. The Southerners have heard that the Royals are heavy clouters and have signed up Joe Morley, the former manager and pitcher, to pitch on Sunday.

The Royals will present Butler on the mound with Condict behind the plate. Others in the line-up will be Kline, Malden and Coleman, all outfielders. The usual infield talent will be retained. The suburban team counts on having Morley on the firing line, with Henny Anderson "in the trenches." The other Anderson star will patrol first base, while "Vins" Mullin will be at second. Garrido, the Cuban star, who was until recently a member of the Pans, will be seen at third. "Red" Houston has signed to play at short, with a competent outfield, consisting of Billy Ryan in centre, Bob Hamilton in left and Young Riley in right, to back him up.

So far as is known the Royals are still looking for a game for Saturday. They will meet all comers no matter who they are. Pete Simmons' players delight in meeting the best there is.

MARTY O'LOUGHLIN IN GARDEN CITY EVENT

Local "Pro" Paired With Macdonald Smith, "Pro" of Greenwich Club.

Each with a card of 71, three pairs finished in a tie yesterday at Garden City in the amateur-professional best ball competition which annually gives a send off to open the championship tournament of the Metropolitan Golf Association. Early in the afternoon Walter J. Travis, the Garden City amateur, and "Jack" Hutchinson, professional at the Allegheny Club of Pittsburgh, the player who was runner up to Charles Evans, Jr., in the national open championship, brought in their card, which showed that they had reached the turn in 35 and came home in 36, good enough, it was thought, to lead the field, but in the later afternoon two more pairs blazed forth in all their glory, and the best that the Travis-Hutchinson combination had coming to them was a play-off at some future time.

The players who tied with the Garden City-Pittsburgh team were H. C. Berner, of Nassau, with "Dave" Robertson, a "pro" from out the Pittsburgh direction, and Thomas Harmon, unattached, and "Willie" Macfarlane, instructor at the Hudson River Country Club.

Macdonald Smith, who is paired to meet Marty O'Loughlin, the local golfer, in the championship event this morning. Smith with Henry Topping returned a card of 36—36—72.

OWYAMAC AND BARON IN JUNIOR MATINEE

Three Days' Racing Events to Include Dr. H. E. Winter's Horses.

Secretary James M. Beldon of the Road Horse Association of New Jersey announced today 275 entries had been received by the Junior League of Ameateur Driving Clubs meeting which is to be shown next week. It will be a three-day affair and begin Thursday, July 20. There is a possibility because of the record-breaking entry list that racing will have to begin at 10 o'clock in the morning on each of the three days.

The present outlook is there will be forty classes of racing and this number may go to forty-five. Should all the horses entered start, this will increase the length of the program, as the rules of the Junior League state not more than seven horses shall start at any one time in a race. Should there be eight starters in a race, it would be necessary to split the field into two divisions. The horses winning two heats in each division would race in a grand final.

A total of 155 outside horses have been entered, but some are to start in two races. The Road Horse Association of New Jersey has named fifty-five horses. The greatest number of entries were received from the Goshen Driving Club and the Metropolitan Driving Club of Boston. Some of the horses entered by Driving Club of Syracuse have arrived.

There will be a regular matinee Saturday. All of the classes have filled well. The special colt race has attracted five entries. The officials appointed for Saturday are: Judges, Anderson M. Guerin, J. Bruce Hay and Willis B. Atwater; timers, John O. Stearns, George T. James and Frank J. Conlan; clerk of course, James Lovatt, and starter, Mr. Beldon.

"Ourjamac," owned by Dr. H. E. Winter, of this city, is entered in the 2:15 pace to carts. "The Baron," also owned by Dr. Winter, is entered in the 2:20 trot and pace to carts. "Reuben Hall," a Montclair entry in this class, may be driven by Adam C. Blair, of this city.

POSTPONED GAME.

The scheduled game between the Hope Chapel and T. A. B. baseball teams will not take place on Saturday owing to the fact that the annual Saurer outing will be held on that date. The game has been called off with the consent of Manager Jim Scott, of the Tabs, the postponement having been requested by Britt Martin, leader of the Hope team.

This postponement will extend the Hope season quite a little, as the club already has a game to play off with the Netherwood team.

ORGAN GOES TO RALEIGH, N. C.

The organ in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, which has been replaced by a larger and better instrument, will be shipped to the St. Augustine Episcopal Colored School for Children in Raleigh, N. C. The organ will be packed in this city and shipped within the next few days. With the addition of the new instrument in the church, more space was needed in the choir and an extension on the present building is being built.

BOY SCOUT MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Boy Scouts of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church will be held at the church Thursday evening at seven o'clock. The scoutmaster, Theodore Gavitt, requests that all the boys that can come to be on hand and bring with them their handbooks.

TABS AT AVON OVAL.

The Tabs will contend with the Garwood A. C. on Avon Oval Sunday. The Garwood team comes with a "rep," which it hopes to be able to maintain.

INTEREST IN DIVING.

That greater interest than ever is being taken in amateur swimming and diving is shown by the schedule of national outdoor championships announced yesterday by Fred Rubien. Title races will be held in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles and Honolulu, and if present plans are successfully carried out America's greatest swimmers will be seen in each of the championships. Herbert Vollmer and Ted Cann, of the New York A. C., holders of the 200 and 500-yard national titles, respectively, will make the trip to Honolulu to compete in the 100-yard straightaway swim there on Labor Day. The championship schedule has been arranged so that they can compete in all of the other championship meets en route.

KEEP THEM CLEAN TO SAVE CHILDREN

Epidemic of Infantile Paralysis Puzzles New York Doctors.

MOVIES CLOSED TO YOUNG.

No One Under Sixteen Will Be Admitted — Sunday Schools Discontinued—Symptoms Confusing, and Scientists Have Been Unable to Isolate the Germ or Find Cure.

Anterior Poliomyelitis.—An infective contagious disease, probably of microbic origin, in which the anterior horns of gray matter of the spinal cord are attacked, producing destruction of their cells and causing motor paralysis; more common in children and hence often called infantile paralysis.—Webster's Dictionary.

This definition of infantile paralysis, written several years ago for laymen, is practically all that the medical world knows today regarding the dread disease now epidemic in New York. In 1907 an epidemic of infantile paralysis swept through the city, causing thousands of deaths.

With the epidemic growing daily, $41,000 has been set aside by the city for immediate expenditure in coping with the disease, and arrangements have been made that $39,000 more will be available if needed.

"Great and imminent peril to the public health exists," asserts the board of health. The money will be spent to employ fifty additional hospital doctors, fifteen additional field doctors and at least 120 additional nurses.

Three thousand theaters and moving picture houses are now closed to children under sixteen years of age; summer schools are being called off; military camps for boys in the vicinity of the Greater City are being placed under the strictest regulations; Sunday school picnics and excursions are being abandoned, Sunday schools discontinued for the summer in many parishes, and the begira of children from the city progressed appreciably.

Every effort has been put forward to trace the germ that causes the ailment and thus find a cure, such as was accomplished in typhoid and diphtheria. During the 1907 epidemic a committee composed of the most eminent medical men in the United States made a systematic study of infantile paralysis with the purpose of accurately catalouging the symptoms of the disease and of identifying the germ that caused it. With the germ properly identified the task of finding a serum to kill it and thus produce a cure for infantile paralysis would not be a difficult one.

Find Symptoms Confusing.

But the eminent medical men found themselves against a stone wall. The report which they had prepared on the 1907 epidemic shows that in some cases the symptoms were fever and chills; in others they were not; in some cases that the juvenile sufferer vomited and was delirious; in others that the sufferers showed entirely different symptoms.

The bacteriologists had no better success. Headed by Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller institute, they segregated the poliomyelitis germ, but were unable to identify it further than to find that it showed a similarity to the virus of human rabies. They injected germs of infantile paralysis into animals, and of those experimented upon monkeys were the only ones that contracted the disease. This was interesting, but not vitally instructive in so far as finding a cure for infantile paralysis was concerned.

The 1907 epidemic passed, the medical men drew up a long report, and infantile paralysis was practically forgotten until the present scourge began sweeping over New York. With the coming of the 1916 epidemic the medical profession found itself just where it was in 1907. It knew that a germ caused infantile paralysis, but it did not know how to deal with the germ except to eradicate it by the one method used in dealing with all deadly germs—absolute cleanliness.

Therefore cleanliness has been the slogan of the health department in the present epidemic. Dr. Charles F. Bolduan, head of the bureau of public health education of the health department, told how the fight against infantile paralysis is being waged.

"We have physicians, nurses and inspectors out seeking cases of the disease day and night," he said. "We also are conducting a campaign of publicity so that parents may know how to keep the deadly germ from their homes. The department of health has prepared a map on which a daily record of the disease is kept.

"Parents must not give way to fright or hysteria. If a child becomes sick a competent physician should be summoned at once. If a child is given plenty of fresh air and sunshine and kept amid clean surroundings there is no great danger of its contracting the disease."

Lynchings Show Decrease.

Records kept at the Tuskegee institute show that there were twenty-five lynchings in the United States during the first six months of this year compared with thirty-four for the same period a year ago. Two whites and twenty-three negroes were mob victims, and eight of them were killed in Georgia. Five were charged with attacks upon women.

AMATEUR WIRELESS MEN READY TO SERVE COUNTRY

Expert Declares Large Number of Operators Are Prepared.

Virtually every amateur wireless operator in the United States stands ready at a moment's notice to enter the army's radio service in Mexico.

F. B. Chambers of 2046 Arch street, Philadelphia, an expert on the subject of wireless telegraphy and a director of the Wireless Association of Pennsylvania, made this statement. Mr. Chambers has a radio station at his home.

"Secretary of War Baker recently sent us a circular letter asking us if we would, if the occasion demanded it, serve in the radio corps," Mr. Chambers said. "As you know, when we receive our licenses we virtually specify that in the event of a foreign invasion or at such time the government desires our services, we shall stand ready to assist."

Mr. Chambers said that the more expert of the wireless operators will have charge of a corps of operators. There will be many hundreds of amateur operators, he said, who are eligible to these posts.

"Amateurs do not necessarily mean inexperienced operators," Mr. Chambers continued. "As applied to wireless an amateur is a person who is in the work for the love of it—one who does not accept money for his services."

Sir Hiram Maxim, Mr. Chambers said, had done a great deal to give the amateur radio operators a chance. It was at his suggestion that the speed test held last Washington's birthday was made. In this test the entire country was covered by amateurs in something less than an hour and a half.

"In the event of a foreign invasion," Mr. Chambers said, "the whole country could be informed of the actions of hostile armies in an incredibly short space of time. The amateur wireless operators will be of invaluable service in the future."

Regarding Mexico, Mr. Chambers said that it was strange that General Funston cannot keep in closer touch with the movements of the punitive expedition. Either the ground is sandy or the field radio machines are inadequate. If the amateurs were called to the service, he said, there would be such an army of them that the messages would not fail to reach their destination.

PAY UP; THIRST DOWN.

More You Earn Less You Drink, Health Folk Say.

Take it right from the unimpeachable authority of the New York health department's monthly bulletin, a sure way to vanquish the demon rum is to get the boss to raise your pay and cut off a few hours of work. This may sound paradoxical, but so may some of the other pithy points emphasized by the bulletin's dissertation on the subject, as, for instance, the following:

"The expenditure for beer shows a steady decline as wages increase."

"It has also been discovered that the man who works the longest hours per day spends the most time in the saloon."

"There is no doubt that the moving picture show is up to the present date the most successful rival of the saloon."

"Married men spend more time in the saloon than do single men. Twice as many married men go to the saloon as do single men."

SHE SET A TRAP FOR HUBBY.

Suspicious Wife Cures Him of the Traditional Failing.

The wife of a Dorchester (Mass.) man who had the traditional failing—he forgot to mail letters—has cured him. The mail is delivered at their home before the breakfast hour, which is comparatively late. One morning she said to her husband:

"Did you have any mail this morning, dear?"

"Only a circular," he answered as he bit into a fine brown slice of toast.

"H'm," said wife. "By the way, did you mail the letters I gave you yester day?"

"Sure I did," was the righteously indignant reply.

"Well," answered wife, with an eloquent smile, "it's funny, then, you had no letters this morning, because one of those I gave you to mail was addressed to you—just as a sort of key."

ANOTHER CROWD VISITS CARNIVAL

All the Attractions Are Well Patronized—Cycle Race Popular With Many.

Another record-breaking crowd attended the Knights of Columbus carnival on West Front street last night, and trolley cars and jitneys were kept busy bringing visitors throughout the entire evening. The ten big attractions were all well attended and the scores of prize booths were well patronized. The wrestling tent continues to be the favorite rendezvous for the male portion of the sightseers, although feminine sport enthusiasts also were seen to enter in large numbers. Last evening the Polish wrestler met his Waterloo in an Assyrian who stood his ground for five minutes, and as a result won the cash prize offered any local young man who will wrestle with him and not be thrown in five minutes.

The merry-go-'round, the Ferris wheel and the swings furnished much amusement to old and young and the refreshment booths did a rushing business, the intense heat benefiting them financially. In the motordrome lovers of the spectacular and the hair-raising variety of exhibitions were given a treat, the young men riding the motorcycles circling the top of the bowl at a mile a minute speed. During their exhibition a race ensues in which one motorcycle bears a feminine driver and a male passenger. The "Diving Venus" attracts hundreds by her feats and exhibitions are given by her both afternoon and evening. Krausse's Greater Shows will continue today, tomorrow and Saturday afternoon and night.

HOUSE TO HOUSE CANVAS.

The inspectors of the Dunellen Board of Health are today making a house to house canvas of Dunellen to ascertain the sanitary conditions on account of the infantile paralysis epidemic. A record of all out-of-town visitors will be kept and homes sheltering new arrivals will be quarantined for one week.

REPORT NINE DEAD IN BIG EXPLOSION NEAR HASKELL

New York, July 13.—A report has been received here that a nitro glycerine mixing house at the plant of the DuPont Powder Co., at Haskell, N. J., exploded shortly before noon today killing nine persons and injuring thirty others. Many buildings were destroyed, it is said.

TO DEFER LAST EPISODE.

Because of the order preventing children under sixteen years to enter local moving picture theatres during the infantile paralysis epidemic, Proctor's Theatre has announced the final episode of the "Iron Claw," which was shown last night will be again shown in the West Front street theatre as soon as the children will be permitted to patronize amusement places again.

EXPECT BREAK IN HEAT WAVE SOON

21 Years Ago Today City Was Visited by Thunderstorm of 40 Minutes' Duration.

Partly cloudy tonight and Friday, not so warm, winds becoming north and northeast. This is today's weather prediction furnished by John Neagle, of the local weather bureau. He reports yesterday's highest temperature 92 degrees and the lowest today 73 degrees. There does not seem to be any indication that yesterday's record for heat will be broken today. While there appears to be a little more breeze today with a little less humidity, the temperature is far from being what one would call "real comfortable." During the early part of last night a heavy bank of clouds appeared in the West and it looked as though relief from the heat wave was about due. The wind carried the shower elsewhere, but while it lasted, Plainfielders enjoyed the exhilarating breeze and made sleeping a little more comfortable.

It may be interesting to some Plainfielders to know that 21 years ago today Plainfield was visited by a thunderstorm of forty minutes' duration, during which hail stones, many as large as hen's eggs, fell in various parts of the city. It was one of the most severe storms in the history of the city, and was followed by a sudden drop in temperature. Considerable damage resulted in Plainfield and nearby places.

—Until you have canvassed the readers of this newspaper on the matter, do not decide whether or not this may be a "poor time to sell" that property.

AUTHOR OF "ONCE TO EVERY MAN"

Copyright, 1915, by THE H. K. FLY COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.—Stephen O'Mara, a homeless and friendless boy, starting from the wilderness to see the city, is welcomed to the home of Caleb Hunter and his sister Sarah. Stephen meets Barbara Allison, young and rich, and Caleb gives him a home. Barbara ridicules Stephen, who runs away, declaring that he'll come back when worthy of her. Caleb learns that Stephen was well born. Ten years later Stephen returns, still loving Barbara, and learns she is to wed Archibald Wickersham. She tells Stephen his love is hopeless.

Her father and Wickersham plan to block the railroad's completion and discredit O'Mara, who has charge of its construction. Harrigan, a malcontent, is driven away by O'Mara and threatens revenge. Garry Deveraux, an inebriate, whom Stephen reforms, learns through Stephen that Miriam Burrell, Barbara's closest friend, is in love with him. Stephen sets himself to win Barbara from Wickersham. Wickersham and Steve clash at a new railroad bridge, built by the latter, whose right of way Wickersham disputes.

CHAPTER XIX.

It Happens In Books.

It is said that men remember many things when death is imminent, and for days and days something had been dying hard in Stephen O'Mara's breast. His step was slow that afternoon when he drew apart to take up his position alone upon a bit of higher ground, his shoulders heavy and drooping, yet his brain was feverishly active.

They came slowly at first—Wickersham's logs thudding heavily, one by one, into the underpinnings of the bridge, sliding free or lodging cross current, as the case might be, then in a thicker and thicker tide that ground and up ended and settled with the weight of the coffee colored flood behind it. In the beginning the handful of men who had put those timbers into place set themselves doggedly to save their completed structure until the man who had worked with them shoulder to shoulder through the night called them with a nod back to the bank. Obediently then they collected in a small knot behind him, murmurous, guturally grumbling.

The coming of Wickersham's men was not a thing of degrees. They poured into view through the brush fringe at the north edge of the marsh and halted, but only for an instant.

"Who is your friend at the time when you need a friend? Harrigan, that's me!"

"Harrigan, that's me!" And there came a lull in the valley at Thirty Mile, broken only by heavy breathing and the crunch of logs jamming beneath the bridge and the ugly swirl of backed up water.

And then Harrigan stood forth. Long arms dangling, palms back, almost to his knees, that red headed one minced forward on the balls of his feet. Harrigan was redeeming a promise many weeks overdue. It was spring, and Harrigan had come back!

"I'm here," he spoke to that bowed head, "if you are arther carin' to welcome me!"

"I've been expecting you, Harrigan." Again that startling mildness.

There is little wonder that it deceived the riverman. Listening, watching O'Mara's slack form, even Fat Joe's face turned, even Archie Wickersham's dared flash in triumph. And Harrigan's went savagely exultant.

"You talked out loud to me once," he taunted. "Is it so difficult you find it now to speak up so I can hear?"

"Would you promise to listen to argument, Harrigan?"

"You have begun many things in this country," the obscene tirade ended. "You came out of these woods with rags on your back and started at bein' a gentleman when we were only bhoys. You've made a gr-reat success av it with the ladies, we'll gr-rant you that. But you should have stuck to your soft and lily white pastime, for when you aimed to turn this river into a gentleman's proposition you started something too big for you to finish. I'm taking it off your hands now. Can't you even talk back like a man?"

"Maybe you are right, Harrigan," Steve said. "You may be—I do not know. I have started big things and left them unfinished. But you are wrong for the rest of it, Harrigan, for I am going—to—finish—you!"

Like a blast of wrath O'Mara lifted and struck him. Harrigan's hands had not left his hips before he met the ground, and he was back on his feet like a bounding ball, only to go down again before the smashing impact of those blows. Caution he tried to use in rising, and they searched out his face, his chin, and drove him hither and yon. Open fighting was not the river style of fighting, and he closed this time and wrapped his gorilla arms about this fury who fought with lightning strokes to keep him off. His greater weight o'erbore them both. He broke away, and his hobnailed boots lashing out bit the flesh of O'Mara's temple—they tore the turf where his face had been.

There was madness in Harrigan's hideous roarings of hate, madness in his blind rushes, and his bull strength availed at first. He weathered destruction and managed to close again. This time the lighter man was ready for the scuff of those armed boots. He twisted and covered his face with his shoulder, and only his shirt ripped open to let blood stream from the rent. On their feet they rocked—to their knees! Faces grinding into the earth, they strained and broke away. And always Harrigan came back and found him blindly. Once his hairy hands searched O'Mara's face, and O'Mara's forehead went wet with the agony of fingers tearing at his eyesockets. Dropping, he escaped that gouging grip. Coming up, he caught Harrigan's chin and turned him over backward.

Harrigan squandered his strength in drunken rushes, his breath in screams of hate. And now Steve was laughing aloud. He knew that she was watching, knew what loathing was in her eyes. And he—he was a riverman! Sobbing for air, dripping crimson from forehead and shoulder, he set himself and swung from the waist. Like a pole axed ox Harrigan stopped as he was lurching in. His mouth sagged; his eyes flew wide in a fixed and stupid stare. Then his legs folded under him and he swayed limply down. But that blast of wrath would not let him lie! It raised him and beat him down again; raised him and beat him down. By his throat Steve swung him up—by throat and buckled belt. High over his head he swung that bulk and lashed forward from his heels. And Harrigan went back to his panting followers. Twisting and spinning, his body swept Shayne and Fallon to the ground.

Allison had not stirred, nor putty faced Wickersham, nor the girl who stood with hands at breasts. And now toward them Stephen O'Mara wheeled. His legs would fail him, and he steadied them. Blood blinded him, and he wiped it away. Swaying giddily, he managed somehow a smile.

"Wickersham, I have met the man whom you hired to fight for you," he called clearly, "and he has earned his wage! Are you man enough to step forward now and fight for yourself?"

Wickersham clucked drily in his throat and lifted an elbow to shield his face. Shrinking back behind the first shelter that chance afforded him, he put the girl between him and his fear. And then weakness seized upon that sick and swaying man, but he spoke to her to the unspeakable horror in her eyes.

"Barbara," he called thickly, "Barbara!"

He groped toward her, and she cried out and drew back from such hands as those. Then a black wall rose before him and shut her from his sight. Fat Joe caught him as he fell.

Like huddled sheep O'Mara's men and Wickersham's watched Joe bear him up the hill. Shayne and Fallon were bending over Harrigan; by the others he lay ignored. It was a mob without a leader until, as is the way in all crises, a new leader arose. Big Louie, stolid face no longer stolid, strode between those two factions and achieved the unknown heights for which his eyes had always hungered.

"I work for no man but is a man!" he boomed. "That bridge—she still is hold!"

Steve had bidden Hardwick Elliott watch these men if their big moment ever came. And Elliott and Allison watched now. They were sheep no longer nor malcontents nor misled tools of cunning. Like wolves they followed that nameless man who was out upon the jam. Wickersham's men were back on the river, but that bridge would continue to hold. And while they worked, while Elliott and her father watched spellbound, blindly Barbara Allison turned, with no thought of what she was doing, and walked blindly into the brush.

The river was running clear by dusk when they raised the first hue and cry for her. It was dark when a runner bore the news to the cabin on the hillside that she was missing. And when men had been beating the woods for her fortytwo hours as best they could in the dark and no word came that she was found Fat Joe no longer dazed let go his grip. [illegible] he body he had cleansed and bandaged. At daybreak Joe waked him and told him Barbara was lost. They tried to argue with him, for his knees were still unsteady. Even Allison, whose jovial body seemed to have shrunk during his hours of waiting, tried to convince him that the men now looking for her would find her soon or had already found her perhaps. But he brushed them away while he was dressing. He threw off the hands that tried to detain him. And it was Steve who found her, as he had known it would be, just before a second night of dread was closing in upon her.

In circles of ever increasing radius he traveled at a fox trot, which thoughts of Fallon and Shayne and Harrigan would not let him abandon. But he had run her down when he caught sight of her, for she fled like a wild thing before him. Floundering in a cedar swamp, soaked to the knees, little blue furred suit heavy with black muck, he came up with her. She was kneeling, shaking with terror, face hidden by her loosened hair, when he bent over her and raised her to her feet.

"Please," she whimpered, "oh, please"—

Yet when he spoke her name her head leaped back, and she recognized him instantly.

"I tried to wait," she chattered with all the voice she had left. "I tried to sit still until some one came for me, but I thought I knew the way. I tried not to listen to the noises. I remembered about the stars, and I knew I shouldn't run. But I thought you were—I thought you were"— Remembered terror choked her. Consciousness slipped away.

By the same trail which once had led him to the "city" of Morrison he carried her now to that cabin which stood on the balsam knoll in the crook of the west branch. Nor was it far, for she had traveled straight, though in the wrong direction. But it was long after dark when the river gleamed ahead of him through the trees, jet and glassy in the deep pools, streaked with blurred star reflections in the riffles. A grown woman is a grown man's burden, even though she seem very small to him, and Steve had to travel slowly. His head was spinning from fatigue and the throb of the jagged tear above his temple when the log building, streaked white with clay chinking, loomed up ahead, and yet involuntarily he stopped there a moment with his burden.

He had pictured many times a night when he should bring her there, with both of them watching the moon in the rapids and listening to the waves lipping the banks. This was not that night. That night would never be. But the rebellion and bitterness were gone from his heart. After he had removed her wet shoes and stockings and brush whipped suit and sheer black blouse and she slept the sleep of exhaustion into which she had slipped from unconsciousness without even opening her eyes he built a fire and sat before it until morning came. And when it dawned and she waked dazedly while he was preparing breakfast he had finished reconstructing many things.

Her eyes went from wall to wall, frightened still and questioning at first, so he merely nodded and went outside and left her to remember alone. Returning with wood on his arm, he found recollection of much in her gaze. She was looking at the thin heeled, buttoned boots before the fireplace, the stockings and furred garments cleaned of mud and dried on the backs of chairs. A cloud of color stole up from the blanket edge at her throat to the line of her hair.

"You were wet," he explained simply, "and you were too spent to help yourself. I could not let you sleep in them."

"I understand," her answer faltered a little. "I was just thinking. I knew such things happened, but I thought it [illegible] only in books."

Drowsily she watched him bending over frying pan and coffeepot, content herself to lie and rest. But after a time, with fuller awakening, the bandage about his head claimed her attention. To her it seemed impossible that this smoothly shaven man in clean blue shirt could be the same one who had emerged from a struggle still sickeningly brutish to her. Involuntarily she shuddered a little without knowing that he watched.

"I am going to the spring for fresh water," he told her then. "There will be time for you to dress, and breakfast will be ready when I come back."

Submissive before his tone she replied that she was hungry; that she would be ready too. She had donned blouse and skirt and stockings and shoes and finished braiding her hair when he re-entered. He showed her a tin basin outside filled with icy water for her face and hands. And then they sat down in silence to breakfast.

"I told you that you would find out some day," Barbara murmured finally. "I warned you you would wake suddenly and see how shallow I am."

Until she had finished eating he would not talk. But she had finished now. He faced her with an abruptness that startled her.

"Waking has been no sudden thing with me. I finished with dreams a long time back, but you are what you have been always in my thoughts. It's conditions I've waked to, not you!"

With unwitting gruffness he had sometimes spoken to her, but never with constrained vehemence such as that.

"Why should I find fault in anything you have done or failed to do?" he demanded of both her and himself. "Why should you be apologetic or regretful? Such a thing as I had to do two days ago has held no place in your world and never could, but I can't find it in myself to be apologetic, either, because it is a part of mine. I meant to kill him—wanted to kill him—because I was certain of your scorn! That was vindictive; that was foolish for a man. But as for the rest of it—I know I may have it all to do over again any day. It was a vulgar brawl to you; to me"—

"Not just a brawl," she contradicted quickly, anxious to be understood. "Just—oh, so needlessly brutal. At first it left me only dazed and nauseated, but after I had time to think I made myself see your side of it. You must crush insubordination. And still it seems as though there might have been a less horrible way."

"He had balked my work," he told her sternly. "He has fired upon me from cover when he dared not come out into the open. He has been taking money for his work from a man who was bent on beating me at any cost. Could I ask him pleasantly not to spoil my bridge? Is that your idea of a man's way? This is my work, and while I continue to it men who oppose me with their brains I will fight with my brains. But men who force me to meet them with fists I must beat with like weapons. There is no alternative. I have no choice unless I quit. And that is the reason I know that this is the end for you and me! My ways would have had to be your ways, and we have learned at last what I have feared for long and long. They lie too far apart for them ever to meet.

"I promised to teach you to love me, and I've failed. And knowing that my failure is not all my own fault is not going to make it any easier for me. You've taught me loneliness I'm never going to forget as long as I live, but I don't love you any the less for that. I dreamed big dreams for both of us." His voice was dreary of a sudden. "I promised I'd make those dreams come true, because I thought my life could be your life. I've not done so. That thing could never be. I've talked bigger than I could practice, and that is not going to help my self confidence any, but as it stands now I can earn it back. I couldn't have done that if I had married you and waked some day to find you shrinking from me. It would have killed it and my self respect, too, to have learned too late that you believed still in your own greater fineness."

"I tell you it is not that!" she cried out. "Can't I make you understand"—

"You have made me understand till I am sure," he stated. "I am no longer vexing myself with trivial things. You have been uncertain. I have seen that. You are certain now. And the fundamental thing remains unchanged. In me there is that man who once manhandled Harrigan—and you didn't want me to touch you! You don't have to tell me any more that you can't love me. When you drew away from me, that was enough."

She sat and watched him put the room in order, and that hurt her more than anything else, for he would not let her help. He made her change her high heeled boots for moccasins, which he brought and laced upon her feet.

HE KNEW THAT SHE WAS WATCHING, KNEW WHAT LOATHING WAS IN HER EYES.

But the remainder of the day it was the old Steve who helped her over the bad bits of going and talked disconnectedly of many things meanwhile. And yet no longer the old Steve, who had been so entirely her own. Hers was the sad face when they entered the clearing at Thirty Mile, and a hoarse shout saluted her return. In her father's embrace she clung and wondered that she did not cry. And two pages had turned for her that day, for she sent Wickersham back his ring the same night the private car rolled down to Morrison.

Harrigan was with Archibald Wickersham when the package, unaccompanied by explanation, reached the latter in his hotel room in town. Harrigan was waiting for a reply to a question which he had just asked when Wickersham opened the box and sat fingering for awhile the thin hoop of gold with its single brilliant stone. Once Fat Joe had spoken prophetically. This was the hour he had foreseen. And when Wickersham raised his head the riverman's battered face lighted shockingly with triumph.

"Go out and get him," said Wickersham. "And see that you get him—for good."

CHAPTER XX.

For two days and two nights the girl fought on alone against the outcry of her heart until she recognized the futility of it, and then she ordered Ragtime to be saddled. And Miriam Burrell, sighting Barbara's face as the latter wheeled toward the hills, flew from her window to scratch off a note to Garry—her third note that day, for she seemed always omitting most important things which needed saying.

"It's come," she scrawled in delighted haste. * * * When are we going to be married?"

Once before Barbara had ridden that road with him alone in her thoughts. Now she realized that she had loved him then as she must have loved him always and marveled at such blindness. Once, on that other day, she had told herself that all ignoble and unworthy comparisons of herself and him were done and gone. Now she did not need such reassurance, when her lips were tremulous.

She grew pensive at times. At times in an abandon of gayety she chattered back at a quarrelsome squirrel in the thicket. She could rest later, and if she could not go to him immediately at least every step the horse took was bringing them for a little while closer together. And her tomorrow was only one twilight and one dawn away. Her tomorrow would be his as utterly as was she herself.

Dusk came, and regretfully she told herself that she must be turning back home. Two rifle shots, sharp and startlingly close, whipped through the quiet of that lazy afternoon, but they meant nothing to her. She had reached the height of land, where he had found her the day her roan mare strayed off while she sat mooning on a log. She was holding out both arms toward the spot where the valley of Thirty Mile must lie when a team of heavy horses broke around a turn in the road, slowed to a trot at the sight of her and came to an abrupt standstill. When the girl rode nearer to them, merely surprised and curious at first, they snorted and showed the whites of their eyes and shied back nervously.

Something chill clutched at Barbara's heart while she spoke peremptorily to Ragtime who was dancing in sympathetic panic. There was nothing to tell her, but she knew that these were Big Louie's horses. And Big Louie was a dreamy incompetent. He had left them for a moment, that was all, and they had become frightened and bolted. But Big Louie never neglected his team—they were not wet—they had not been running far. And their fright became less when she dismounted and approached them, soothing them with her voice until they let her touch their sleek sides without rearing away.

Dusk had come and gone, for it was growing dark. Uncertain, more and more unnerved as she stood and gazed at the forbidding, black shadowed ridges beyond her, the girl had to fight suddenly against an impulse to turn and race back to the lower country and Morrison and home. Even then the rifle shots meant nothing to her—and pride would not let her run. She remounted and rode on a rod or two and stopped to look back at the team which was watching her. She pressed on and rounded the curve. Ragtime reared and snorted there, and she barely stifled the cry which his strange behavior brought to her lips. Because of her senseless panic she punished him the more severely and sent him on. And then she saw what the horse had already seen.

A blue shirted figure lay half in the road, half in the undergrowth that fringed it, one arm crooked under him and his face prone in the dust. A bulkier mass was stretched wholly within the trail and she recognized him too. Big Louie's face was upturned, and the explanation of the two rifle reports and the driverless team was here, for Big Louie's hand still clutched the handle of a canvas pail. They had stopped to water the horses; they had been shot down from behind. And first of all, unable to move, while horror parched her lips, the girl remembered words which the limp one, half in the road and half in the underbrush, had spoken to her in a moment of sterness.

"He has fired upon me from cover," the man who loved her had said. "He has been taking money from a man who was bent on beating me at any price!"

"Blood sickens me!" she whimpered aloud. "Blood sickens me!" But she managed to turn him over upon his back. With brown head against his heart she listened—listened and would not believe that her tomorrow might come too late. And then she caught the slack pound of his pulse.

From there on she was less panic stricken. She gained control of faculties shocked for a time into uselessness. Method marked her acts—deliberation mechanical, but sure. She was horribly afraid of Big Louie, but she finally disentangled the handle of the pail from those loose fingers and ran to the brook which babbled near at hand. Returning, she drenched Steve's face with icy water. She lifted his head and propped it as comfortably as she might upon one thigh and opened his flannel shirt. The ball had passed through, for back and front the shirt became immediately wetter with fresh blood. Blood sickened her, but she whipped off the coat of her boyish riding habit and wrenched the sleeves from her linen blouse. They were desperately scant, yet they provided pads with which to check that dreadful oozing. And when they were in place she turned again to bathing his forehead.

A folded sheet of paper came to view when she tried once to ease his heavy body from the position which was numbing her leg, and she seized upon it fiercely. It was only a brief line, bidding him come to her, but it bore her name. With instant, bodiless clarity which had marked all her mental processes so far, its purport was hers. She had not written—the hand that had traced her signature had been unstrung for once. She understood, though such knowledge seemed of little moment now.

She kept the pads cold and wet. She went for fresh water and stumbled and fell more than once because of the treacherous footing in the deepening shadows. But she was no longer afraid of the dark. She had grown to fear Big Louie less, even though there was no help for Big Louie any more. It was the first time that Barbara had looked upon the face of a man who had died in violence. Big Louie's face was growing indistinct now, but she knew that he was smiling—knew that his eyes were dreamy and mild. Death, like life, had been a quite incomprehensible puzzle to that slow witted one who had no name. But he had smiled seldom in life. In death his smile was almost childish, almost sweet and questioning beyond all else.

Alone with him who still lived, the pallid girl sat and waited and wondered how long—or how soon—it would be. When she bade him wait until she could bring the team he nodded his comprehension. He was watching for her return. And he came to his feet with a readiness that made her heart leap with hope. But he fell twice before she lifted him, half with her hands, half with her voice, to the seat.

She crawled in beside him, and the next moment she had to struggle madly to prevent his returning to Big Louie.

"He will wait quiet until we come for him," she protested. "There isn't room for Big Louie—and he won't mind"—

Her logic made an impression upon him, for he smiled. There was no sequence in his acquiescence, however.

"Big Louie never could find his way alone," he mused, "and that is strange, too, for he was born in these hills. He was always getting lost"— And with that he must not desert Louie! She had even more trouble with him this time. "He will lose his head," he expostulated mildly—his old, unfailing attitude of gentleness toward her. "He will lose his head and waste his strength in running from things which do not exist."

"Big Louie will find his way this time." She was whimpering again in her helplessness. "He is—already home."

There she learned that her voice could control him when her arms availed not at all against even his dead weight. And so she talked as steadily as she was able while she drove. Once he lurched against her. When he pulled himself together he was so sanely apologetic of a sudden that she searched his face with hungry eyes. But he was talking now to himself.

"I must not touch her!" he stated firmly. And then, drearily: "I am sick. I have never been so sick—before."

With that he subsided, but his silence was far more dreadful than his wanderings had been, and as fast as she dared she pushed the heavy team on, with Ragtime following behind like a dog. He slipped back against her almost immediately, and this time he had not the strength with which to apologize nor lift himself erect. With his head heavy in the hollow of her arm, they came at length to the open pasture hills. They topped the rise and faced the loops on loops of highway that ran down to Morrison at the river edge. And so she brought him home. At the sight of his "city" she sobbed aloud, but he, sunken and slack, was conscious neither of distance covered nor change of country. He climbed down from the seat, however, in response to her urgings when the team halted before Caleb Hunter's white columned house. He turned and started stubbornly back the way they had come.

She ran after him and clung to his arm.

"You promised that you would come back to me," she cried up at him. "Oh, you cannot leave me now!"

That halted him momentarily.

"I must go back to my bridge," he explained, plainly nonplused. "But then I'll surely come back to you."

She pleaded with him—raged at him.

"I must go back to my bridge," he reiterated, gruffly now.

Her arms went around him in desperation, and then, with one swing he had swept her yards away, reeling before his blazing wrath.

"Take your fingers from my eyes, Harrigan," he gasped in sudden agony. "I am going to kill you now, and she is looking on!"

The girl was afraid of him. She dared not try to hold him. She screamed wildly for help and screamed again. And he had gone on and wavered and crashed over upon his face when Caleb Hunter and her father came running heavily across the lawn in answer to her shrieks.

Between them they lifted him and carried him into the house.

SECOND GERMAN DEFENSE LINE SHATTERED BY BRITISH FORCES AND FIERCE BATTLE CONTINUES

GERMAN REPORT CLAIMS THAT FRENCH ATTACKS SOUTH OF SOMME WERE REPULSED AND HEAVY ARTILLERY FIGHT IS ON NEAR VERDUN.

BATTLE STARTED 143 DAYS AGO NEAR CLIMAX

Only One Large Defense Works, the Shattered Fort Souville, Separates Germans From the City is the Report—British Official Report Says That More Ground Has Been Gained From Germans North of the River and Ammunition Taken.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

London, July 14.—At dawn today the British troops smashed through the second system of German defenses in the region north of Somme and captured a number of strongly defended localities. This opens a new phase of the British offensive and, according to reports received here today, the following were captured: Trones Wood, Longueval and Bazentin-le-Grand.

New battles are developing on the western and eastern front with the British driving ahead in their struggle north of the Somme River and the Russians sweeping forward on a front of one hundred miles along the Stokhod River, where Germans and Austrians are making desperate efforts to hold the outer defenses of the important railroad center of Kovel. On both fronts notable progress has been achieved during the last twenty-four hours.

The French reports from this region indicate that their troops are busy in the work of consolidating positions and preparing to make another attack. French reports indicate a comparative quiet along the whole front.

The heavy artillery action before Verdun continues today and the German Crown Prince, whose whole army is within two and one-half miles of Verdun, is believed to be contemplating another smash. The battle, which opened 143 days ago, is fast approaching a climax. Only one of the larger defense works separates the Germans from the city—the shattered Fort Souville.

The German approach to Verdun now lies downhill. The capture of Froid Terre has given them artillery command of the neighborhood and from this dominating position they are pouring down a tremendous fire into Souville and the two smaller forts to the southward, Belleville and St. Michel.

Although the battle on the Somme front is only in its preliminary stages, the British, violently bombarding the inside German defense lines and seizing strategic positions in preparation for the next big thrust, have advanced their lines from the town of Contalmaison for more than a quarter of a mile until they are planted firmly on the Longueval road, an important highway that was used by the Germans in their sytem of communications. To the north of Contalmaison German fortified positions around Pozieres are being assailed and their occupation by the British infantry is only a matter of a few hours, with the Germans trying to make counter attacks.

Berlin, July 14.—A hard struggle between the British and Germans is in progress on the Somme front, particularly in Mametz Forest and Trones

DEATH SUMMONS THEODORE O. OSBORNE

Former Plainfielder Passes Away in New York After Lingering Illness.

Theodore O. Osborne, an uncle of Mrs. Joseph W. Gavett, of this city, and a former well known resident of Plainfield, died yesterday at his home in the "Bancroft," 121st street, New York city, following a lingering illness. For many years Mr. Osborne resided at the corner of East Fifth street and Sycamore avenue, in the house which is now being removed to make room for the new Y. M. C. A. building. He left Plainfield about seven years ago to make his home in New York but continued his visits here frequently. During the past winter he went to Bermuda for the benefit of his health but on his return he continued to fail. He was about seventy-two years of age.

Beside Mrs. Gavett, Mr. Osborne is survived by two daughters, Miss Ella and Miss Alice Osborne. The former is at present living at the "Bancroft." Miss Alice Osborne left Copenhagen, Denmark, yesterday for America. She is a graduate nurse and had been stationed in the Syrian Protestant Hospital, at Beirut, Syria, when the war broke out, and had not been able to communicate with her relatives or sail for home until recently. She is unaware of her father's death as yet.

The funeral will be held in the chapel of the Church of the Messiah at Thirty-fourth street and Park avenue, New York, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the interment will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

MEMBERS FIRST FIELD HOSPITAL CORPS HAPPY

According to reports coming from Douglas, Arizona, the First Field Hospital Corps, Major Harold Corbusier, of this city, commanding, and which includes a number of local boys, is one of the happiest units in camp. The lack of action with the Mexicans has limited the work of the corps to practise, although a number of injuries sustained by the various soldiers during the camp routine has given them some actual first aid experience.

All the boys are in excellent health, acording to letters received in this city. Several promotions have been made since the arrival at camp, the one that caused the boys most pleasure being the appointing of Dr. Corbusier as ranking officer of the hospital units in camp.

TRIO OF BIRTHDAYS PLEASANTLY OBSERVED

Mr. and Mrs. John Bicknell and Daughter Celebrate Happy Events.

This week was one of birthday celebrations at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Bicknell, of South avenue. On Tuesday evening, the board of trustees, officers and auditing committee of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., met at the home of the couple with their wives and friends to assist in celebrating the forty-fourth anniversary of Mr. Bicknell's natal day. As Mrs. Bicknell's birthday is on July 12, the attendants stayed until after midnight and made the celebration a joint one. Members of the lodge presented Mr. Bicknell with a gift, as a token of the appreciation of the members. He has been the treasurer of the organization for the past four years. Mrs. Bicknell received a handsome bouquet of white carnations. The presentations were made by Clarence Rittenhouse, chancellor commander of the lodge, and Ephraim Compton, past chancellor, respectively.

Refreshments were served and vocal solos were rendered by Miss Adele Freeman. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Caleen, Mr. and Mrs. A. Nielson, Mr. and Mrs. Geore Keen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keen, Mr. and Mrs. E. Compton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frahley, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Douglass, Clarence Rittenhouse, Miss Thompson, James Fenner, Samuel Harper, and Miss Adele Freeman. Yesterday, Miss Geraldine E. Bicknell, a daughter, celebrated the sixteenth anniversary of her birthday with a small gathering of friends.

The service was in charge of the Rev. H. St. G. Burrill, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, in the borough. The flowers sent by relatives and friends of Mr. Hall were unusually many and beautiful. Interment took place in Fairview Cemetery, Westfield, members of the family acting as pallbearers.

ELECTRIC STORM RAGES OVER CITY

TROLLEYS ARE STALLED

Trees Are Uprooted in Nearby Sections—Telephone and Electric Light Service Interrupted—Heavy Damage in Country.

Considerable damage resulted from the severe electrical storm which passed over this city yesterday afternoon. Trolley cars were stalled, electric light and telephone service was interrupted to some extent and in sections near Plainfield many trees were uprooted. Among the nearby places which perhaps suffered the most was Rahway, where a number of streets were completely blocked by falling trees. This was also true in the vicinity of the Woodbrook Farms, where large trees were torn into shreds.

So far as is known the home of V. W. Nash, Jr., on Martine avenue, was the only one in this vicinity that was struck by lightning. A bolt hit the east corner of the dwelling, tearing a big hole in the roof, and then shot over to the northeast corner, making another large hole. One room on the second floor and another on the third floor were damaged to such an extent that they will have to be practically rebuilt. Mrs. Nash was on the second floor of the dwelling and was stunned when the lightning struck above where she stood. She was dazed for some time and as she attempted to descend the stairs everything appeared black before her eyes. Today she has about recovered from the shock, but still feels some effect from her experience.

Trolley traffic on the main line was delayed for at least a half-hour, due to a Fourth street car leaving the tracks at Watchung avenue and Fourth street. This occurred during the downpour of rain and seriously interfered with people reaching their homes. A trolley pole on the same line was struck by lightning.

The storm which had been gathering gradually through the early part of the day broke with considerable violence about three o'clock. There was almost constant flashes of lightning accompanied by heavy thunder, and there was an unusual fall of rain. The storm seemed to partially break the heat wave of the past few days and brought some relief, although there still continued to be a great amount of humidity. Today the mercury was considerably lower than yesterday, and there is some prospect of an improvement over the sizzling temperature which Plainfielders have experienced this week.

In the vicinity of Westfield the storm caused a "shut-off" of current to operate the trolleys and in consequence a number were stalled at that point for three-quarters of an hour. The storm was pretty general in this section, while in New York city four persons were killed and many stunned by lightning, a score of houses were set on fire, and train service on some of the roads was paralyzed.

OLDRING TO PLAY.

Harry Sparrow, secretary of the Yankees, announced yesterday that "Rube" Oldring, who retired from baseball July 1, but who consented to play for the Yankees the remainder of the season because of injuries to Fritz Maisel and Frank Gilhooley, will play with the Yankees tomorrow afternoon against Detroit. Oldring's arrival will cause the withdrawal of Roy Hartzell from the outfield.

EMERGENCY ORDER OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally are hereby required to make report to the Board ON THE ARRIVAL at their hotels, homes and houses of any guest, visitor or transient from out of town. The report may be made personally, or by telephone, (No. 646), but must be made on the arrival in Plainfield of such guest, visitor or transient; and must give name, age, and the locality from which the party came. The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health, for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

CREEK GIVES UP SHARK'S VICTIM

Little Lester Stillwell's Body Floats to Surface Terribly Mangled.

SEA WOLVES CORNERED

Dunn Boy Fighting Like a Spartan for His Life—Man Eaters May Be Killed This Afternoon—Many Big Sharks Believed to Be Off Shore.

(Special to the Daily Press)

Matawan, July 14.—Harry Van Clies, a Central Railroad engineer, this morning recovered the body of twelve-year-old Lester Stillwell, the boy who was mangled and killed by the monster sea wolf here Wednesday afternoon. The body was floating on the surface of the water with the left side of the abdomen ripped open and the flesh torn from the right breast. The face showed no wounds. It is believed that the shark grabbed the boy through the waist, allowing him no chance for escape.

When a Daily Press reporter inquired at St. Peter's Hospital, New Brunswick, this afternoon, concerning the condition of Joseph Dunn, ten years old, who was literally snatched from the jaws of the man-eater here by his companions Wednesday, he was informed that the youth had passed a comfortable night and that he will probably recover. Heroic efforts are being made to save his shattered leg and physicians are taking every precaution against infection.

Old-timers on the Jersey coast today stated that the monsters which attacked bathers in these waters are dog sharks, which are frequently seen in the wake of transatlantic liners, subsisting on refuse from the big steamships. They said the fish were hunger mad and forced in shore to get food because of the scarcity of the run of fish and the few ships because of the war.

Schools of sharks of the man-eating species are reported today in the waters adjacent to New York and along the Atlantic coast.

With the sea monster that killed Lester Stillwell and Stanley Fisher trapped in the upper reaches of Matawan Creek, and its capture momentarily expected, ten others were seen swirling in the muddy waters of the creek.

The ravenous fish were also reported at Coney Island, Sheepshead Bay, in Ambrose Channel and at a number of Long Island and new Jersey coast resorts.

Even up the Hudson River, opposite Tarrytown, a shark, believed to be the first to make an appearance in the river, was seen disporting itself about one hundred feet off shore.

Down at Matawan, where old residents and summer visitors were laughing at the stories of death from shark bite along the coast until a boy and man were killed in Matawan Creek Wednesday afternoon and another boy was badly injured, there has been so vast a change of attitude that now the town authorities are offering rewards for the capture of man-eaters.

The Matawan authorities today announced that the town will pay $100 for each shark killed. Four large nets were stretched across Matawan Creek, the nets being about 500 yards apart, and boats in which where Matawan citizens armed with poles, spears, firearms and sticks of dynamite patrolled the creek.

In Sheepshead Bay a shark attacked Thomas Richards, an assistant steward of the Hotel Beau Rivage, when Richards was swimming near a rowboat about one hundred feet off the hotel veranda.

Three reliable citizens, living in or near Matawan, reported that they had seen sharks at three different points in the creek. Persons standing on the White Bridge at Matawan were sure they saw a big shark distinctly in the deep pool under the bridge, which is almost a mile further inland than the spot in Matawan Creek where Lester Stillwell and the man who went to his assistance, Stanley Fisher, were killed by sharks.

Bathers at Sea Gate, on the western end of Coney Island, are sure that it was a shark which chased Miss Gertrude Hoffman inland when Mis Hoffman, who is an expert long distance swimmer, was out beyond the lifeguards. Miss Hoffman has no doubt it was a shark that made for her.

If any scoffers at shark stories still persist their doubts would have been satisfied had they seen the sloop R. C. Lundy come to the Sheepshead Bay inlet with a seven foot shark in tow which had just been captured by Captain Aton Lundy off Long Branch. At Riverhead, L. I., also, a ten foot shark, the largest ever caught in the memory of old timers of that section, was caught with hook and line and brought ashore by the captors, H. R. Gildersleeve and Leroy Reeves.

As a result of the invasion of the shore waters of the middle Atlantic, steel nets have been placed outside the bathing lines at Asbury Park, at Ocean Grove and other Jersey resorts. Motor boats are patrolling the shores at these points, the boatmen being armed with rifles and lances. Local newspapers of the Jersey resorts are offering rewards ranging from $5 up for the capture of sharks of any size, and advocating editorially that the same be done all along the coast.

By far the most earnest efforts among potential shark killers along the Jersey and Long Island coasts were being made by the squad of

ARMY OFFICERS DECLARE RECALL OF UNITED STATES TROOPS FROM MEXICO IS NOW UP TO PERSHING

GENERAL ISSUES SIGNIFICANT STATEMENT SAYING "IT IS NOW BELIEVED TROUBLE BETWEEN MEXICO AND U. S. HAS BEEN SETTLED.

VILLA PURCHASES ARMS FROM THIS COUNTRY

Smugglers Believed to Be Active Along the International Border—Bandit Leader Said to Have Ample Financial Backing and Influential Agents—Report Defeat of Carranza Forces by Villa South of Parral.

Washington, July 14.—Army officers today are convinced that American troops will be withdrawn from Mexico and that General Pershing will be called upon to shoulder the responsibility for it. The following report received by the War Department from the General furnishes grounds for this belief:

"Mexicans in this vicinity along railroad reported very friendly toward Americans last few days. Generally believed trouble between United States and Mexico settled. Rainy season on in earnest, heavy rains reported at various stations along lines during last few days. Shall report within day or two the effect of rains on roads and general prospects regarding road maintenance."

Those close to the army declare it is extraordinary that General Pershing should be allowed to say "it is generally believed that the trouble between the United States and Mexico has been settled." Officers claim the army is being made the catspaw of the State Department and under ordinary circumstances the statement such as Pershing has made would come only from the White House.

President Wilson is expected to announce a plan to the Cabinet today for the acceptance of one of Carranza's proposals for the settlement of the Mexican problem. This provides for a joint commission which shall suggest a settlement but it will have only advisory powers, so its conclusions will not be binding. Unless unforeseen complications develop, however, both the United States and Mexico will adhere to any plan that respects the sovereignty of the latter and gives adequate protection to the American frontier.

El Paso, Texas, July 1b.—General Jacinto Trevino issued orders last night to hold up a trainload of forage consigned over the Mexican Northwestern Railroad to private individuals in Casas Grande, Chihuahua, for the use of General Pershing's expepetionary command. Shipments over the Mexicans Railroad for American troops in Mexico, which had been forbidden during the recent crisis, were only renewed during the past week.

Rumors are current here that the Juarez garrison contemplates an early revolt against the authority of the de facto government, while others had it that a force of Mexicans hostile to Carranza had concentrated in the hills a few miles from the town and is attempting to create a feeling of unfest among the First Chief's followers.

El Paso, Tex., July 14.—According to reports received here today from reliable sources Villa is receiving large quantities of ammunition and supplies from the United States which may

BURGLARS ENTERED LAIDLAW RESIDENCE

Stole Wedding Silver From West Eighth Street Home Wednesday Night.

Thieves broke into the residence of Elliott Laidlaw, West Eighth street and Grant avenue some time Wednesday night while the family was asleep upstairs and carried off every piece of silverware they could lay their hands on. The intruders confined their looting to the first floor, and left by a rear window, the same way they entered.

Mr. Laidlaw reported his loss to the police and they are now working on the case. An itemized list of the articles taken, which were all wedding gifts, follows: Four butter knives, one dozen teaspoons, four orange spoons, four table spoons, four dessert spoons, four luncheon forks, four table forks, four salad forks, four coffee spoons, four boullion spoons, one large berry spoon, two gravy ladles, ne large meat fork and one butter knife. All the articles are of one design, and no value was placed on them by Mr. Laidlaw.

FINED $50 FOR PERMITTING GAMBLING AT CARNIVAL

Louis Tollin was fined $50 or forty days in the county jail when arraigned before City Judge William G. DeMeza in police court this morning, for conducting a game of chance and permitting gambling at the carnival. He paid the fine.

In imposing sentence the Judge said that he proposed to break up the practice of outsiders coming into the city and "fleecing people" and he intended the present case as a warning, because others would be as severely dealt with.

NO CHILDREN ALLOWED.

At a special meeting of the Board of Education held in the High School last night, the Board decided to bar the use of the swimming pool to children under sixteen years of age until further notice. The course was adopted in line with other precautionary measures being taken in the city to prevent any infection of infantile paralysis here.

ONE FOR PIRATES.

The sale of "Hook" Warner, third baseman for the Dayton Central League club, to Pittsburgh was announced in Dayton today. Warner will report to the Pirates September E. The sale price was said to be $4,000.

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN IS BEING PLANNED

Church Co-operative Ass'n Will Make Temperance Question Live Issue.

The Church Co-operative Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield, which is being formed for the purpose of taking an active part in the fall campaign so far as the local temperance question is concerned, will hold an important meeting at the Y. M. C. A., Tuesday night. At that time a permanent organization will be perfected, officers will be elected and plans for the campaign will be discussed.

This is the organization which proposes to interview prospective candidates for the Mayorality and council and learn whether they are in favor of liquor licenses or no licenses.

That the liquor question is to be made an issue this fall is well known and the church organization believes that it will be able to create such a strong sentiment that applications for liquor licenses will be denied when they come before The City Council for action next year.

There has been some talk to bring Rev. Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, the evangelist, to Plainfield some time during the campaign, in the hope of strengthening the cause of the "antis," but this plan has not been definitely decided upon as yet.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO COMPLY WITH HEALTH REGULATIONS

In compliance with the request of the Board of Health and in the interest of the public good a number of Sunday schools in the city and borough have decided to close their primary, junior and intermediate departments until all danger from infantile paralysis is past. This action applies only to children who are under 16 years of age. All other departments of the Sunday schools joining in this movement will be conducted every Sunday at the usual hour. The schools closing their children's departments are as follows:

Seventh Day Baptist, First Methodist, Trinity Reformed, Netherwood Reformed, Hope chapel, First Baptist, Watchung Avenue Presbyterian, Monroe Avenue Baptist, Temple Baptist, Park Avenue Baptist, Grace M. E., and Bethel chapel.

The schools of the Cresecnt Avenue Presbyterian, First Presbyterian, Holy Cross, Grace Episcopal and Congregational churches have been closed for the summer and will not be reopened until further notice is given.

FIND BODIES OF DROWNED VICTIMS AT LAKE HOPATCONG

Fourteen women and children enjoying a sight-seeing trip on the boat "Lady Berks," at Lake Hopatcong, were thrown into a panic Wednesday afternoon, when Captain Barton noticed a strange object in the water, 150 feet of the Halsey Island shore. An investigation proved the object to be the body of Miss Irene Rhode, Brooklyn. The young woman was 20 years old, of 442 Tenth street, drowned Sunday with her fiancee, William Meyer, also of Brooklyn. The couple, with a sister of the dead girl and Harry Schumacher, were in a canoe on the lake and tried to shift seats, with the result that the boat capsized. The body of the young woman was taken to Dover and later sent to the home of her parents in Brooklyn.

The body of Mr. Meyer was recovered late Wednesday evening between Halsey Island and the mainland, off Camp Six, by a passing fisherman. His body was also sent to his home in Brooklyn.

RECALL UP TO PERSHING

eventually be used against our soldiers. It is believed that the bandit leader has obtained first class financial backing in some mysterious manner and that purchasers of large quantities of ammunition are smuggling them over the border.

Private individuals here are receiving carloads of ammunition and one carload of small arms mysteriously disappeared yesterday. Villistas followers joyfully proclaim that it is now on its way to Parral. Mexican smugglers never were so much in evidence as they are now and Villa agents are said to be offering attractive figures for supplies. There are many places along the international border where these outlaws can sneak across after nightfall without being detected.

Reports here say that Villa has gained another victory over the Carranza forces south of Parral. Mexican censors are suppressing details of the battle but it is believed that the Carranza force was led by General Domingo Arrieta and General Mateas Ramos, numbering 2,000 troops, and had been dispatched to reinforce General Ernesto Garcia after his defeat by Villa.

Private William Wilson, First Pennsylvania Cavalry, one of the most prominent civil engineers in Philadelphia, was probably fatally injured here today. A stone, hurled by a quarry blast, fractured his skull.

Secret Service agents of the Government have reported to Washington that a new revolution in Mexico, headed by General Jacinto Trevino, is well under way. Behind Trevino is Villa. Coalition between the Villistas and disgruntled Carranzistas is said to have been accomplished.

Carranza's order relieving Trevino at Chihuahua and sending him to Monterey is believed to have been an effort to stem the tide that has set against the de facto Government.

The plan as unfolded here shows that Trevino's agents have been working secretly throughout Mexico.

DUNLLENITES CAUGHT IN STORM IN HUNTERDON CO.

Two Dunellenites can attest to the severity of the storm in Hunterdon county yesterday. Jacob Snell, who is employed as a painter by the New Jersey Central, went into a barn at Annandale to escape the rain but had not been there long before the roof was blown off. He fortunately escaped injury.

Donald Bye, of New Market road, and cousin, Ray Husband, of Elizabeth, were caught by the storm in the latter's automobile on a country road running into Flemington. The side curtains of the machine had unfortunately been left home by Mr. Husband and both he and young Bye received a thorough drenching. In addition a bolt of lightning came within an ace of striking the machine. It struck so close in fact that Bye's arm was rendered numb for a second or two. Homeward bound after the storm the two counted twenty-two trees that had been struck by lightning between Flemington and Whitehouse.

A Cadillac landau, driven by an out of town party, sank through the roadbed of North avenue, opposite the C. T. Voorhees market after the storm yesterday afternoon. It was necessary for the owner to engage H. C. Smith to pull it out, by means of a block and fall and his Saurer truck.

Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

Henry Kyte, of Utica, N. Y., is visiting his sisters, the Misses Kyte, of Martine avenue. Mr. Kyte, who has had considerable experience on the water, has a solution for the problem of the many sharks in the Atlantic waters this summer. The battle ships plying between this country and Europe, he says, attract the sharks because they are eager for the dead carcasses thrown overboard.

MAY SPLIT JERSEY UNITS FOR SERVICE

Expected That Some Will Be Sent With Regulars to Guard Border.

Headquarters First Brigade, N. G. N. J., Douglas, Ariz., July 14.—Physical examination of members of the New Jersey National Guard, with a view to eliminating those who do not meet army requirements, were postponed until today. The delay was due to the work of the medical officers in getting the new Thirty-fifth Regiment ready. Shortages of supplies in the quartermaster's department is affecting this regular army regiment as well as the National Guard. The regiment lacks equipment and the Arizona guardsmen had to surrender some tents so that the regular could get under cover. The Arizona regiment will be relieved of duty with our brigade.

The Second Batallion of regulars left Wednesday afternoon for Fort Huachuca. The First Batallion and Colonel A. M. Tuthill will leave today for Naco, and the Third Batallion has already left. The men are being distributed on guard from Casa Grande, Nogales, the Roosevelt Dam and Ajo.

This gives rise to the belief that when the Jersey guard is acclimated and trained the men will be moved out in detachments to guard the border with the regulars. It is understood a plan is under way to brigade us in a month or so with the regular units, our cavalry to be with the regular cavalry, our infantry with the regular infantry, and our artillery with the regular artillery. We expect no move for at least a month, unless there are unexpected developments. Many mining men yesterday started for the interior.

General Calles, commander of the Mexican troops, has left Ague Prieta for Naco for a time and may go to the interior to see Carranza. It is understood there is a serious difference between him and Governor De La Huerta. The civil government appointed by Carranza in Sonora Calles has invited all foreigners back and Governor De La Huerta has confiscated the holdings of the Richardson Development Company in the Yaqui Valley, and the Hearst ranch at Babricora. I understand that a strong protest has been made in Washington.

The confiscations were made on the ground that the owners of the properties are enemies of the de facto government. I believe Calles intends to ask Carranza to revoke this action for the general good.

There is no serious illness among the Jersey boys.

The men of the First Regiment will be the first to undergo physical examination and muster. The other regiments maintain that most of their men were fully examined at Sea Girt, but it is reasonably certain that all will have to stand the tests.

DIAMONDS WIN.

The Diamond A. C. defeated the Shamrocks yesterday afternoon by a score of 6 to 5.

WAYS OF THE COWBIRDS.

They Think They Can Sing and Won't Build Nests For Themselves.

Just as a man is known by the company he keeps, so this bird is named for the cows which he follows all day. Why the bird prefers the company of the cows has always been a mystery. Once it was thought he ate flies which followed the cows, but recent examinations show that the bird's favorite food consists of weed seeds and grasshoppers. Yet he'll follow the animals all day, sometimes perching on their backs to steal a ride. You've guessed his name, the cowbird.

Farmers have learned to value this bird very highly. He destroys millions of harmful insects and quantities of weed seeds. But then he should be able to do a lot of good work for the farmer, because the bird has no family cares.

Mrs. Cowbird, you see, instead of building a nest of her own, lays her egg in the nest of another bird, usually picking out the nest of a bird much smaller than herself. She always depends, too, on the good naturedness of the owner of the nest to hatch the egg and rear the young bird.

Sometimes the owner of the home will push the strange egg out on the ground. The yellow warbler often goes to work and builds another nest over the intruder. Other birds hatch the strange egg, and then spend much time and energy feeding the young bird.

You'll know the cowbird by his brown head and neck and glossy black coat. He thinks he can sing and tries very hard, but you'll laugh at his efforts when you hear him. — Philadelphia North American.

PENALTY OF A RIME.

Caustic Collingborne Paid For His Taunt at Richard III.

Did you ever hear of a spring poet who came to his death because of a rime? Doubtless many spring poets have merited the same fate, but in our day justice tarries and the world suffers in silence.

It was not thus when Richard III., last of the Plantagenets, ruled England. In the main the people who did not agree with the Duke of Gloucester were wise enough to keep their opinions to themselves, but William Collingborne thought to stretch poetic license to make it cover an attack on his majesty at a time when the murder of the two princes in the Tower ought to have taught prudence.

The king was under the sway of a beautiful and clever woman, Mrs. Lovell, who was thought to dictate much of his policy, which was hopelessly bad. Now, Collingborne had recourse to the fact that the wolf dog was called a "lovel," and so he penned the famous rime, "The rat, the cat and lovel, our dog, rule all England under the hog." As a result, England was decidedly "on the hog."

Did the rime escape the eagle eye of Gloucester? Well, if it did it was not overlooked by the lady. That was a year before the famous battle of Bosworth, when the Earl of Richmond came to the rescue of his suffering people. Richard had put down Buckingham's rebellion, and all the traitors had paid the price with their heads, so another head more or less did not matter. Collingborne was summoned into court, given a perfunctory trial and sent to the block. However, there is no evidence that he was punished for writing atrocious poetry.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FRANCE TO CELEBRATE.

Paris, July 14.—The French national holiday, the anniversary of the fall of the Bastile, was celebrated today with genuine enthusiasm. The recent success of the Allies' drive against the Teutons has served to put the people in a jubilant spirit, as was evidenced everywhere by a lively observance of the national fete. All the theatres of Paris gave war benefit performances this afternoon, and there were concerts in all the parks. The public appearance of President Poincare was greeted with demonstrations of enthusiasm by the throngs that filled the streets. Everywhere the buildings, public and private, displayed a profusion of the national colors of the Allies.

KNIT GOODS MEN CONFER.

Albany, N. Y., July 14.—Manufacturers from the great underwear producing districts of Nedw York State and the knit goods centres of New England assembled here today for an important conference. Secretary Carter, of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers, brought them together to consider and act upon various important problems confronting the trade. Labor conditions, freight embargoes, and the raw material market were among the subjects slated to receive attention.

NO DAMAGE TO CAMP.

The heavy rainfall and thunderstorm yesterday did no damage to Camp Ackerman, and the scouts who are encamed there spent the night in the permanent lodge. Parents of scouts who are spending a few weeks at the camp need have no fear for the safety of the boys, as everything possible is done to make the protective surrounding equal to those of the home.

His Method.

The little girl who was visiting at a neighbor's house had gone out to look at the horses.

"Here's one of them," she said, "that has watery eyes and coughs and hangs his head just the way papa's horse did last summer."

"What did your papa do for his horse?" asked the owner of the animals.

"He sold him," was the innocent answer.—Pearson's Weekly.

MILITARY TRAINING AT PLUM ISLAND

Twelve Local Young Men Registered at Camp Patterned After Plattsburg.

There are several local young men registered at the military training camp at Plum Island. This military camp, patterned after that at Plattsburg, is under the care of West Point Cadets and officers. The day is spent in a manner that is not only productive of physical and moral benefit, but is also caculated to keep alive the flame of patriotism. The equipment is of the best, the boys sleeping on cots in rain-proof tents, which are electrically lighted. The food is good and the day is spent in drilling and in the instruction in the use of arms. After drill, the tired "rookie" is allowed to take a shower and rest. Lectures are held regularly and dress parade is a daily feature.

At the camp are 1,200 boys, ranging in age from fifteen to eighteen years. There are a number of students from the Lawrenceville and Hill Schools, taking the course. Clergymen from these various institutions conduct Sunday school.

It is interesting to note that among those registered from this city is Alan Stevenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Sevenson, of West Eighth street. Two of Allan's brothers are with Troop D at Douglas, Arizona.

Ever since the local authorities have started the movement to guard against infantile paralysis there has been at least one health case in court every morning.

TO REVIVE RACING.

Chicago, July 14.—The famous Hawthorne Park track, which was closed a dozen years ago as a joint result of a crusade against a certain class of its frequenters and the passage by the legislature of the anti-bookmaking law, will open its gates tomorrow for a thirteen-day race meeting to be conducted under the auspices of the newly-organized Illionois Jockey Club. The sponsors for he meeting include some of Chicago's wealthiest men and most prominent sportsmen. No betting will be permitted and if the meeting is successful from the view of attendance and if sufficient enthusiasm is shown, efforts will be made to revive the sport around Chicago, and a bill will be presented to the legislature asking that racing be once more legalized in this State. The feature event of the opening day of the meeting will be a revival of the classic American Derby, which was run for so many years at the old Washington Park track in this city.

D. A. Mills, of Summit avenue, has returned home after some time spent at Winsted, Conn.

REPORT NO CASES OF PARALYSIS

Board of Health Issues Bulletin of Advice as Precaution Against Disease

Although there were fifty new cases of infantile paralysis reported throughout the State today, making 110 in all, the Board of Health stated post late this morning that there were none in this city. Every case reported to the board where out-town children have arrived, has been investigated and the necessary cautions taken. Determined to permit children to go on excursions a representative of the Board of Health will be at the station when picnics are leaving.

The latest bulletin of advice issued by the board follows:

"Don't allow your children to go to parties, picnics or outings.

"Don't let your child play with other children—keep him on his own premises.

"Don't take your child with you when shopping.

"Don't allow flies in your house and don't eat food on which they have been.

"Don't allow garbage, manure or any fly breeding material to remain on your premises.

"If you child is sick send for a doctor at once.

"If you know of children coming from out of town notify the Board of Health.

"Children are not being admitted to the local theatres."

The Sunday schools have been closed to children and the annual excursions abandoned."

'GOVERNOR'S DAY' ATTRACTS THRONG

State's Representative Men Flock to Sea Girt to Meet Fielder.

INVITE THREE COUNTIES

Today has been set apart for Essex, Morris and Ocean—Democrats and Republicans Mingle—Some Noted Ones Present.

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Sea Girt, July 14.—Not in many years has a Governor's Day at Sea Girt brought so representative a crowd of citizens of all political faiths as that which gathered on the ground adjoining the Governor's Cottage for luncheon at noon today. Governor Fielder, in an interview this morning said that the gathering was not political, as the guest list had been made up so that men in all walks of life, regardless of political activity, would be here.

There were office-holders, ex-office-holders and would-be office-holders in the crowd, it is true, but at the same time there were men who never take any particular interest in the actual running of any political party, including lawyers, clergymen and others.

The invitation list included the names of Essex, Morris and Ocean county citizens, but there were a few from other sections of the state. Colonel Austen Colgate, who seeks the Republican gubernatorial nomination, was the first arrival on the ground. He came down last night and remained on the grounds with Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., at the latter's cottage. As Essex county's choice, so far as the organization is concerned, Colonel Golgate attracted the interests of the visitors only second to Former Governor Franklin Murphy, who formally turned his United States Senatorial boom loose earlier in the week. Both received many cordial assurances of support during the day. Colonel Colgate was especially pleased by a report brought up from Ocean county by a delegation consisting of Assemblyman David N. Conrad, Deputy County Clerk Joseph M. Thompson, William H Fisher, Republican Assembly Candidate Harry T. Hagaman and others, that Ocean county was by no means assured to Senator Walter E. Edge, so far as the Republican primary is concerned. Conrad is opposing Senator Thomas A. Mathis for the nomination for the upper house, and Mathis is supporting Edge. The bitterness betwen the two factions has become so great that one will not support anyone for any office that the other also supports. Conrad expects to beat Mathis, and his friends say that Colgate will get the Conrad vote. Mathis is equally confident that he will win, and that Edge will carry the county, and he so declared today.

Mr. Murphy was the only United States Senatorial aspirant included in the list of invitations today, and he came here with a big group of Essex county politicians. All arrived at Sea Girt shortly before noon, and soon mingled with the throng on the lawn in front of the cottage, and around the two big brass cannons that are always conspicuous there. Party lines were forgotten in the first greetings, as well as factional fights in Essex and other counties. Mayor Thomas B. Raymond, Chief Justice William S. Gummere, who came from his summer home at Point Pleasant, former Governor J. Franklin Fort, who motored down from Spring Lake, Mayor Daniel F. Minihan of Orange, former Senator James Smith, Jr., and his son, George D. Smith, John L. Carroll, president of the Newark Tax Board, Congressman Richard Wayne Parker, City Counsel Spaulding Fraser, James R. Nugent, Speaker Chas C. Pilgrim of the House of Assembly, and Judge Daniel A. Dugan were a few of those who came early with the Essex county crowd.

Another visitor who accepted the Governor's invitation was Bishop Edward S. Lines, head of the Episcopal Diocese of Newark. There were several other clergymen among the visitors. From Morris county Judge Joshua R. Salmon was an early arrival, as were also Herbert A. Rowe, treasurer of the County Democratic Committee, and Chairman Ehlers of the Republican County Committee.

Former Adjutant General R. Heber Brientnall, William Donnelly, who has a Democrate club named after him in Newark, Ira A. Kip, Jr., one of the delegates to the Republican National convention, Peter Hauck, Jr., Assemblyman George W. Downs, Dudley Farrand, Decatur M. Sawyer, one of the managers of the Rahway Reformatory, former Congressman William H. E. Fielder, former Prosecutor Louis Hood and his brotner, Charles, and City Treasurer Elmer F. Day of Newark, who has achieved more than passing fame at home because of his effort to hatch out a parrot's egg, were also in the throng.

Others among the visitors included former Judge Thomas S. Henry, District Court Judge James P. Mylod, Horace A. Bonnell, former County Tax Commissioner Lawrence T. Feil, John L. O'Toole, Jasper Lynch, Louis Bamberger, and Secretary John Flavell of the Essex Republican County Committee.

WILSON WILL CARRY STATE, TUTTLE TELLS WASHINGTON

Washington, July 14.—Fairly radiating Democratic sunshine, hope and cheer, former Representative William E. Tuttle, Jr., and Edward W. Townsend drifted into Washington yesterday and told all who cared to listen that President Wilson will carry New Jersey next November.

No hesitation, qualification or mental reservation; just, "Wilson will carry New Jersey"—right off the bat, like that. Then, like a polished litterateur, or somewhat like Silas Wegg, Mr. Townsend burst into poetry:

"I say, please remember,
Wilson wins in November."

Nor, said Mr. Tuttle and Mr. Townend, was their optimism based solely on conditions in their own districts. It was founded on reports from all parts of the State, which, they asserted, all were favorable to Wilson and the Democratic party in general.

Mr. Townsend, who brought down Frank Dyer to give Washington the once over, called at the Postoffice Department to ask for more men for the force at Montclair.

"We have been working on the same amount of money as was given us in 1915, and we need more," said Mr. Townsend, and he went out to get what he could till an augemented appropriation should be forthcoming.

CAMPAIGN FOR BETTER SCHOOLS IN COUNTRY

Nation-wide Effort is Being Made to Improve Rural Institutions.

From the day Dr. P. P. Claxton assumed his duties as United States Commissioner of Education, a nation-wide campaign has been waged for better rural schools. Commissioner Claxton is now in his fifth year of service and every year during his administration he has insisted on advanced steps being taken by the Bureau itself for rural school progress, as well as to urge upon administrative school officers, teachers and patrons throughout the nation the imperative necessity for improving the rural schools.

Secretary Lane of the Department of the Interior, in his annual report for 1915 to the President of the United States, sounds a clarion call for a nation-wide campaign for better rural schools. He urges upon Congress the appropriation of $100,000 for two r three years, with which to wage this campaign. For a cabinet officer to take such a bold stand for the long-neglected rural school gives new hope to the friends of rural education throughout the country.

In educational opportunity the city boy or girl have privileges far superior to those of the farm boy and farm girl. In funds, in length of term, in equipment, in buildings, in administration and supervision, in courses of study, in efficiency of the teaching force, and in salaries paid, the superiority of the city schools is so far above that of rusal schools as to make the situation in many sections of the country deplorable. It has been so desperate in many instances during the past 25 years, when contrasted with the splendid opportunities of the city school, that it is given more times than any other reason by fathers and mothers for moving from the farm to the city. For, as Secretary Lane declares: "An ambitous people will go where education can be had for their children. There is no sense in talking of the charms of country life and the independence and dignity of producing from the soil if the school at command is no more modern than a wooden plow."

Therefore, let every agency of State and nation be organized and put in motion for the purpose of giving the rural schools a square deal.

Tilney, urgently appeals to local people to become members, the grave possibilities of the Mexican situation emphasizing the needs of this society and the duties which it may be called upon to perform. If you are not already enrolled as a member, you are urged to join now, as a part of your 'patriotic duty,' by sending one dollar for annual dues to A. A. YOU'VE COOKED YOUR GOOSE—NOW EAT IT.

Prosecution, persecution or imagination—which is it, Mr. Latzko? You must decide for yourself which of these ailments is affecting you. The columns of the Plainfield Daily Press are not opened to your personal attacks on reputable North Plainfield citizens. We have decided that you are spitting spleen, that revenge for an imagined wrong is your object. You must vent your unwarranted spite through some other channel. Your application for a transfer of your license has been refused because you chose to do as you pleased; because you thought you were immune from laws made for American citizens. You shook your challenging finger between the eyes of the Mayor of North Plainfield and told him you didn't "give a damn" for his power or that of the borough government. You defied him to object to a transfer of your license. He did it. You have twice been convicted in the City Court of Plainfield for violation of the excise law; you were warned repeatedly to walk the straight and narrow path. Mayor William L. Smalley took the trouble to personally plead with you to adhere to the "black-list"—one of the best assets to the regulation of liquor traffic ever adopted by a municipality. You were warned to conduct your business on a plane prescribed by federal, state and municipal laws. You scoffed at the Mayor's authority; you inferred that minding his own business would profit him more than his interest in you. But if you had heeded his advice you would still be in possession of your license.

Some of North Plainfield's best citizens went to Somerville and demanded that you be prohibited from selling liquor in North Plainfield or Somerset County. Do you think you can make any level-headed American, possessed of even a portion of his allotted intelligence, believe that these citizens of spotless character and unchallenged reputation went to the county seat and perjured themselves for the benefit of the municipality and to overthrow you? If so, you are laboring under false illusions. The Court decided you were an undesirable in the liquor business and refused to transfer your license. Follow the course you have started and you will soon liken yourself to a crawling serpent in the eyes of your fellow citizens.

WEED OUT THE HACK LINE BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

When Judge DeMeza revoked the licenses of the two taxi cab drivers yesterday morning he started a campaign that should have had its origin a year ago. Why stop these two? Those who are familiar with conditions at the North Avenue depot know that a general weeding out is necessary to the best service and good order of the future. The depot hacking stand is overrun with a horde of young snips, boys who never should have been granted drivers' licenses, and they are not only hurting the older and reputable drivers but are fast bringing the stand down to a level where the city will eventually be compelled to wipe it out. Now that the City Court Magistrate has started the ball rolling why not launch a systematic campaign and bring every individual holding a license up for a rigid examination? It would not be difficult to determine who is rightly entitled to a license and who is not. There is one class of irresponsibles carrying on a hacking business and another class of respectable, law-abiding drivers who have been able to conduct themselves decently for years. Give these older men the chance they rightly deserve by singling out the objectionable characters who are proving themselves a detriment to the business. This is a matter that should be rectified outside of the City Police Court. The disturbers are taken there as a last resort after they have become intolerable. Woe be unto those miscreants who are brought before the Judge in the future and found guilty of misdemeanors committed at the depot stand.

TEST THE LAW AND QUIT BLUFFING.

Two representatives of the Pillar of Fire cult were sent to Elizabeth yesterday to serve jail sentences. It was their just desert. These disturbers of the peace have defied the police, challenged the city government to shut them up and keep them off the streets. The two now under sentence demanded to be locked up, they welcomed the interference of a police officer. Why? Because they wanted to establish a test case. Now, Mrs. White, or Mr. Wilson, you've got your start—go the limit. Take your case to the higher courts and test the validity of the ordinance. Quit this petty trifling with the police department. Your cult has threatened to show that Plainfield's ordinances are unconstitutional on previous occasions but your promise tests have never materialized. The Mayor, the police chief and every other city official are holding down the same stand today that they did one year ago. Either show them up or quit bluffing.

FIVE PER CENT. OF GUARDSMEN MAY BE SENT HOME.

Now comes the possibility that some of New Jersey's soldiers will be invalidated by the new pyhsical examinations which the Federal Government has ordered for the men in Arizona. The mustering-in tests which they were all subjected to at Sea Girt will count for naught. Unless each of the Jersey militiamen is found perfect in mind and body, he will be shipped back home at a minimum cost to the Government of $100. Possibly five per cent. will be found wanting and this five per cent. will have had a trip to the international border at the expense of the United States Government. Already a number of men have developed ailments since leaving Sea Girt that will eliminate them from service and thereby is reopened the criticism against the Government for rushing the troops to the west without a thorough examination.

"Two dead animals, one a dog, the other a cat, killed by vehicles Sunday, lying in the streets for forty-eight hours," according to yesterday's issue of the Newark News.

Would it take the people of Plainfield this long to launch a protest against the health authorities if a couple of decaying beasts were allowed to lie along a local thoroughfare for even half the length of time? Still, the Newark health officer might have intended these exhibits for celebration guests.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Sister's Picture.

She looks just like a Gibson book;
She twists her features like she'd squall
And don't look like herself at all.
She wears more hair than e'er before,
And gets it at the ten-cent store.
She tries to look just like a saint,
And that is what my sister ain't.
She poses like an actorine,
'Bout sixteen times or seventeen,
And frets and fumes like all possessed,
Although the artist does his best.
She squints and scowls and can't sit straight,
And makes the feller wait and wait.
I don't see what she does it fer;
The picture never looks like her.
I feel like yellin', "Get the hook!"

Uncle Abner

A town without a brass band is like a family without a phonograph. It is liable to worry along and have a pretty good time in life.

Bud Perkins is so stingy that he stole a ham so that he could be sent to the country jail and get a haircut for nothing.

Another thing that Job never did was to try to unscrew the top off'n a glass fruit jar.

There is about as much secrecy about a courtship in a town of 1,200 as there is about a magazine explosion aboard a battleship. As soon as a feller and gal are seen together in an ice cream parlor folks begin to wonder when they are going to git married.

Every Reason to Refuse Him.

(Pea Ridge, Ark., Pod.)

If a man rides up to you in a hurry and yells for a bottle of whiskey for his mother-in-law, who has just been snake bitten, don't you give it to him, for if you do you will have to go to the penitentiary for a year. Anyway, no man would want his mother-in-law to get well of a snake bite, and in the second place coal oil is the proper remedy for snake bites now.

The Way It Goes.

A biscuit-shooter named Marie, when thirty-seven years of age,
Discovered she had "talent," see? and went upon the mimic stage.
Her "figger" it was simply grand and won her job, no doubt of it.
She got into the chorus and the papers said she made a hit.
Her weekly wage was eighteen per for boosting histronic art.
The baldhead row went daft on her and soon she had a speaking part.
They sent her flowers and jewels rare, and now and then a limousine,
And soon she saw her features fair portrayed in every magazine.
She couldn't dance and had no voice, and no one claimed that she could act,
But still she was the old boys' choice, despite essentials that she lacked.
The manager was not so slow and transformed her into a star.
He hired a man to write a show to fit her needs and there you are.
She bought a lot of swagger gowns and they made up the entire show.
She played tank time in one-horse towns and always played to S. R. O.
Then back to Broadway for a run that simply set the burg afire.
The manager just rolled in mon and patrons didn't seem to tire.
Her name on the electric sign in four-foot letters gay and bright,
Announced that Miss Marie de Shine would grace that show shop every night.
With matinees on Wed. and Sat. the line was always four block long.
The house sold for three weeks, at that, and Marie's life was like a song.
They named new bonnets after her, she posed for toothpaste ads and such;
Where'er she went she made a stir and she was imitated much.
And now you'd hardly know Marie; she lives in grandeur past compare;
In two years things have changed, you see; she wed a Pittsburgh millionaire.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Charlie Chaplin holds sway at Proctors' today and tomorrow as the headline attraction, appearing in his third Mutual comedy entitled "The Vagabond." This feature aside from its laugh-provoking possibilities is unique by the presence of several dramatic scenes that grip the spectator with intense interest, only to be followed by some comic cut-up on the part of the star and cast that produces loud outbursts of laughter, which is one way of saying that the director has done his work well. "The Vagabond" is a typical Chaplin creation and as such is dominated by Chaplin's personality and funny antics which are always greeted with hearty and boisterous laughter. Other features today include an Edison dramatic triumph enacted by a picked cast of talented artists entitled "Out of the Ruins," Harry D. Carey in a delightful comedy drama entitled "The Wedding Quest," and several other features. Tomorrow, in addition to "The Vagabond," Warda Howard and Ernest Maupin are co-starred in "The Regeneration of Margaret," Emma Hunter and Harry Benham appear in "Through Flames to Love," and a Vitagraph comedy is also on the program.

Starting Monday and continuing throughout the week a special feature will be provided by the management of Proctors'. A vocalist, Gertrude Hornidge, will render the most popular and latest song successes in conjunction with their presentation in story form upon the screen. This is a unique novelty and one that is bound to please the patrons. On Monday by special arrangement with the Metro studios Olga Petrova, the talented emotional star, will be seen in "Playing With Fire," one of her most successful pictures, and in addition to other attractions the 11th episode of "The Mysteries of Myra" will be presented. On Tuesday Triangle will present Lillian Gish in "The Innocent Magdalene," in which Miss Gish assumes a role written especially around her personality, a special Keystone comedy will appear and the 6th chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine" will be shown. On Wednesday, William Fox will present Theda Bara in a modern adaptation of that immortal story "East Lynne."

CLAN MACKENZIE WILL HOLD A "STAG" OUTING

Final arrangements have been made for the "stag" outing to be held by Clan Mackenzie, No. 204, to Coney Island tomorrow. The members will meet at the North Avenue station and take the 12:58 train for New York from which point they will make the rest of the trip by boat. In case of stormy weather the outing will be postponed. A large turnout is expected as this will be the first affair of the kind held by the clan.

NO CHANGE IN CARNIVAL VOTE.

THIS ONE'S THE REAL THING

WHY MUNICIPAL REMOVAL AND DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE IN PLAINFIELD IS IMPORTANT

Harold Neeley, of the Class '16, Plainfield High School, entered the competition for the Plainfield Daily Press prize for the best composition on a municipal topic, and received honorable mention. His subject was "Municipal Removal and Disposal of Garbage in Plainfield," his composition being as follows:

Plainfield is a beautiful city. One needs but to walk through the pleasant streets lined with splendid shade trees and comfortable houses to be convinced of this. Furthermore Plainfield is progressive. The hustle and bustle of Front street and its vicinity, the modern buildings, the new ones under construction, all convince us that Plainfield is alive and busy. We find further proof in the excellent, up-to-the-minute schools of the city. Graduates of the Plainfield schools are making good everywhere. Plainfield is not only up-to-date in her school system, but she is among the leaders in this as in many other matters.

The city, however, is not perfect. Among the things that the city of Plainfield lacks is a system for the municipal removal and disposal of garbage. Such a system is now a vital matter and this fact is recognized by places smaller than Plainfield. The city of White Plains, which, according to the 1910 census, had but three-fourths of the population of Plainfield, has had a system of garbage and rubbish disposal for at least ten years. Somerville, N. J., has had such a system for some time, but the poulation of Somerville in 1910 was only one-fourth that of this city.

It is true, of course, that there are many places that do not provide for rubbish removal, but why not have Plainfield progressive in this as well as in other things? Is she not as capable as Somerville of maintaining a project such as this? Is it not her duty to have such a system?

Exhibits were recently placed in practically every classroom of the High School. These showed mosquitoes breeding in stagnant water. Placards accompanied the jars containing the mosquito larvae urging that provision be made to fight the insects by placing a film of oil on all stagnant water in the region. Mosquitoes bring malaria, but the common housefly is a pest fully as bothersome and more dangerous than the mosquito. Many are the diseases he carries, among them being infantile paralysis. The breeding place of the housefly is the manure pile or garbage heap. If the people allow rubbish and garbage to accumulate, sickness results. How can the people prevent the accumulation if provision is not made for its frequent removal? Then again those who undertake to dispose of garbage should thoroughly understand just what to do. If buried or used for filling in, care should be taken that the green garbage is not spread too thickly or else mixed with street sweepings, ashes, soil from excavations, or something of the sort. It should not be buried too deeply or too near the surface. Would it not be better to have this matter in the hands of certain individuals capable of coping with the situation so that the waste should be removed from the houses regularly and properly destroyed?

The refuse of a city like Plainfield generally consists of ashes, garbage, manure and rubbish. Of the manure little need be said as this is in demand as a fertilizer.

There are several different ways of treating refuse. One way of getting rid of green garbage is to feed it to swine after first sterilizing it. From 700 to 750 swine would be necessary to consume the garbage of a city the size of Plainfield. This method, however, has its disadvantages. It is not pleasant to have a colony of swine in such large numbers situated near a city or town. To place it at a distance would necessitate long hauls, which would mean additional cost. In this method the rubbish may be sorted, and that which will yield no revenue used to fill in low land.

Beside this there is the system of mixing green garbage with rubbish and ashes and burying the mixture or using it to fill in marshy ground. Such a system is in practice in Milwaukee, Wis., and in Davenport, Iowa. In Milwaukee the cost of handling the refuse, including gathering and burying, is about forty cents per ton. In Davenport the cost is about 50 cents per ton. Surely this is as economical as anyone could wish.

Then there is the treatment by reduction. In this the refuse is masticated by machinery and the products used as fertilizers and for various other purposes.

The last method is that of incineration. There are two distinct types of incinerating plants, those of high temperature and those of low temperature. The high temperature plant costs from $700 to $1,000 per ton capacity to construct. In this plant the garbage is mixed with other materials and is burned without other fuel. The low temperature plant cost about $500 per ton capacity to construct and requires about $1 worth of fuel per ton of garbage treated.

The refuse of a city of about 50,000 people is estimated to be about twenty tons daily. That would make the refuse of a city the size of Plainfield amount to about ten tons daily. To treat this by the system adopted by Davenport and Milwaukee should cost from $4.00 to $5.00 per day. The other methods incur larger expense, but yield a larger revenue. Grease obtained by these methods from green garbage is worth $90 a ton. Cheap perfumes and many other materials are by-products of these processes.

It is very probable that a system for the municipal removal and disposal of garbage in this city would increase the expense account somewhat, but is it not worth it to insure the prompt removal and disposal of the waste? And then there now exist the possibility of profit. Cleveland earns about $1.50 per ton on her garbage. A New York contractor has agreed to pay the city an average price of $95,833 a year, for a period of three years, to secure the privilege of the final disposition of the garbage in Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx.

It remains for every thinking man to act. Why not have a municipal system for the disposal of garbage in the city of Plainfield? It would help to safeguard the beauty and health of the city. Get such a system. Do it for Plainfield.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Young King Chose His Bride.

The King Led Her Into the Palace.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

JACK and Evelyn curled up on a little stool beside daddy while he told them about Elise, a princess who silently wove coats of mail from nettles for her eleven brothers under a spell: "When a king found Elise in her cave and carried her off on his horse she was very unhappy. All day they rode, and when the sun went down a royal city with many churches and towers lay before them. The king led her into his palace, where great fountains played in marble halls, where walls and ceilings were covered with paintings. But Elise had no eyes for them. She wept and sorrowed for her brothers, whom a spell turned into swans each day and whom she was trying to save by weaving coats of mail from nettles when the king found her and carried her off.

"Maids of honor came to wait on Elise, and silently she let them dress her in royal robes and twist pearls in her hair. They drew beautiful gloves on her hands that had been blistered by nettles while she silently wove. But how she longed for her cave again!

"When the maids were finished Elise was wonderfully beautiful in her robes. Courtiers bent low before her, and the king wooed her for his bride. The old archbishop shook his head and whispered that he feared the beautiful wood maiden was a witch who had dazzled their eyes and charmed the king."

"Was he cruel?" asked Evelyn.

"Just stupid," daddy answered.

"The king refused to hear the archbishop and ordered music and dances and feasting. Through scented gardens Elise was led to gorgeous apartments. But nothing brought a smile to her lips nor her eyes. Sorrow for her brothers' fate sat in her heart like a stone. The king opened the door of a little chamber where she was to sleep. He had had it furnished with costly green carpets and made to look just like the cave where he had found her. On the floor lay the bundle of flax she had spun from the nettles for her brothers' coats of mail, and from the ceiling hung the coat that she had already made. The king's huntsmen had brought them from the cave as curiosities.

"'Here you may dream that you are back in your wood home,' the king said. 'Here is the weaving you were working on in your cave. In your new splendor it may please you to recall those times.'

"When Elise saw these things so dear to her blood flushed to her cheeks, and for the first time in the palace she smiled," daddy ended.

"What a kind king!" said the children.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel's Napkins Are Ruined and She Takes None of the Blame.

"Well, what is the matter now?" Ralph's tone was impatient. The days since the maid has been sent away for drunkenness had been very trying and his patience wah frayed around the edges. Ethel sat sobbing in a heap by the table, but she did not reply. Ralph walked over to the girl and laid his hand on her bowed head. The touch was kinder than the tone and unlocked the pent-up words.

"They are ruined, all my lovely napkins that the girls of the thimble club gave me for a wedding present. Each girl embroidered an initial on a napkin, and now——"

"What has happened to them?" came in tones of long-suffering patience.

"That awful Pearson woman used them for dust cloths or something awful," wailed the disconsolate little woman.

"Dust cloths! How did she get hold of them?"

"I do not know. They were in the buffet drawer, and——"

"You mean that is where they belong. Nothing in this house is ever in the place where it belongs," snapped Ralph.

"They may have been in the laundry bag. I used them when the Folsoms were here." Ethel looked up angrily at her husband.

"Can't you wash them and make them all right?" Ralph was trying to change the current of her thoughts.

"Oh, they are all covered with the oil she puts on the dust cloths, and look here!" She reached for one from the floor. "There are two or three holes punched in this one right by the initial." At the sight of the ruined treasure she relapsed into tears.

"The only thing I can suggest is to take care of the things you value. You cannot expect servants to do better in the care of valuables than the mistress of the house." Ralph turned on his heel and walked away.

"You are just horrid, Ralph Gordon," flamed Ethel.

"I, for one, wish you would have so much trouble losing and ruining things that you would learn to use a little care. I am driven to desperation. There is never a thing in its place. Before I was married I had my things where I could put my hands on them in the dark——"

"I do not know that that is so desirable. When we have electric lights in the house you would never need to rummage around in the dark," interrupted Ethel tartly.

"No, it would not matter so much if I could find anything when I turned on the light. I had to put on a pair of woolen stockings today because I could not find a whole pair of cotton ones to put on," retorted Ralph angrily.

"Why do you not buy yourself some then?"

"That's it. Why don't I buy more? Let everything we have go to wrack and ruin through your carelessness and then buy more. There are great prospects of our getting on in the world, I must say." Ralph's tone was exceedingly bitter.

"It is so fortunate you have me to blame." Ethel rose with a toss of the head and, opening the cellar door, threw the napkins down onto the laundry floor.

"I have tried to be patient, but I am getting utterly discouraged. You do not seem to make any effort to improve. You take absolutely no responsibility." Ralph stuffed his hands into his pockets and left the room.

"That is all the sympathy I get when I am in trouble," thought Ethel with a sarcastic curl of her lip.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Sewing shirts and sorting socks for seven soldiers will be the occupation of Mrs. Alice Eaves, of Galesburg, Ill., if the war clouds do not blow over between Uncle Sam and Carranza. Six sons of Mrs. Eaves have enlisted with Company C of the Sixth Regiment, Illinois National Guard, and a seventh, who is too young to carry a musket, is the company mascot.

Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare, of St. Louis, a well-known writer and suffragist, has filed her declaration with the Secretary of State as a candidate for United States Senator on the Socialist ticket, while her husband, Frank P. Hare, is candidate on the same ticket for attorney-general. Mrs. O'Hare was a candidate for the nomination of vice-president on the national Socialist ticket, but was defeated.

Women will play a conspicuous part in the coming national prohibition convention at St. Paul, opening July 19. A determined effort will be made in the interests of woman suffrage, and the women delegates will offer a plank declaring women suffrage to be a national issue and indorsing the Susan B. Anthony federal amendment.

Mrs. Adda F. Howie, of Elm Grove, Wis., has found a novel and interesting vocation in the designing and building of model dairy farms. Twenty odd years ago Mrs. Howie began her work by developing a superior herd of Jersey cattle with two cows and a heifer, purchased with prize money earned by her at a State fair. Today her herd at Elm Grove is recognized as one of the finest in America, and dairy experts come from far and wide to see it. When, several years ago, Dr. Y. Suminokura, representing the Japanese government, come to the United States looking for stock to build up herds in Japan, he bought a carload of animals from her farm.

Agnes C. Laut, Canada's best known woman journalist, and an authority on Canadian history in general and the Hudson Bay region in particular, is a native of Ontario, but in early life moved to Winnipeg, where she attended college and later began newspaper work on the Manitoba Free Press. Subsequently she became a contributor to other Canadian, American and English papers and magazines, and for some years was one of the editors of Outing. Her enthusiasm for outdoor life led her to make many adventurous trips to little known regions of the Canadian northland, and on one occasion she made the 2,000-mile canoe trip down the Saskatchewan River from Edmonton to Lake Winnipeg. Her writings deal chiefly with the fascinating life of the Canadian wilds. At present she owns an estate in Wassaic, Dutchess county, N. Y., and considers this her home, but she travels much in Canada and the United States investigating contemporary problems for the leading magazines.

Women on an average live a trifle more than three years longer than men, according to a set of tables recently published by the Census Bureau, showing the death rate and the ration of expectation of life in the New England States, New York, New Jersey Indiana, Michigan and the District of Columbia. The figures are the first of the sore ever compiled by the United States government and are similar to those compiled by the insurance companies, except that they vocer the entire population of the specified districts and not only the risks selected through medical examination and otherwise. According to the tabulations, the average expectation of life for males at birth is 49.9 years, and for females, 53.2 years. One of the chief reasons for the greater life span of woman is the greater number of violent deaths among men. Nearly four-fifths of these—suicides, homicides, and accidental deaths—are of males, and death in this form amounts to nearly eight per cent. of the total each year.

The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia has made an important decision affecting the teachers who marry while engaged in school work. Henceforth a woman who marries will not be deprived of her position if she wishes to retain it.

TEMPLE SOCIAL POSTPONED.

Wet weather caused a postponement of the parcel post social to have been held in the Temple Baptist church last night. The affair will be held some time next week, the time to be announced on Sunday.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

CREDIT IS COMING.

These are the struggling days for the Yankees. Donovan's crew, in the midst of an opportunity to take a firm grip on the top rung, is falling before those crushing Indians. It seems that the jinx is hitting the Yanks just as har as it has hit the Giants. While the American leaguers have not had to contend with "heart-breaking" ninth inning defeats, their hospital list has been continually assuming grave proportions. Fritz Maisel has been out for some time and it is not thought that he will be available for use for some days. The injury to Frank Gilhooley made the signing of Rube Oldring a necessity rather than a luxury. If the Yanks do annex the flag, some one deserves a whole lot of credit.

COUNTING THE CHICKENS.

At this time every year one hears the constant rumor that this athlete or that scholastic wonder is going to continue his studies in this or that institution. It's a case of "counting the chickens before they are hatched." The University of Pennsylvania is one of the many educational institutions that follows this line of endeavor. Right now the U. of P. officials have announced that four of the most promising stars in the relay world will enter that school in the Fall. All of which may be true. It's very probable that one of the four, George Meredith, will enter the university, as his brother is already enrolled there. As far as the other athletes are concerned, however, it seems to be a case of "watchful waiting." The three lads around whom this course of action centers are Frank Sloman—faster than his name would indicate, Brooke Bremer and "Izzy" Hough. U. of P. certainly gets the "cream."

VALUE OF SWIMMING POOL.

In this torrid weather the value of a swimming pool is fully recognized by all. But, there is a considerable number that fail to realize that there is a pool at Plainfield High School. Before there was a pool at the Ninth street institution the many citizens of this city were constantly lamenting the lack of one. Now, tha their lamenations have been heard, how many of these citizens will take advantage of the Summer swimming season at P. H. S.?

OPPORTUNITY TO MANAGE.

Frank Hand, we see by the papers, is now a manager. Frank is to handle the destinies of the Washington baseball team. He succeeds Billie Pfau, who was discharged from the position because of the fact that he neglected to present a full line-up on two different occasions.. Pfau made an agreement with the owners of the Washington team to provide them with a team, including a good pitcher. The pitcher, it was understood, was to be a man with a "rep," and was to get well paid for his efforts. Up until last Saturday Pfau had furnished a capable man, and had received his money. But last Saturday, he brought a Perth Amboy High School lad over to do the pitching. That was the climax. "Nibs" Hand is manager now. All the fans of this city hope that Frank will prove a success. It is said that he intends to provide the fans and fannies of "little" Washington with a first-class pitcher—Cliff Randolph.

THE WAY TO POSTPONE.

The wrong way to postpone a baseball game and the right way to postpone one were both demonstrated during the past week or so by City League managers. The Baptists decided that they would like to go on a picnic last Saturday and for that reason they called off their scheduled game with the Hopes—but the manager of the Hope team was not informed of the fact. Quite neglectful of Manager Patterson, of the Baptists, to do a thing like that. Tomorrow the Tabs will have to take a rest as Manager Britt Martin of the Hopes has asked for a postponement. He did it in the right way and his request was quickly granted by Jim Scott. There is always a right way to do a thing and the man who follows the right way is the man who succeeds.

NO WAY OUT.

There seems to be nothing left for the Woodland [illegible] to do now but make its bow to the United States Golf Association and let the mother organization have its way. Ouimet, Tewksbury and Sullivan have been declared ineligible for amateur competition, and the Woodland Club has fought a prolonged fight, but nothing has been gained. The golfers in question have played in club tourneys, but have kept out of U. S. G. A. affairs, and so the club has not gotten in wrong.

The threat from the U. S. G. A. that all of the club's members will be declared ineligible if one ineligible member enters a sanctioned tourney will doubtless have its intended effect. No club cares to take such a chance, and there is no doubt that the U. S. G. A. means what it says. Ouimet, Tewksbury and Sullivan could, of course, enter the Metropolitan open without a protest but they would have to enter as professionals. That would be admitting too much.

FAINT HOPE FOR GIANTS.

John J. McGraw hasn't given up hope. That isn't [illegible]gsy's style. On the contrary, the little commander of the Giants has set about bolstering his one feeble department—the pitchers. There are deals in the air just now—the usual midsummer assortment. One is almost certain to materialize, and that will bring McGraw Slim Sallee, a pitcher after McGraw's own heart and one who, though slim and tall, may lift the Giants to that threatening position they occupied not so long ago.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

This is market day and "Farmer Joe" Morley is on hand to discuss things. Congenial Joe has taken over the stock of the Farmer baseball team and has been running the organization under difficulties. The team is without a pitcher, and Morley has been doing the [illegible] of the hurling himself. Eddie Conshay, was the team's star pitcher, but, after Eddie got his bumps in a recent conflict, he failed to respond to treatment and has not showed up to play since. It is understood that his arm has gone back on him. But to get back to Morley. A catcher by choice, Joe is above all a ball player of the unusual kind, patterned after George Sisler, of the St. Louis club. On the mound the big fellow looks formidable, but generally gets his bumps.

On first, the Farmers have a lad named Anderson. This young gent can field the ball, but is not over strong with the stick. While he does not resemble "Hal" Chase in the least, ther are some who insist that he is the "Chase" of the circuit. That's highly complimentary as the league has an array of unusual talent on the first base line.

We hear the Hopes and Tabs once had a real battle. Wonder was Dick Schott?

After one gets a peep at all the outfield talent there is in the City League, he comes to the conclusion that reliable Tommy Heron ranks right up there with the best of them. Tommy is there every Saturday, wears the same suit and covers the usual position. That he can hit has been demonstrated over and over again. To be sure, Tommy is one of the steadiest baseball players around here.

Jim McCarthy is a member of the Pans. Jim is a pitcher and relieves Joe Newell. He has had very little mound duty to do for the Pans this year, as Joe Newell has a habit of remaining on the hillock until the last man fans. Jim and Joe form the whole pitching corps of the Poling Peps, and it is not probable that there is a better duo in this city.

John O'Keefe aspires to be a pitcher. But, unfortunately, John is a member of a team that has among its cohorts four or five lads who also have hurling aspirations. John will have to curb his desires, for the manager of the team has decided that even the mascot is entitled to a regular turn in the box.

Eddie Hannon, a member of the Cosmopolitans, is one of the fast diamond artists around these parts. Eddie does not appear to be over ambitious when one views him from the sidelines. But when the ball comes sizzling down toward Edward, things happen. That's why he is in demand.

Games Tomorrow.
Farmers vs. Netherwood.
Baptists vs. Dunellen.
T. A. B. S. vs. Hopes (Postponed).

There will be but two games in the City League tomorrow. In these attractions the players of the Netherwood team will engage those of the Farmer A. C., while the members of the Dunellen outfit will take on the Baptists.

Little surprise is expected to accompany the announcement of the results of these games as the Netherwoods are generally considered a "sure bet." The Farmers have been going so poorly of late that it is a wonder that they have not fallen through the league cellar. They lack unity and a pitcher. Without these esentials one canot see wherein their chance of trimming the East Enders lies. It is said that the Morley fellows have secured a new pitcher and that they may use him in tomorrow's game. They may do that, but it is not expected that they will win unless they are able to combine heavy hitting with the high class hurling.

In the mill between the Baptists and the Dunellen teams, the latter is the favorite. The Baptists have not been going very strongly of late and are minus the services of one or two of their valuable men. On the other hand, they seem to be anxious to make up for the layoff of Saturday and for one or two other untimely defeats. Dunellen had better be on the alert tomorrow.

The Shamrocks have been avenged. The Diamonds defeated the Green team on Wednesday, but the victims came to life yesterday and hung one on the Sparklers, the score being 9 to 5. It was due to the clever pitching of John Newell, that the Shamrocks were able to even matters up with their rivals. John was effective throughout the entire game and was particularly invincible when men were on the paths.

The Diamond twirler had the ability to fan the boys, but five errors behind him made his fanning ability of little value. The Shamrocks made seven errors, but the work of their twirler kept them on top at all stages.

RALPH RUNYON MAY JOIN NEW YORK A. C.

Some publicity has been given to the fact that Ralph Runyon is to run "unattached" for a year. Ralph has left the Pastime A. C. and will not compete under the colors of that organization again. But, that does not indicate that the local fellow will refuse to consider an invitation to join another athletic organization. A New Brunswick newspaper announced yesterday that the local vaulter had been seen in conversation with the leading lights of the New York A. C. and that it was probable that he would compete for that organization after he had rested for a year. Of course, during the school days, Runyon carries the colors of Penn State. During the vacation period he is free to do as he pleases.

BASEBALL CHALLENGE.

The Plainfield Athletic nine would like to arrange games with any clubs whose players are not over eighteen years of age. Those who would like to play the Plainfield Athletic nine may call at the residence of Jack McDowell, at 322 Hillside avenue. Games are wanted for Saturday afternoon, as the players work on all other days and on Saturday morning. They would also like home games.

FIREMEN TO PLAY TABS.

The crack New York Firemen, who have won two games over the New York Police, will oppose the Elizabeth Tabs next Sunday afternoon at T. A. B. Park, which is situated at the Elizabethport station of the Central Railroad. "Wuzzy" Fullerton or Martin Sheridan will do the hurling for the Abstainers, and Lynch, a former New England League star, will deliver 'em up for the visitors. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

EDDIE CONSHAY SIGNS WITH ST. JOSEPH'S

The St. Joseph's baseball team will take on the Plainfield A. C. at Hyde Field tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. This will be the third game of the season for the Saints, who have maintained a clean slate up to the present time. The Plainfield A. C. outfit has tackled some tough opposition during the past few months and, while the team has not been able to win all of its games, it has done creditably against larger and more experienced teams. For this reason, Manager Coffey believes that his charges will give the North Plainfielders a run for honors.

The Saints have added two new men to the roster of their team. They are Eddie Conshay, who until recently performed as pitcher for the Farmers, and Art O'Leary, who was at one time the keystone guardian at Plainfield High School. Owing to the fact that he is engaged in business, Marty McDonough will be unable to play tomorrow.

The line-up of the two teams follows:

Plainfield A. C.—V. Mullin, shortstop; Moffett, second base; L. Stites, first base; Snyder, third base; Garrell, left field; Miner, right field; Ross, catcher; H. Stites, pitcher; Coffey, centre field.

ROYALS CONSIDERED RATHER SPEEDY

Game for Sunday Called Off Because Royal Giants Are Too Fast.

Pete Simmons, manager of the Royals, has announced that the game scheduled to be played between his team and the South Plainfield club at South Plainfield Sunday, has been called off, owing to the fact that the "manager does not think the team will be strong enough to compete with the Royals." Pete does not state whether he is the manager who is doing the thinking or whether Bob Hamilton is the lad who has come to the conclusion that the Royals are too fast. At any rate, the game is off, both parties consenting to the arrangement.

The Royal manager writes that he heard that the Saurer baseball team is looking for a game for tomorrow. The game, so the report says, must be played at South Plainfield. If there is a Saurer team, the manager of that team should consult with Pete Simmons at once. It is hardly probable that anything will come of the matter, inasmuch as the Saurer outing to Highland Beach is scheduled to take place tomorrow. Then, too, is there a Saurer team?

ABSTAINERS' GAME.

On Sunday afternoon the T. A. B. S. will lineup against the fast Garwood A. C. Tone Denny is scheduled to pitch for the Abstainers. The game will be called at 3:30 sharp.

ADAIR FOUGHT TO BITTER END

Mexican Describes How Dead Lieutenant Used Pistols.

GALLANT AGAINST ALL ODDS

After Emptying Pistol He Threw It at Mexicans and Obtained Another From Dead Soldier at His Side—War Department Issued Orders For Discharge of Men With Dependents.

O. J. Wilson, an undertaker who helped to exhume the bodies of the American troopers killed at Carrizal and who arrived with them at El Paso, quoted a Carranza soldier as follows:

"'You should have seen the white teniente (Lieutenant Henry Adair) fight. He was just a boy, slim and weak looking, but he fought us like a madman. He operated his automatic pistol until it seemed like a machine gun, and when its work was finished he threw it at us and seized another from a dead trooper and fought us harder than ever. He was wounded, but still his bullets rained among us until one of our shots tore into his chest and he dropped dead.'

"The Mexican," continued Wilson, "pointed out the spot where Lieutenant Adair fell. Before it were strewn thickly the carcasses of Mexican horses, whose riders had been shot down by the officer. The soldier said Lieutenant Adair thus, single handed, mowed down a cavalry charge of the Mexicans, fanning his automatic from side to side.

"Shells were strewn everywhere about the place where Adair died. His fight must have been one of the most gallant ever made by an American officer against hopeless odds."

Without knowing his son had met death, Samuel Adair, father of Lieutenant Adair, died at Portland, Ore., after a lingering illness. His last words were: "Henry is now a captain. He has received his promotion."

Lieutenant Adair was to have been made a captain on July 1. Father and son probably will be buried at the same time.

How Discharge May Be Obtained.

Enlisted men of the national guard in federal service who have one or more relatives dependent on them for support may obtain their discharge upon application to their department commander.

Secretary of War Baker put this rule into effect as the result of letters to the war department pleading for the release of militiamen whose wives or other relatives were left in straitened circumstances.

The rule applies primarily to married men, but is so framed as to include unmarried men with aged parents, children or other relatives dependent on them. The number of men in the enlisted militia who can avail themselves of the order is estimated by the war department at less than 2,000.

Secretary Baker notified General Wood at Governors Island and the other department commanders that the soldier must file a petition to be discharged and must furnish proof of the dependency.

But if department commanders learn of soldiers who ought to apply for the discharge they must inform the soldiers of the right to apply for it, the order reads.

LLOYD-GEORGE'S CAREER.

Has Been Efficient Member of British Cabinets For Eleven Years.

Lloyd-George, who was recently appointed secretary of state for war, has been a member of British cabinets for nearly eleven years and has been singularly efficient in various positions of the highest importance. When the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman organized a Liberal government Dec. 10, 1905, he appointed Lloyd-George president of the board of trade, which position the latter filled until Mr. Asquith, who succeeded to the premiership April 6, 1908, made Lloyd-George chancellor of the exchequer. When the coalition government was formed May 25, 1915, Lloyd-George was chosen minister of munitions, a post he has held with marked success until he has now been made minister of war to succeed the late Lord Kitchener.

BATHERS KILLED BY SHARKS.

Two Tragedies Within One Week Along New Jersey Coast.

While hundreds of summer visitors looked on helpless, Charles Bruder, a bellboy in a beach hotel at Spring Lake, N. J., was attacked by a shark and lost both his legs. He died ten minutes after being brought to shore.

This was the second case of the kind on the New Jersey coast within a week. A young man lost his leg and died at Beach Haven.

The witnesses of the Beach Haven tragedy had a plain view of the shark. Its fins projected at moments above the surface of the water. But in Bruder's case there was no sight of the shark.

Bruder was just able to gasp "A shark bit me," and then he fainted. In a few minutes he died from loss of blood.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

Will you please tell me the advantages and disadvantages of wire wheels compared to wooden wheels?

Those who are in favor of wire wheels claim that their use effects a saving in tires, due to the heat radiating qualities of the steel spokes; that a wire wheel is stronger than a wooden wheel of equal size; that it gives easier riding, due to its shock absorbing qualities; that it is better in appearance. When in demountable form, in which most of the types are sold, tire changing becomes a matter of a few minutes. Quicker acceleration and more effective braking are obtained with wire wheels than with wooden because it is claimed the wire wheel has a light rim and hence the flywheel effect is reduced considerably. The wooden wheel with a heavy felloe when once started opposes the braking effort.

The wooden wheel contingent states that this type is able to withstand more side strain than the wire wheel; that it has a longer life, being little affected by the elements; that the use of demountable rims makes tire changing easy and that if this feature is applied to the wire wheel it has the characteristics of a wooden one, having a heavy periphery. If the demountable feature is not used on the wire wheel a whole wheel must be carried around as against a covered up tire when wooden wheels are used. The wire wheel usually costs more than the wooden of the same size. Wire wheel spokes may rust and are more liable to become loose than wooden spokes.

The wire wheel people claim that the wire wheel weighs less than the average tire and rim, to say nothing of the weight of the other parts of the wood wheel, and it is estimated that the five wheels necessary to be carried where wire wheels are employed weigh some 150 pounds less than the four wheels and rim used on tires equipped with wooden wheels.

Is it advisable to grind in new pistons with valve grinding compound?

Do not use any sort of valve grinding compound to grind in pistons. To lap them in it is simply necessary to run the engine for some hours under outside power.

The gas escapes from the carburetor on my car. I believe this occurs at the pin that shuts off the gas. I am of the opinion that the pin does not seat or that the cork is too heavy and does not float. Can you advise me?

The float in the carburetor may be adjusted too high, or, as you suggest, the trouble may be in the valve. If the float valve does not fit perfectly the gasoline will leak. If such is the case it is best to replace the old valve with a new one. Very often this valve may be reseated by tapping slightly, making sure to center the valve pin at the time. It is possible that the valve pin and seat are worn considerably, and if so it would be most advisable to replace them.

Does any harm result from using circular movement instead of reciprocating in manipulating piston lapping tools?

The best motion is a combination of rotation and reciprocation, but the desired results would not be obtained by giving them only rotary motion.

In timing the valves of a fifty horsepower engine is the allowance for expansion less on the admission side or intake and something greater in the gap on the exhaust side? State the number of thousandths if possible.

It is customary on the average engine to allow between a sixty-fourth and a thirty-second of an inch clearance between the valve stem and the lifter. You can hardly adjust to a one-thousandth of an inch, since the wear which takes place at this point differs more or less on the different valves. The difference in clearance on the intake side and on the exhaust side is not taken into consideration.

In adjusting the valve clearance it is best to observe the flywheel marks in order to have all the valves timed alike. This should be done rather than having the clearance in each case equal.

Can you tell me how to scrape and take up the wear on the crank shaft and connecting rod bearings of my car?

Unless you have to put in new bearings it is unnecessary to scrape them. A bearing that has been run for some time has a smooth surface and does not need this treatment. However, new bearings must be scraped with a tool known as a scraper, which any motorcar supply store should be able to furnish you. The process is one of smoothing the surface as much as possible. It is a matter of common sense and skill, and we do not advise any one to do it who has not had experience.

However, to take up the wear in the bearings you have—and this is all that need be done if they have not been burned out or damaged in some way—it is necessary only to take out shims and then tighten up the caps again to remove any lost motion. This applies to the connecting rod bearings as well as the main bearings. Try taking out one shim from each side of the cap first. Then see if this is not enough to permit of tightening up the cap so as to remove the play. If one shim from each side will not do it try taking two, etc. You must be careful not to tighten the bearings so that they bind. Do not try to turn the heads off the bolts in doing it, but set them up with reasonable snugness.

Do aluminum alloy pistons have the wearing qualities of iron?

Long tests have been carried out by car manufacturers using them, and they must have been entirely satisfied with the wearing qualities as compared with iron to warrant their using these pistons. The alloy is of a composition calculated to resist wear satisfactorily.

How do you calculate the proper size radiator of the tubular type for a 3 by 4 four cylinder motor?

The number of cubic inches radiator capacity required per horsepower largely depends on the construction of the radiator, the same radiator capacity not being used in cellular types that has been adopted in tubular. In fact, tubular radiators have not all the same water capacity because of the different cooling coefficients of them, due to the more or less effective radiating fins or flanges carried on the tubes. For a four cylinder motor with five inch bore and stroke the method used in determining its radiator capacity needed is as follows: Multiply the cylinder diameter by the piston stroke by the number of cylinders. In this case it is 100, and 100 linear feet of three-fourths inch tubing is used for such a motor. Should the tubing be three-eighths inch then 200 feet are needed. One foot of the three-fourths inch tubing has 210 square inches of cooling area on the spiral fins, and one foot of the three-eighths inch tubing has 124 square inches cooling area. This gives practically 20,000 square inches cooling area for a 5 by 5 four cylinder motor, which, according to the formula rating, would be forty horsepower. This carried still further would give practically 500 square inches of radiating area per horsepower. From another point of view the 100 feet three-quarter inch tubing would contain 520.04 cubic inches of water, which works out practically thirteen cubic inches per horsepower. If the radiator is of the cellular construction different figures apply.

In a new motor it should not be necessary to clean out the carbon more than once in 3,000 miles. As the motor becomes older and the piston rings wear, forming an oil seal which is less tight, more oil works its way into the combustion chamber, with the result that carbonization is more frequent and cleaning will have to be resorted to more often. The estimate of 3,000 miles is a very liberal one, as there are many new cars which run 5,000 or 6,000 miles without carbon trouble. As a general rule, it is a good plan to clean out the carbon when the valves are ground. The two operations can be performed at the same time because, with the valve caps removed or with the cylinder head taken off, as is done in some motors, the combustion chambers are accessible and can easily be scraped out.

What is magnalium, and how does it compare with cast iron for weight and tensile strength?

Magnalium is the trade name of an alloy of aluminum and magnesium. It is much lighter than cast iron, which has a specific gravity range of from 5 to 7, approximately. Magnalium has a specific gravity of 2.5, so it runs at least 50 per cent lighter than cast iron. Ordinary cast iron for motor pistons runs 18,000 to 20,000 pounds tensile strength and magnalium about 23,000 pounds.

What is the pressure per square inch on a three inch piston head at time of explosion, and how long would the pressure last if no outlet was supplied?

The pressure per square inch on a three inch piston may have any value within limits. The size of the combustion chamber, the temperature, the volume of gas taken, etc., are all factors. If no outlet is allowed and the temperature is kept constant at the time of explosion, the pressure will be constant. Any change in temperature will change the pressure.

What is the proper way to find out if there is any lost motion between the driving pinion and crown gear?

The best way is to remove the cover plate from the differential housing and clean off the gears so that the action in the assembly can be noted. Leave both wheels on the ground and place the gear shift lever in neutral. By means of a pipe wrench a firm hold should be taken on the propeller shaft and with the hand on the large crown gear the propeller shaft moved backward and forward. Any lost motion between the shaft and the crown gear can then be readily noted.

PLAINFIELD WOMEN AID JERSEY TROOPS

The sewing division of the National Special Aid Society of Plainfield and North Plainfield Chapter was organized hurriedly last week, as the result of a request from Adjutant-General Sadler to furnish 1,000 "housewives" or small sewing kits for the New Jersey troops on the border. Mrs. Laurence C. Whitall, of 325 Franklin place, was appointed captain of the division, and under her efficient management and with the help of a very able staff of lieutenants, Mrs. Norman H. Probasco, Mrs. Edward Carey Suffern, Mrs. J. S. Hansen, Mrs. W. W. Iredell, Miss Priscilla Fraker, Miss Mildred Cone, Mrs. Frank Raymond, and Mrs. Van Doren Van Fleet, the work has gone rapidly forward, and the mending kits will be shipped immediately to Mrs. Fielder, at Sea Girt, who has charge of the supplies for the troops, and will see that they are forwarded to the proper destination.

Of the 4,000 she is sending, the Plainfield and North Plainfield Chapter is thus furnished one-quarter. The thanks of the division are due to the Mercy Committee, who promptly came forward to take a share in the work; also to various business houses and individuals not connected with the society who have made donations. The Guild Room of Grace Church Parish House was put at the service of the division for cutting-out work.

The sewing divison is to be organized immediately upon a more permanent basis, and will hold regular meetings for the making of such other articles as may be called for. The National Special Aid Society aims to give all the women of the country an opportunity for practical patriotic service, and it is hoped that the work of the sewing division will appeal to many Plainfield women. Names of new members of this division may be sent to the division secretary, Miss M. G. Morse, 303 East Seventh street.

CREEK GIVES UP VICTIM

Matawan citizens who patrolled the creek where the tragedies of Wednesday afternoon occurred. Up and down Matawan Creek, in which the residents of that section of New Jersey now believe there is still a school of man-eaters, dynamite was repeatedly exploded with the hope that sharks still swimming between the nets which have been erected would be killed.

CLIMATIC CONDITIONS BETTER THAN BACK HOME, SAY GUARDS STATIONED IN ARIZONA CAMP

AIR IS MORE BRACING THAN THAT OF BERKSHIRE HILLS, ACCORDING TO PLAINFIELDERS, WHO ARE ENJOYING THEMSELVES.

EXPECT FEW REJECTIONS WHEN TESTS ARE HELD

Some Cases of Homesickness But These Will Wear Off—Living the Life of Army Regulars—Post Diggers Find the Ground Solid Adamant—Lumber Stolen From Camp Grounds—Novelty of Western Town Has Worn Off.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

Troop D Headquarters, Douglas, Ariz., July 15.—All of the militiamen from Jersey are being put through a second examination by the Federal authorities here and it is expected that the Plainfield troop will be reached this afternoon. These new tests are rigid and thorough, untirely unlike the casual examinations conducted at Sea Girt a few days before we left. A number of our boys have developed cases of homesickness, but aside from this all appear to be in as fine a physical condition as they were when they left Plainfield.

This homesickness has been brought on by idle hours on our hands. Orders have been issued not to work us hard during the heat of the day and as a consequence we keep pretty much within our tents, writing letters, thinking of Plainfield and exchanging yarns. The newness has worn off and we no longer find a novelty in visiting the town section.

Contrary to reports which we hear through letters that you have received in Plainfield we do not suffer from the heat. The average temperature in the daytime is about 110 degrees and the thermometer drops down to 60 degrees at night. The air is bracing and may be best likened to that of the Berkshire Hills. It puts new life into the boys and the heat has not bothered us a bit. I'll bet right now that you are warmer back in Plainfield than we are here.

This life makes a man out of a fellow in a few days. We have learned to obey our superior officers. It is far different than the drilling at Sea Girt. Here we are put through regular army drills and we are taught that obedience is the prime factor in all military work.

Several of the Troop D fellows, principally those who have been bragging about their muscles, have been put to work digging nine foot holes for posts on the camp ground. This ground isn't the kind you have in Plainfield. It best resembles solid rock after you get down a foot or two. The diggers have their work cut out for them and by the time they get the heavy clay out of a nine foot hole they are ready to lie down and take a nap.

Our meals are plain but good. When mess time comes around we are all as hungry as bears and we could eat anything. If you could see the boys get away with the food you'd be convinced that there was nothing the matter with them. All are well and anxious to move away from here. After you are in one place a while it begins to get monotonous. We got tired of Sea Girt and now we are getting tired of Douglas.

We hear the big guns boom from Carranza's rifle range which is only a couple of miles from here, they tell us. We can see barren Mexico across the border and the wonderful hills in this part of the country present one of the prettiest sights we have even seen.

Many of the fellows have found amusement in Douglas. Motion picture houses and ice cream stores are the favorite hanging out places during off hours. But a number of the militiamen are well nigh "broke." Postage stamps are rare things with some and that is probably the reason you people back home are not getting so much mail. The boys spent a lot of money en route to the border and considerable after they got here. They did not realize that it was going so quickly.

We get the Plainfield Daily Press regularly and it certainly has a lot of "customers" awaiting its arrival in camp every day. We don't miss a line in it and are particularly interested in what you have to say about ourselves. Reading matter of any kind is welcome here, especially newspapers from back home.

Douglas, Ariz., July 15.—A long-distance marriage enlivened the camp of the New Jersey brigade Wednesday night. Louis Bansemer, of Company H, First Regiment, was married by contract to Miss Ethel M. Sergeant, who is still in Newark.

Young Bansemer, clothed in his uniform, walked into the office of a local notary public and announced that he wanted to be married.

"But I'm not a justice," replied the notary, "and, besides, where's the woman?"

"That's all right," responded Bansemer, "all you have to do is take my acknowledgement of this," and he presented a contract previously signed by Miss Sergeant, signed it himself, had the notary affix his official seal, and left the Western official gasping.

"Doggone if those Easterners don't have us beaten for suddenness," remarked the notary.

Sergeant John C. Clark, of Bansemer's company, accompanied him and witnessed his acknowledgment. Miss Sergeant lives at 60 Heck avenue, Newark.

There was a flag presentation to the First Regiment Wednesday night at retreat. A number of Newark citizens raised a subsciption and bought a handsome national ensign, and at the sounding of "colors" the color guard brought the new flag and the State colors to the center of the camp. The Eighteenth Infantry band had been brought from its camp at the other end of the city especially for the occasion.

The mysterious disappearance of some lumber consigned to the Second Montana Regiment has caused some sleuthing around these parts. The lumber was to be used in building shower baths, shacks and places for the officers' tents. It was sent by a local lumber firm and directed to the camp of the Montana outfit. It never got there. And now the Montana men are unkind enough to declare that the men from Jersey stole the lumber.

This is denied vigorously.

"Why don't they say the Y. M. C. A. did it?" said one officer. "They're using more lumber than anybody else."

The Y. M. C. A. is building an immense entertainment hall for the troops, right near the First Regiment camp. Besides tables for writing and a place where magazines can be read, there will be a stage where minstrel shows and other entertainments can be given and a moving-picture screen will be put up.

MRS. BONGHAN TO BE SOLOIST AT CONCERT IN CITY PARK

The half hour of music which is to be given in the City Park tomorrow afternoon at 5:15 will be of special interest. It is the plan of the Public Recreation Committee to have special soloists from time to time, and the soloist tomorrow will be Mrs. Josephine Boughan, contralto of the First Methodist church. Mrs. Boughan needs no introduction to Plainfield audiences, having been heard here in both church and recital work, she has become a great favorite.

The center seats on the platform in the park are reserved for the Community Choir, and the seats on the sides are reserved for the public, and at least 200 may find these available. The Public Recreation Committee invites all to join in this half hour of song, and it is hoped that a very large number will respond to the invitation.

Special music by the children's choir will be a feature of the service. The Biederwolf song books are used and the children have taken up the songs, which have become so familiar to all, with a will and an unusually large choir of thirty sing well, considering the short time they have been rehearsing. The services are open to adults and all will be welcome to this and the services which are held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings of each week.

ADVISE PEOPLE NOT TO RELAX EFFORTS

Health Authorities Urge That Every Precaution Be Taken to Ward Off Disease.

Notwithstanding the fact that there are no cases of infantile paralysis, according to an official announcement by the Board of Health, the authorities advise the people of Plainfield and vicinity not to relax their vigilance and to continue to take every precaution that would prevent the development of the disease here.

Complying with the request of the Board, Plainfielders who have visitors at their homes are notifying the health authorities, thus enabling the latter to keep close watch on all persons coming from out of the city, and especially New York, where so many cases of the disease are found.

Physicians are hopeful that with the arrival of cooler weather the progress of the disease will abate. Everything possible is being done to break the epidemic and to find a cure for the disease, but this has not been accomplished as yet. Plainfield and North Plainfield are especially fortunate in not having any cases of infantile paralysis and the authorities hope that this condition will continue.

REPORT ALL SAFE ABOARD "HECTOR"

Small Boats Rescue 142 From Collier Cut in Two by Heavy Seas Thursday.

MANY VESSELS SEARCH

Navy Department Took Quick Action and Dispatched Ships to Her Aid After Last Call For Help Had Been Sounded.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

Charleston, S. C., July 15.—Although reports are conflicting it is believed this afternoon that the sixty marines, twelve officers and crew of seventy men who abandoned the big naval collier Hector when she grounded nine miles off the Charleston lightship are safe aboard the lighthouse tender Cypress and the tug Wilmington. This is the announcement coming from Captain Bryan, of the Charleston Navy Yard this afternoon: "Hector abandoned seven miles northeast of Cape Romain gas buoy, breaking in two."

Captain Joseph Newell was in command of the Hector when she left Port Royal Naval Training Station with sixty marines for Santo Domingo. The ship was caught in the terrific hurricane of Thursday and struck a reef while trying to make Charleston harbor convoyed by the steamer Alamo, which had gone to her aid, sixty miles off here.

Because of the high seas, the Alamo could not get close enough to the Hector to take off the men, when it was seen that she was breaking up, and they had to take to the small boats.

Late radiograms left their fate in doubt and early today many vessels at the request of the Government were searching for them when Captain Bryan announced they were safe and heading for Charleston. The last distress signal flashed by the collier had said the ship was breaking in two, that she was aground, her starboard rail was under water, and that the ship's boats had been lowered.

Washington, July 15.—There was much relief in the Navy Department today over the announcement that all hands had been saved from the Hector. After the last call for help from the sinking vessel, the big station at Arlington sent broadcast an appeal to all vessels in the vicinity to go to the Hector's aid. Secretary Daniels went to the department last night and added to the efforts to reach vessels in the vicinity.

SEA TIGER MAKES EFFORT TO ESCAPE

Throws Itself Against Net in Matawan Creek But Fails.

Matawan, July 15.—Although it had generally been supposed that the eleven-foot-man-eating shark penned up in the upper reaches of Matawan Creek had made its escape, a big shark, probably the same one, was sighted shortly before daylight this morning by one of Norman F. Tyce's watchers. Tyce is a member of the shark hunting expedition. The net which had been stretched across the creek under the railroad trestle was rent yesterday afternoon by the sea tiger in its frantic efforts to escape the dynamiting squads operating along the stream. Tyce was aroused from his sleep shortly after midnight by one of his men to supervise the stretching of another and more powerful net under the trestle.

It is Tyce's theory that the shark that killed young Lester Stillwell and Stanley Fisher is still lurking in the creek and it is his purpose to slay the man-eater. Matawan will not be satisfied until the monster that killed two of its residents has been dragged ashore. If the huntsmen are successful, the sea-slayer, dead, will be placed on exhibition in front of the Town Hall.

Scott Hopkins, an experienced shark hunter in Southern waters, is keeping a constant patrol off the mouth of the creek. He has a large power dory and carries a harpoon. In his boyhood days Scott sailed on a whaler and the harpoon to him is an ideal shark weapon.

In a closely played seven inning game in the Parker Field Baseball League yesterday afternoon the Shamrock A. C. took the measure of the Hebrew outfit by a score of 5 to 4. Joe Newell was on the firing line for the winners and allowed the Hebrews only two hits, both of those being made by Ed. Smith. Smith was the whole show for the losers, letting but one hit be garnered off his delivery. Poor support, though, lost the game for him. The score by innings:

SECOND GERMAN LINE PIERCED AND POINTS GAINED IN SMASH RETAINED AT GREAT SACRIFICE

LOSS OF LIFE HEAVY IN BATTLE TO WIN FEW FEET IN GRUESOME HAND TO HAND ENCOUNTER, BUT GERMANS FAIL TO CHECK ONRUSH.

DRIVE WEDGE INTO ENEMY'S HOLD AT PERONNE

Many Germans Taken Prisoners, Including Two Colonels and Other Superior Officers—Quickness of British Attack and Faculty to Recuperate in Short Order Baffles Opposition—West Kent Regiment Partially Rescued.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

London, July 15.—The enemy has been forced back to its third line of defences, it was officially announced today by the War Office in a statement dealing with the British offensive north of the Somme. Prisoners captured within the past 24 hours number 2,000 and include the Third Prussian Guard's regimental commander. Carrying the German second positions more easily than those of the first line two weeks ago, the British army was today on the coveted ridge northeast of Longueval, looking across the Bapaume Ridge, which seems to be the present objective.

The British held all their gains after yesterday's intensely bitter fighting on the Somme, which enabled them to break into the German positions on a front of four miles to a depth of one mile at one point, and to capture three villages—Bazentin-le-Petit, Bazentin-le Grand and Longueval. And they did it with fewer casualties than in the first thrust, despite the frequent German counter attacks.

Berlin officially is silent about British gains, but announces the fighting is very violent. While French reports indicate the day was almost without activity on their entire front, the German report claims the repulse of French attacks south of the Somme and at Verdun.

The struggle with the British continues today in the wood beyond Longueval and on the high points of the ridge.

A striking incident of yesterday's assault was the rescue of some of the British West Kent Regiment who were cut off from their fellows in Trones Wood in the furious fighting two days ago, and had managed to hold out, completely surrounded by Germans, for forty-eight hours, until their comrades' charge swept their enemies back.

Paris, July 15.—Powerful attacks were launched last night by the Germans against French positions along the entire Verdun front, but according to a statement issued today by the War Office all were repulsed on both sides of the Meuse. German troops in great masses were flung forward against the French line. Four separate assaults on a grand scale were delivered against the French in Avocourt Wood, in the sector of Vaux, in Chaptire Wood, and in Apremont Forest. Despite the vigor with which the attacks were pressed forward all broke down under the fire of the French infantry and machine guns and the curtain bombardments from artillery. In the sector of Fleury, north of Souville, there was a bombardment of the utmost intensity.

The Petrograd correspondent of the Paris Journal in a despatch to that paper says that the enemy is concentrating seven army corps before Kovel in an effort to not only stem the Russian advance but with the hope of recapturing Lutz. Russian preparations to force a passage of the Stockhod continue on an immense scale.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY BUILDING TRADES COUNCIL

At the weekly meeting of the Building Trades Council held last night the annual election of officers for the ensuing year was held with the following result: President, H. H. Following the election the usual routine business was transacted and a discussion held concerning the present building situation.

INSPECTED SCOUT CAMP.

The Board of Health of Fanwood inspected Camp Ackerman yesterday and found the camp in unusually good sanitary condition. The inspector was most pleased with the fact that there were very few flies in evidence around the camp. The cook shack, the water supply, the disposal of garbage and the food supply all came in for inspection and all were credited with being in first-class condition.

OPEN AIR SERVICE.

The services "under the trees" at the Park Avenue Baptist church are attracting many worshippers. The Camp Fire Girls will be present in costume and sing. In the morning Dr. Hudson will preach on "Knowing One Thing."

TRINITY Y. P. S. C. PICNIC.

The society is planning for a festival to be held in the near future, the exact date to be yet dcided.

GARWOOD ARTISTS MEET TEETOTALERS

Jim Scott Will Attempt to Put An End to Losing Streak.

The Garwood baseball team will be the visiting aggregation at Avon Oval tomorrow. At the expense of this team, Manager Jim Scott will try to put an end to the losing streak of his Sunday outfit.

The Tabs have been playing good ball in the City League, having won four straight games, but their work on Sundays has been considerably off color. The leaders of the Abstainer club do not seem to be able to ascertain the reason for the inability of the team to trim at least a few of the clubs that are brought here on Sundays. In the game tomorrow the Teetotalers will use Jack Denny. Jack has been doing the bulk of the pitching on Saturdays and did not get a chance to show to advantage on Sundays. But, owing to the fact that today's scheduled game between the Hopes and the Tabs was called off, the elder Denny brother will be in fine trim for the weekly fray. Teeling will be behind the bat, as usual. The Garwood team has given no information regarding the material that will be used.

PLAINFIELD A. C. TRAVELS TO MANVILLE FOR GAME

The Plainfield A. C. baseball team has contracted to make the trip to Manville tomorrow and will do battle with a representative team of that place.

The local outfit will have Butler on the mound, with Bill Dodd, the Netherwood City Leaguer, behind the bat. Sam Davidson, the former Red and Blue hurler, will cover first base, with Sam Semer, another P. H. S. star, covering the keystone sack. Marsh has consented to play third, while Frank Mullin, the Farmer shortstop, will take care of that place tomorrow. Three City League stars will perform in the outer garden. They are "Soddy" Porter, of Hope Chapel; Frank Brennon, of the Tabs, and Campbell, formerly of the Farmers.

CONFERENCE OF BORO AND TOWNSHIP BODIES

Ways and Means of Preventing Spread of Infantile Paralysis Discussed.

A meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee that was attended by the Township Board of Health, was held last night in Excelsior Hall, when a thorough discussion of infantile paralysis was indulged in. Various measures to prevent the disease from getting into the township were discussed and suggestions were also made concerning the taking care of and isolation of children if any developed paralysis.

Mayor William H. Hoar called a special meeting of the Borough Council last night at his home on Martine avenue, that was attended by the Borough Board of Health. A general discussion of the prevention of infantile paralysis was held, but it was decided to bend the greatest efforts toward Fanwood sewage conditions, because it was the general opinion that the greatest danger lies in that direction. All residents that have not conformed with the borough regulations in regard to their sewer overflow will be given a stated time to do so and then action will be taken. Garbage inspectors will have to conform with the ordinances or be taken before the Recorder. Donald Riblet, secretary of the Board of Health, is spending the day making inspections.

Following the suggestion of Dr. F. W. Wescott, the borough authorities nor those in the township did not make any provision for having an isolated house or building prepared to be used in case any infantile paralysis cases developed, because Dr. Wescott said that if there were any, a place could be prepared quick enough.

Hereafter the Advertisements of HEARN Fourteenth Street, West of Fifth Avenue, N. Y. Will Be Found On PAGE 7

Watchung.

Dr. Richard Moldenke, George A. Schmidt and E. F. Feickert have been named as a board of protectors by the North Plainfield Township Committee to serve until January, 1917. The committee at a meeting Thursday night held a conference with representatives of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., in reference to the proper care of the old cemetery at Watchung. It was decided to take the matter up at once.

The question of widening Somerset street at Johnston's Drive in conjunction with the work now being done by the borough was discussed, and the improvement was favored. The cost will probably be added to the budget at the next meeting.

Steps were taken at the Board of Health meeting of the committee to safeguard the township against infantile paralysis. The two camps are to be isolated and carefully watched, as well as all boarding-houses, and a family which recently moved to the township has been placed under quarantine for ten days. The dumping of refuse on the New Providence road at Scotch Plains has also been stopped.

Children 16 years of age and under will not attend the Sunday-school session at the Wilson Memorial church in the future until such time as the infantile paralysis scare has passed. The session for older members will be held at the usual hour. Rev. Mebane Ramsay, pastor, will preach both morning and evening. Ephraim S. Ackor led the Endeavor meeting last night.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. JOHN KANDEKY HELD

The funeral of Mrs. Helen Kandelky, wife of John Kandelky, of Westfield avenue, Scotch Plains, whose death occurred on Wednesday after a lingering illness, will be held at her late home this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The service will be in charge of Rev. Raymond E. Marshall, pastor of the Methodist church of that place. The floral tributes from relatives and friends of the deceased were especially beautiful, set pieces being included in the number from the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church, the Missionary Society and Home Department of the Sunday-school of the Baptist church. Mrs. Kandelky was a member of all the latter. During the service Miss Nellie Hollingsworth will sing a selection, "Abide With Me," a favorite of Mrs. Kandelky.

Sweaters Gay in Color

The lines of the sweater have undergone several little changes this summer. The smartest are somewhat longer than their immediate predecessors, and imported models incline to raglan sleeves rather than the regular type. In some instances, Norfolk pleats are introduced, and the majority of them are belted or sashed in continuation of a style that is feminine and becoming.

The scarf knitted to match the sweater, but independent thereof, is is likewise something of a novelty. This scarf, by the way, is sometimes used like a girdle or sash, if the wearer has a fancy to change the lines of the sweater or diversify the appearance of that useful garment.

Sweaters fairly glow with color. To brilliant colors that made their appearance two years ago, have been added shades that may be described as violent.

White and black effects remain highly popular. There is a certain refinement and stability about this combination that gives it a permanent place season in and season out.

Several of the sweaters are of white, whose knitted surface is superimposed on one of black, and which has a border of solid black; then there are varieties which reverse this arrangement of color. For those who must have a spice of gayety, the border may be of Scotch plaid, also knitted.

Reliable Colors from Abroad.

Sweaters of pure silk are practically worth their weight in gold—or at least in silver. For those who cannot afford the possession of such, there are sweaters of silk fibre that wear very well, and which may, or may not, stand the intense rays of the summer sun.

It is said that all the sweaters which have come from Switzerland and England within recent weeks have been dyed in the old way. Those that have been subjected to dyes that are in a more or less experimental stage must be taken with the understanding that the manufacturer and the retailer are in no wise to be held responsible for the fading out or streaking of the garment.

Velour Topcoats

Any one who thought that topcoats belonged to a winter climate must be amazed at their steady growth with the hot weather coming on.

The reason is not difficult to find. We are indulging in the frantic pleasure of entering a new era; we must look sportive, whether or not we are. We must go to open-air events. We must look as though we are familiar with tennis championships, the decks of swift-going motor yachts, and horse racing, and topcoats of infinite variety are offered to aid in this appearance.

They are amazingly good looking. So far, we have left the designing of them almost entirely to the French, whether through inability or through indifference, one cannot tell.

Solid colors are used in the majority of topcoats, but there is no doubt of the strong grip that checks have. A thin, soft velour that crumples up in the hand like satin is the material to be chosen, and the checks in it are in various colors. Women who must be eccentric at all costs are wearing voluminous cape coats of this velour, checked off in exaggerated red, white and blue. As they pass by in motors, one instinctively feels like saluting the flag.

Striking Blouse Features

A large majority of the new blouses show a short peplum to be worn over the skirt. The peplum is, of course, of the blouse material, and is pleated or shirred. Often the blouse is cut longer than usual and a cord or belt is used to confine it in the same manner as the Russian blouses, though it is much shorter.

Many of the new blouses show chemisettes. The front opens over a full chemisette of chiffon or organdie. These front openings sometimes run straight from neck to belt, and sometimes are cut in a shallow oval form, in diamond shape or a square.

The combination of two colors is still good for all materials. Chiffon and taffeta, net and satin and crepe de chine and organdie are some of the combinations of materials. Shoulder capes and deep sailor collars adorn new blouses.

An extreme style which is coming in is the short-waisted, tight-fitting waist with a narrow peplum to fall over a skirt with a raised waist line.

The Small Waist Effect

The early Victorian idea is being pushed in regard to fall clothes and the modifications are as interesting as it is possible for the development of any fashion to be. While we hear on all sides that the waist is to be fitted more snugly it is usually accomplished by direction.

The full skirted section that is applied to many of the bodices certainly makes the waist appear much smaller. Women have for the past few years experienced such comfort that it will take a great deal of persuasion to get them to suffer any restrictions in the way of tight corsets.

Hoops we may employ if they will give the desired effect of a small waist, but never the tightly-laced corset of a few years ago that made us all look like hour glasses.

Lingerie Frocks in Vogue

There is an effort being made to make lingerie frocks fashionable again by some of the fine dressmakers. Now that laces and embroidery are in again this seems to be the moment. Some lovely frocks are seen made of finest white batiste with heavy French embroideries in very high relief and combined with flounces of eight or ten inch flat, or lace of the Valenciennes type.

GOVERNOR'S PLEA NETS $500 FUND TO HELP SOLDIERS AND THEIR DEPENDANTS

Representative Delegation of New Jersey Men Attracted by Governor's Day Program—Colonel Colgate Hailed as Logical Republican Candidate for Governor and H. Otto Wittpenn's Stock is the Highest on Democratic Side.

(Special Service of the Daily Press.)

Sea Girt, July 15.—Governor James F. Fielder appeared in a new role yesterday afternoon, when in a few minutes he raised over $500 for the fund to help the soldiers and their dependents left behind when they went to the Mexican front. Mounting one of the brass cannon, on the lawn in front of the Little White House, he clapped his hands to attract the attention of his 350 luncheon guests and asked them to be generous when several volunteers passed hats through the crowd.

"We had planned to have troops here for this Governor's Day gathering," said the Executive, "but the mobilization has deprived us of that privilege. The men went to the Mexican front at great inconvenience and great sacrifice, and left behind them many dependents. They have gone to work for us and for the whole country, and we should show our appreciation by trying to help those left behind, and also by providing comforts for the soldiers.

"The women of the State have formed the New Jersey Women's Relief League, and have elected Mrs. Fielder chairman of the organization. Now I want to help you men a little by doing something for the boys and their families."

Mrs. Fielder was delighted to find upon counting the contents of the pans that $503.36 had been contributed. Nearly every contribution was a bank note, and not a few were large ones.

The gathering attracted one of the most representative groups that have ever attended a Governor's Day reception. At the luncheon, the Executive was flanked on one side by Supreme Court Justices Gummere, Kalisch and Swayze, Congressman R. Wayne Parker, and former Governor Franklin Murphy, while on the other side sat former Governor J. Franklin Fort, Bishop Edwin S. Lines, James Smith, Jr. and Otto H. Wittpenn. And the political and social position of those nearest to the Governor was typified all through the throng. Party lines were nearly forgotten for the moment, although there was plenty of gossip. The visitors were from Essex, Morris and Ocean County, and by the time they left, late in the afternoon, it was possible to get a good line on the present condition in both parties in those counties.

Colonel Austen Colgate was naturally hailed on all sides as the logical Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, in the absence of his only real rival, Senator Walter E. Edge. The Essex crowd are backing Colgate to the limit, and the Colonel has given up all business to wage a vigorous campaign from now until the primary. His adherents said that they were well satisfied with the way things were going for him in all counties except Union, Passaic and Bergen, and that they expected to clear things up there very soon.

On the Democratic side Otto H. Wittpenn apparently is to have an easy time of it for the nomination for Governor, as Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin, his only avowed opponent, is expected to pull out of the race in a few days. Mr. Wittpenn spent the entire afternoon here, and said that he was very well pleased with his prospects, not only for nomination, but election as well.

The United States Senatorial situation in both parties seems to be very much "up in the air," and no predictions of any kind were made by men in either party. Former Governor Murphy was present with his little boom, but aside form the men from Essex and Uncle Dan Voorhees of Morris, little interest was shown in his prospects. The Ocean County men said "they were just waiting to see what Governor Stokes is going to do," and similar reports came from other sections of the State. Mr Stokes seems to be the dark gentleman in the wood pile, for not only Mr. Murphy, but for former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen as well. It was said that Mr. Frelinghuysen is making quiet but steady headway wherever he has gone about the State, and that people will be surprised at the vote he will get outside of Essex County, provided Mr. Stokes does not run. Many ventured the prediction that if Stokes is a candidate he will get a great many votes. It was pointed out by Essex men that even in that county Murphy will not get all the vote, as the former Progressives are not for him, and will turn to Stokes or Frelinghuysen.

In the Democratic ranks the only candidate present was Frank M. McDermott, who has become a perpetual candidate recently. He was on hand, but somehow or other did not get into the limelight as much as other candidates. The discussion of the relative chances of Farmer Orator James E. Martine and Attorney-General John W. Wescott, brought forth the fact that so far as the politicians are concerned Wescott seems to have the best of it, but that Martine is "there when it comes to the dear people," as one man put it. "There is not much choice," continued this leader. "Both have been making the same political speech for the last twenty years, and the State would be just as well off with one as with the other. Martine has the advantage of being in office at the present time, and it would not be surprising to see him renominated. Of course, his re-election depends entirely upon what the Republicans do at the primary in September."

The Congressional situation in the Fifth district also came in for considerable discussion during the day. "Uncle Dan" Voorhees, for many years the Republican leader in Morris County was here, and so was Edward Ehlers, the county chairman. Ehlers declared that John H. Capstick would be renominated and reelected, but "Uncle Dan" refused to commit himself on that score. Both admitted that there has been much opposition to Mr. Capstick because of his vote on the McLemore resolution, this opposition coming especially from the commuter towns in Morris and Union counties, where there are many voters. Discussion of a probable candidate in case Mr. Capstick should not seek re-election brought out the name of former Congressman Charles N. Fowler as a possibility, and it was said that he would take the race. Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, was also suggested, but friends here stated that he would not permit his name to be used so long as Mr. Capstick remained in the race.

In Morris County the only fight that has developed thus far is between Assemblyman Harry V. Mutchler and Senator Charles A. Rathbun for Senatorial nomination. The Mutchler supporters say that they are going to have an easy time of it, but Rathbun is equally confident that he will be again selected. Both were present all day.

Down in Ocean County there is a fight all along the line, and the Democrats are sitting back, hoping that in the settling of their internal troubles the Republicans will make it possible for the former party to "bring home the bacon." The fight is so bitter between Assemblyman David N. Conrad and Senator Thomas A. Mathis for the Senatorial nomination that the factions are taking sides for Governor and Assemblyman. Mathis and his followers are supporting Edge, and Howard Chafey of Point Pleasant, for Assembly, and Conrad and his friends are lined up for Colgate and Harry T. Hagaman of Lakewood for Assembly. About the only one that seems certain is that Hagaman will get the nomination he is after. There has been a redivision of members of the party, so that any prediction as to the outcome otherwise would be merely guesswork, although some of the Democrats who were present from the county seemed to think that Mathis' chances are the best at the present time. On the Democratic side the slate was fixed during the day yesterday, as Dr. Joshua Hilliard, of Manahawken for State Senator and Chester A. Grant, of Lakewood, for Assembly. Dr. Hilliard is about as strong a man as the party can put forward, and while he would not admit yesterday that he would take the place, he also refused to deny that he was a candidate.

Taken all together the gathering was the most successful of the kind that has been held here in many years, and old-timers cannot remember when so representative a group gathered as guests of a State Executive. Next Friday the leading men of Bergen, Passaic, Sussex and Warren counties will be the guests.

"You know the $1.69 sweater?"

"Yes, madam," the clerk answered as she turned quickly to her stock.

The dainty little woman put up her hand as if to stop her.

"Oh no, don't get one. I just wanted to tell you about it. I guess it was two years ago—Wasn't it two years? (turning to her small daughter for corroboration)—that I bought a sweater here for $1.69, and, well, I just can't wear it out." Smiling as she pushed up her veil she continued. "And when I tell people how much I paid for it, they just won't believe it."

Just a bit of sincere praise from a customer, for that conversation took place in our sweater department this week. We hope that many people think as well of values in all our other departments, because that's what the Hearn name has stood for during 89 years—for real value as well as for low prices.

And, since we're telling what we hear, you might as well know that in the Blouse Department customers are continually remarking—"My, we don't find blouses like these in other stores and at such absurdly low prices," or "Such variety, too."

This week there is a most "various variety," too—if one could say such a thing. The wonder is how one fabric could be so different in so many blouses, for they are mostly of Georgette crepe. Some extremely simple ones in white with just a frill or a little lace edging or perhaps pleated ruffles on collar or cuffs—so pretty enough to blow away if they were made a little heavier by let or be[illegible]very—in entirely new colorings. [illegible] of these lovely blouses really suggest flowers as delicate as orchids in their coloring, and as unusual in color as flowers ever are to be. [illegible] are green, another brown and [illegible] another deepest blue and tan. Of course there are dozens of styles of [illegible] in crepe, silk and cotton and [illegible]—some most feminine [illegible] soft silk, in spite of their [illegible].

There are bags even some waterproof [illegible] for the seashore. Handbags [illegible] silk in moire and other silks [illegible] tastefully lined in dainty floral patterns. Many week-end bags—and travelling cases of leather are lined with silks that match any color scheme.

There are sunshades in quaint shapes and patterns that seem made to wear with the prim little frocks of flowered voiles that look so very cool with their dainty white surplices.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

The condition of the negro race in New Jersey is a shame and disgrace on the leaders. They are not helping to lift the race. I have made a special study of all races for the past twenty years, and I find that the white man will help the negro, but we fail to help ourselves. The white race thrives through the help of each other and we must do the same. Not one dollar has been given to help the condition of the race and not one dollar is spent for the race. How can we expect to improve? This statement is made to safeguard the uneducated men and women who are struggling for independence. We have more than 100,000 negro men and women in the State of New Jersey. Education means to improve, not to disgrace. I set my hand and seal to the above to be a true statement.

OUR CITIZEN'S DEMAND

Fully Complied With.—A Plainfield Resident Furnished It.

There are few items which appear in this paper more important to Plainfield people than the statement published below. In the first place, it is from a citizen of Plainfield and can be thoroughly relied upon. In the second place, it indisputably proves that Doan's Kidney Pills do their work thoroughly and not temporarily. Read this carefully:

Mrs. S. Driscoll, 540 West Front street, Plainfield, says: "I had a dull pain across the small of my back and in my sides that clung to me constantly and any hard work made me worse. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells, especially when stooping or lifting and I felt weak and run down. I tried plasters and other medicines, but nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Drug Store. They made a lasting cure."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Driscoll had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Available "Places to Live" Have An Unfailing Interest for Most "People!"

BUILT IN BLOOD.

Petrograd, the Artificial Capital of the Czar's Dominions.

Travelers speak of Moscow as the heart of Russia, the real Russian city, and dismiss Petrograd as an imitation of other European capitals. But to me Petrograd seems more characteristically Russian, with its immense facades of government buildings and barracks marching along as far as the eye can reach, broad streets and mighty open spaces.

The great stone quays along the Neva, the palaces, cathedrals and imperial avenues paved with cobbles grew under the hands of innumerable serfs chained in a swamp by the will of a tyrant and were cemented with their blood, for where Petrograd now sprawls for miles and miles, a city built for giants, was nothing but a feverish marsh a hundred and fifty years ago.

And there, where no roads naturally lead, the most desolate spot, the most vulnerable and the most remote from any natural center of the Russian empire, Peter the Great had a whim to found his capital. Twenty thousand slaves a year for ten years were killed by fever, cold and disease in the building of Petrograd.

Nine times the court nobles themselves conspired to wreck the hated city and force the court to return to Moscow; three times they set fire to it, and three times the czar hung them at the doors of the palaces he had forced them to build.

A powerful section of the reactionary party has always agitated for the restoration of Moscow as the capital, and it is only in the last twenty years that the population of Petrograd has not been artificially kept up.—John Reed in Metropolitan.

PARTING SALUTATIONS.

Those Used In Different Nations Are Very Much Alike.

The parting salutations of various nations are strikingly alike. The vale of the Latins corresponds with the similar expression of the Greeks, and, though piety is not expressed distinctly in either, it was doubtless understood, for who can be kept in health without, as the ancients would say, the will of the gods?

The Greek word perhaps has a higher signification than the Latin, for it was not a mere complimentary salutation. St. John forbids it to be given to heretical teachers.

The French on taking leave say, "Adieu," thus distinctly recognizing the providential power of the Creator, and the same meaning is indeed conveyed in our own word "goodby," which is a corruption of "God be with you."

The Irish in their warmth of manner and love of words often extend the expression.

A well known guide, upon one of our friends leaving one of the loveliest spots in Wicklow, shook hands with him heartily and said in a voice somewhat more tremulous through age than it was when Tom Moore loved to listen to it:

"God Almighty bless you, be with you and guide you safely to your journey's end!"

This salutation, when used thoughtfully and aright, has not only a pleasant sound, but deep meaning.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

When He Was Bad.

It has been said that you never know a man till you travel with him, and certainly traveling has a tendency to bring out all the depravity innate in human nature. Out of this test, however, Benjamin Disraeli emerged with flying colors. This is what was said of him by Mrs. Austen, who, with her husband, traveled with him when he was quite a young man, as related in Mr. Monypenny's biography:

"Your brother," she says (the letter was addressed to Disraeli's sister), "is so easily pleased, so accommodating, so amusing and so actively kind that I shall always reflect upon the domestic part of our journey with the greatest pleasure. Your brother has behaved excellently, except when there is a button, or, rather, buttons, to be put on his shirt; then he is violently bad, and this happens almost daily."

SCOOPING UP WATER.

How a Fast Train Fills Its Locomotive Tank Without Stopping.

Mr. Cecil J. Allen, chief of the civil engineers' department, supplies in the Great Eastern Railway Magazine some interesting facts on "the picking up of water" by trains at full speed on long journeys. Locomotives, he says, are exceeding bibulous creatures. The engines of one large British railway alone consume some 12,500,000 gallons of water per annum. An express engine under normal conditions of running will consume from thirty to thirty-five gallons of water for every mile covered, taking a general average. On such a journey as that made by the "Cornish Riviera Limited Express," of the Great Western railway, from London to Plymouth, 225¾ miles—the longest daily nonstop run in the world—some four tons of coal are consumed against an average of no less than forty tons of water.

The troughs, Mr. Allen explains, have usually a length of just over a quarter of a mile and are laid perfectly level in the center of the "four foot." Water is taken from them by means of a movable shovel shaped "scoop" under the tender, which is lowered into the trough as the train passes over it at full speed. The sharp edge of this scoop cuts off, as it were, the "top layer" of the water, which is forced up into a large vertical pipe and delivered through a mushroom head or an elbow at the top of the tender into the water tank. As soon as the water gauge on the tender indicates that the tank is full the scoop is raised again. According to the speed at which the train is traveling, it is possible to lift from 2,000 to 3,000 gallons in about fifteen seconds.—Westminster Gazette.

For The Home Builder

BUILDING PERMITS FOR THE PAST WEEK REPRESENT TOTAL EXPENDITURE OF $50,900

E. P. Thomas, of Belvidere Avenue, to remodel his home at Cost of $17,000—Standar d Aero Co. Plans to Enlarge Plant—Hillside Realty Co.to Erect Two Fine Dwellings —Detailed Description of Work.

Building took a big jump in Plainfield during the past week, nine permits being granted by Building Inspector T. O. Doane for a total of $50,900, as against a total last week of $11,950. Including this week's permits, the total amout represented by permits filed so far this month is $62,850, and for the year $559,515. Building seems to be on the increase all over the city and with a number of plans out for important buildings it is practically certain that the total for the year will top $1,000,000 by a fair margin.

The largest single permit issued during the past week was to E. P. Thomas, of Belvidere avenue, for alterations to his residence at a cost of $17,000. The improvements are to include a six-foot wide extension to the entire front of the present structure and one eleven-foot wide across the rear of the building. The additions will be two and a half stories in height, and of brick construction. Marsh & Gette, of New York, are the architects and the contracts have been awarded as follows: Masonry, B. F. Tallamy & Bro.; carpentry, John N. Wyman & Son; painting and decorating Woolston & Buckle; electrical work, Allen B. Laing Co.

The business of the Standard Aero Corporation, with a factory on North avenue, which recently organized, has increased to such an extent that it finds itself cramped for room, and plans have been filed in the last few days with the Building Inspector that will greatly increase the floor capacity. The specifications call for the erection of a 65 by 160 foot frame addition to the present building. The new building will be but one story in height and will cost $8,000. The Anchor Construction Company, of New Yorkk, has the general contract for the new building.

The Hillside Realty Improvement Company filed plans for two dwellings, one at the northeast corner of Putnam and Hillside avenues and the other at the northwest corner of the same thoroughfares. Both dwellings will be of two and a half stories in construction, and the former will cost $5,000, while the second will cost $5,400. The one to be located on the northeast corner will be a frame building, 33 feet by 28 feet. The house will contain nine rooms, two sleeping rooms being on the third floor, and sleeping porch on the second, and will be of colonial architecture. Johnson & Burns, of Hartford, Conn., are the architects, and William D. Bird, of this city, general contractor. The dwelling to be built on the northwest corner will be 30x30 x32. That house, too, will contain nine rooms, a sleeping porch and bath. As the other, it will be of frame construction. Slee & Bryson, of Brooklyn, are the architects, and William D. Bird, of this city, is mason and carpenter.

Plans filed for alterations and improvements to the Church of the Heavenly Rest, located on Clinton avenue, call for an expenditure of $3,400. An extension measuring 32 feet by 15 feet will be built on the rear of the present edifice. It will be of brick to conform with the main structure, and will contain the church loft and altar. This arrangement will leave all of the present building to be used by the congregation. C. W. Brazer, of New York, is the architect, D. Huff the mason, and Michael Rimmer the carpenter.

The permit was approved that was filed by Elizabeth M. Daboll, of 332 East Sixth street, calling for alterations to her residence that will cost $4,200. The additon will measure 15 feet by 20 feet, and will be two and a half stories in height. Marsh & Gette, of New York, are the architects, William C. Smith the mason, and Walter Apgar the carpenter.

Another alteration job filed that was granted calls for a two and a half story addition to the west side of the residence of J. Herbert Case, of 1126 Martine avenue, that will cost $2,000. It will measure 14x14x28 and be of frame construction. The plans were drawn by Wilder & White, of New York, the mason is H. D. Hulf, and the carpenter is J. L. Manning.

M. F. Watson, of 226 Grant avenue, filed satisfactory plans for the erection of a two and a half story dwelling for two families to be built at 812-813 South Second street. It will be of frame construction and cost $5,400. The architect is F. M. Lancaster, of this city; the mason, Frank Sherriff, and the carpenter A. J. Rhodier, both also of Plainfield.

Charles D. Banks was granted permission to build a garage on the rear of the property occupied by him at 1308 Watchung avenue, at a cost not to exceed $150. It will be of concrete block with rubberoid roofing.

F. T. Dickenson, of 535 East Second street, was granted the privilege of installing a gasoline tank on his property to hold not more than 200 gallons.

BUILDING NOTES

Jeremiah Manning, the contractor, is employing eighteen men at present in various parts of the city, mostly on new work. Lee Manning, his brother, also employs a large force of men on the new plant now being erected for the American Motor Corporation.

Plans are being considered for the erection of several houses in the vicinity of Myrtle avenue, and there is also some talk of extending that avenue into the borough.

Henry Liefke, who owns several houses in the West End, has been making a number of repairs to each one, including the building of new front porches.

Upon the completion and operation of the American Motor Company's plant on West Front street, where a large force of men will be employed, there will be a demand for homes, and plans for building a number of new dwelling are now under way.

The plans for the new City Hall having been approved, steps are now being taken to start the work in the near future.

The property at East Fifth and Sycamore streets, where the Y. M. C. A. plans to erect a handsome new building, has been cleared of all incumbrance.

It is up to Captain Charles A. Peterson to pick a site for Plainfield's new armory. As yet the captain has not made a decision, but is expected to do so soon. Company K wants the City Council to appropriate $15,000 toward the project and the councilmen have the matter under advisement.

Remarkable progress is being made in the construction of the new home for the State Trust Company at Park and North avenues. The structure is now practically inclosed and the interior work will soon be started.

While to a passerby considerable progress seems to have been made on the new postoffice building on Watchung avenue, it is a pretty slow proposition. The government's inspector has the eye of an eagle and every bit of the construction work has to be just so or he will not pass it. On several occasions material has been rejected and the contractor has been obliged to tear down some of his work and rebuild it. Some people think it is a safe bet that the building will not be occupied this year.

This is certainly a harvest time for the local craftsmen. Every man who is capable of doing anything in the building line is employed and receiving good pay. In fact it is difficult to find labor, as every contractor knows.

IN THE SUBURBS

The Equator Park section in Dunellen continues to boom right along. The two new houses which are going up there are being hustled, one being enclosed and the fram up for the other. Contracts have also been awarded for two or three more. Taxable property is certainly increasing at a rapid rate in hat end of the borough.

The work of putting in the plumbing, tinning, and heating at the new house which was tenanted by John Company on Penfield place, Dunellen, was completed last week by Contractor Frank Broshart. This is the house which wass tarteed by John H. Pierson and sold to the Apgar concern.

The contract for installing the plumbing, heating and tinning work in the new house of Cantractor Frank Burdick, on Walnut street, Dunellen, has been awarded to Contractor Frank Broshart.

A SIX-ROOM BUNGALOW

DESIGNED BY CHAS S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THIS bungalow was recently designed for a corner lot, with the narrow gable end to the east and the long side to the north. The size is 29 ft. in width and 49 ft. in length; it is also well suited to a west and south frontage. There are six good rooms on the main floor and a large attic space where two or more rooms can be easily arranged, but not included in the estimate which is $4,000 to $4,800, exclusive of heating and plumbing. The story is nine feet in height and the basement full and complete under the main house, not including the front piazza. The piazza is glazed in and screened and finished same as other portions of the bungalow. The inside finish is in Washington fir stained brown, the exterior walls finished in cement stucco with a "pebble dash" finish, done in a warm cream color, all of the outside trimmings, cornices, window frames, etc., stained brown and the sash painted white.

The roof shingles stained brown or green to suit the taste. The rooms are all good size and the arrangement is good, with all modern conveniences to make a complete home.

The arrangement of the large well-lighted living room with its wide fireplace, and the den opening in connection with a separate fireplace, also the dining room connected with a wide opening gives a very home-like interior. The two bedrooms connected with a hall and bathroom are also convenient. The kitchen is liberal in size, with cupboards, etc. The closed stairway leads up into the center of the large attic and the basement stairs underneath.

LITERARY

How Some Movie Producers Coin Money.

In the August Woman's Home Companion are printed a few of the nineteen thousand responses that came to the editor's request for support in a campaign for cleaner movie films. One writer says:

"I think I may fairly say I have given a great deal of study to the motion picture industry. I think its possibilities are absolutely untold. However, gnawing at the very vitals of this great institution is the insidious attempt on the part of certain film producers to play upon what I honestly believe is a minority interest in the 'off-color' picture.

"Today in front of our immense factory where close to one thousand girls pass out at noon was displayed an advertisement for a vulgar, suggestive production tonight, and in just as large letters as the advertisement of the production itself were the words 'Adults Only.'

"On our main street I have seen flaunted advertisements of film productions where children were admitted, that even adults ought to have been ashamed to look upon.

"Please understand I am not a prude. It is not because of any personal hurt that I write, but simply because I believe in the wonderful possibilities of the film industry, and I know that you have taken the step that must be taken if the industry is to be saved."

Official Red Tape.

A man sent 10 cents in postage stamps to the patent office at Washington for two copies of a patent. The stamps were returned with a letter saying that currency must be sent. The man sent a dime and at the end of a week was informed that the copies of the patent were exhausted and that the treasury department would return his money. A week later the treasury department advised him that it would take three weeks to audit his account and refund his 10 cents. The man had spent 6 cents for postage and the government twice as much. — Leslie's

CRAFTS PREDICT PROSPEROUS YEAR

Unusual Amount of Building Will Keep Contractors and Builders Busy.

NEW WORK IN SIGHT

Queen City Hotel to Be Remodeled This Fall—J. D. Loizeaux to Merge Lumber Yards—Fergus Motor Co. May Locate Here.

Reports of new buildings, alterations and additions for which plans will be filed with the building inspectors for approval in the near future, indicate that local contractors and builders will be busy all summer and well into the fall.

What is at present expected to create the biggest change in the business section of the city is the remodelling of the Queen City Hotel at Park avenue and Second street into one of the best hostelries in the State. The plans are being drawn by Oakley & Son, of Elizabeth, and although the exact specifications have not yet been announced, it is known that the front of the structure will be extended so as to make the building three stories high. The work will probably exceed in cost $15,000 and will be started, it is expected, some time in the fall. When completed it will be opened by J. A. Staats, the owner, as Peter Florsch goes to Perth Amboy.

Another realty move that will have a big effect on the growth of the East End is the consolidation by J. D. Loizeaux of his two lumber yards and making one large yard on South avenue, near the Netherwood station. Little is known at present about what Mr. Loizeaux intends to do, but when the plans are filed in ten days or two weeks, they will call for the outlay of one of the best equipped plants in the city and probably this section of the State.

Work is to be started this fall, it is understood, on an addition to Bethel chapel, located at Washington and Fifth streets, at a cost that will range between $6,000 and $7,000. Plans have already been drawn for the proposed work.

From present indications the fact that local business men are becoming interested, now appears certain that the Fergus Motor Car Company, manufacturers of a car that is said to be twenty years ahead of other machines of this country, will locate in the city, and growth afterwards will likely be rapid.

The construction of individual buildings throughout the city already gives indications of being on the increase and it is not at all improbable that several hundred may be erected by spring. The American Motor Corporation, that is now erecting a large plant on West Front street, will undoubtedly cause a large number of new families to locate here and naturally new houses will result, while the number that will result from the building of the Fergus plant cannot truly be estimated. Then, too, real estate operators report that the natural growth of dwellings will be at least on a par with that of other years, while additions and alterations are to be numerous. One job of this kind that is now in progress is at the Plainfield theatre on Second street. The interior of the building, which is closed for the summer, is being changed so as to afford additional comfort for patrons, and everything will be ready for the opening in September. The Zeek Baking Company on South avenue also has to enlarge its plant because of rapidly increasing business. The plans for a large addition and other improvements are now being drawn and will be filed in a short time.

CONTRACTS FILED.

Among the building contracts filed in the office of the County Clerk in Elizabeth during the past week were the following from this city: Isaac Chalfon with Joseph Nathanson, carpenter work, etc., new building, Monroe avenue, Plainfield, $675; Public Recreation Committee with John H. Dahl, entire work platform, Plainfield $610.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JULY 15, 1916.

MILITARY TRAINING IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

If military training comes into the High School, something else must go out, since the city High Schools are already so fully organized and the time so completely used that nothing more should be added. The question arises, therefore, whether military training, as generally understood, is valuable enough to crowd out some of the work the High School is now doing, presumably physical training.

What is it that we need as a preparation for producing efficient soldiers when our boys reach manhood? The main elements are:

Mental alertness;

Quickness to observe what is wanted and to do it;

Grit and courage;

Power to face a difficult situation and to carry it through, no matter at what personal cost;

Ability to follow leadership, to obey orders, to work together with one's fellows;

It is my belief that these things are best given to our boys by good physical training rather than by military drill. The right kind of physical training should build up the boys in an all-around fashion by proper drills intended to reach the various muscles and develop them and thereby promote the healthfulness and efficiency of the action of the heart and lungs and other internal organs. It should secure development of grit and courage by development of team play and contests of various kinds that will involve practically all pupils and call for individual initiative and development of judgment. It should develop obedience to leadership by drill exercises that call for prompt obedience of orders.

Military training does not do this as well as physical training, because:

It is narrow in its scope, it develops only certain muscles, it is not such as will give an all-around development intended to vitalize the inner forces of the body.

It is not suited to growing boys, but rather to men who have reached the maturity of their physical development.

It is claimed by those who have studied the matter to be at times even harmful to undeveloped boys.

Boys cannot undergo the hard instructions and requirements of a military camp. The military instruction received in school would be, at best, play instruction and would not amount to much when it came to real preparation for war.

Recommendations:

1. I would suggest a careful, systematic system of physical training calculated to build up the boy and develop the health, which should be required of all high school pupils, girls as well as boys.

2. Expand athletics so as to include practically all pupils; create a play spirit that should reach the whole mass of the school; develop contests of various kinds that shall involve not simply the traditional teams, but as far as possible, the whole school body. I believe that New York city, in its public school athletic league, is in this way doing more valuable work in preparing future soldiers than is possible by military drill in high school. Germany, the greatest military nation, does not give military drill to its boys, but Germany is also the greatest nation in its devotion to athletic drills.

3. Encourage and develop the Boy Scout movement, which will teach boys how to care for themselves and will develop camp life, knowledge of hygiene and other fundamentals preparatory to a military camp.

4. Supplement this by vacation camps for all boys over eighteen, not simply the high school boys. It should be recognized that provision for training high school boys reaches only a fraction of the boy population, and that fraction that really is least in need of this all-around development. Any plan of preparedness that is to be really effective should bring into its operations those boys that are not in the high school but have gone to work.

5. Institute real military preparation in the colleges and technical schools and by means of summer camps after the fashion of Plattsburg.

H. M. MAXSON.

- Proctor's Theatre -

The photoplay attractions appearing at Proctors' Theatre this evening include Charlie Chaplin in his latest comedy success, "The Vagabond," which is regarded by many of his admirers as his best effort, both in theme, fun-making possibilities, and the opportunities it offer the star to display his eccentric comedy. In addition two famous Essanay stars, Warda Howard and Ernest Maupin are co-starred in an exceedingly cleverly told dramatic offering entitled "The Regeneration of Margaret." Emma Hunter and Harry Benham are featured in "Through Flames to Love," and a Vitagraph comedy entitled "Her Loving Relations" completes the program.

Starting Monday and continuing throughout the rest of the week the management have engaged Gertrude Hornidge, soprano, to introduce one of the latest novelties entitled "Film Songs." Miss Hornidge will render some of the most popular and latest song hits, and while she is singing the song is shown on the screen in story form. This is a unique innovation, and has been greeted with much enthusiasm and delight wherever introduced. Miss Hornidge possesses a splendid soprano voice and formerly appeared in several of the Metropolitan Opera House productions, and will appear at Proctors' at all performances, both afternoon and evening.

The feature photoplay production Monday is a Metro offering entitled "Playing With Fire," in which Olga Petrova, one of the greatest of emotional actresses, is starred. Other features include the 11th episode of "The Mysteries of Myra," and a rip-roaring L-Ko comedy entitled "How Stars Are Made," with Alice Howell, one of the most versatile of screen comediennes, assuming the leading role.

On Tuesday the headline photoplay will be "The Innocent Magdalene," a Fine Arts-Triangle production with Lillian Gish starred, while on Wednesday Theda Bara, the film fan's favorite, will appear in a modernized American version of the internationally famous stage success "East Lynne."

WINTER'S 80TH BIRTHDAY.

New York, July 15.—Hundreds of names well known in dramatic, literary and journalistic circles were signed to the felicitious messages that were showered upon William Winter today to remind the venerable dramatic critic that this was the 80th anniversary of his birth. Mr. Winter is a New Englander by birth, but virtually the whole of his active career was in connection with New York publications. With half a century of brilliant service to his credit, he was recognized as the ablest as well as the oldest dramatic critic in America at the time of his retirement from active work several years ago.

The Summer Romance.

Oh, where are the lovers of yesterday,
Who strolled along the beach?
He had the grace of a D'Orsay—
She was a lustrous peach.

He was a foreign count, he said,
She was a rich man's daughter.
It was enough to turn her head—
The way this Apollo sought her.

He wooed and he won her heart and hand,
Back in the pale moonlight;
They plighted their troth—it was simply grand—
An evening of rare delight.

'Twas an act of kindly Providence—
Naught else was this happy meeting;
But neither of them seemed to have the sense
To know the other was cheating.

Where is the romance of yesterday?
It passes beyond the ken;
She's back slinging hash in a punk cafe,
And he's selling ribbon again.

A language that's beyond compare;
But one thing has been overlooked—
In Esperanto one can't swear.
There does not seem the slightest doubt
This language new will fail right there.

Will Esperanto ever do
For him who gets up in the night
To marathon with a squalling kid
Who kicks and squirms with all its might?
When he treads firmly on a tack
His English will come back all right.

How will the chauffeur get along
When with a final wheeze and grunt
His car gives out nine miles from home,
Which is not an unheard-of stunt?
Will Esperanto be his choice
Of languages? Indeed, it won't.

The ultimate consumer, too,
Is one whom we must not forget.
When he finds that his coal is gone
And higher prices must be met,
Can Esperanto e'er suffice
To voice his burning thoughts? Not yet.

A few days ago a gentleman and his wife stopped at one of our hotels and were given a room with bath.

"What in tarnation did that durned clerk mean by givin' us this kind of a room?" angrily demanded the man.

"Why, what's the matter now, Ed?" asked the wife.

"Matter? Can't you see there is only one door leadin' to the bathroom, and naturally any guest of the hotel who wants to use the bathtub has got to walk through our room to get to it. Guess they don't think we want any privacy at all."

STRIKING DIVERSITY IN SCHOOL BUDGETS

Newark on Basis of Population Spend Eleven Times as Much as Baltimore.

Surprising differences have been revealed by a recent investigation into evening-school expenditures of the 21 leading American cities, made by the Department of the Interior through its Bureau of Education. Newark, N. J., the highest city on the list in per capita expenditures for evening schools, reckoned on the basis of total population, spends over 11 times as much as Baltimore. Newark's expenditure is $172,000, or 44.3 cents per capita, whereas Baltimore with 579,000 population spends only $2,000 for evening schools or 3.9 cents per capita.

Pittsburgh and Detroit, which are in the same population groups as Baltimore, spend 18.6 cents and 11.9 cents, respectively. Los Angeles and Buffalo, each with about 450,000 inhabitants, spend, respectively, 26.6 cents and 24.2 cents, as contrasted with Cincinnati and Milwaukee, also in the 400,000 class, which spend 8.8 cents and 5.7 cents, respectively. New York city, first in point of population with 5,333,000, and Kansas City, twenty-first on the population list with 284,000, both occupy consecutive positions in the schedule, spending 17.4 cents and 14.1 cents, respectively.

Boston and Philadelphia are considerably below these figures, with 8.6 cents and 7.3 cents expenditure per capita, respectively, yet both of these cities count their foreign born by the hundreds of thousands and their non-English speaking inhabitants by the scores of thousands.

Chicago and St. Louis spend like amounts—10.2 cents per capita—although these cities differ widely in population and in the character of their immigrant problems. Seattle and Cleveland are far apart from almost every point of view save per capita expenditure on evening schools. Their expenses on this account are 9.6 cents and 6 cents, respectively. Minneapolis spends 7.9 cents per capita, while New Orleans and Jersey City are close rivals with 6.1 cents and 6 cents per capita, respectively. Washington, with its Congressional appropriation of $20,000 per year, just escapes trailing along at the end of the list. It expends only 5.6 cents per capita on evening schools.

While these figures do not have any necessary connection with the character of the work accomplished, and while there are undoubtedly varying conditions to be considered, yet it must be admitted that per capita expenditure on evening schools gives some measure of the community interest in this type of work.

Evening schools offer almost the only means of combatting illiteracy and inability to speak English among adult aliens, two disabilities which have already reached disquieting proportions in the United States. Society has stamped both as liabilities, and the public weal demands a united effort to discharge such liabilities. Elimination of illiteracy and inability to speak English is only one form of educational preparedness. Are the school budgets of the 21 leading American cities making due provision to meet this responsibility?

ENORMOUS ECONOMIC LOSS FROM DISEASE

Health Department Estimates to Total of $928,234,880 From Typhoid and Malaria

Washington, D. C., July 15.—"The estimated economic loss which our nation suffers each year from typhoid fever and malaria alone aggregates $928,234,880, leaving out of entire account the sorrow, the unhappiness, the misery, and the inefficiency which follow in their train." Senator Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana, today addressed the Senate on the subject of "Rural Health—America's First Duty."

"The greatest asset which our country can have," said Senator Ransdell, "is the healthy American citizen, and valuable as it may be to increase the health of livestock and vegetation, it is of far greater importance that we throw every possible safeguard about the health of the man who is responsible for that livestock and vegetation. Over 900 million dollars lost every year! A sum which is sufficient to put our country into a state of preparedness equal to that of any nation in the world, enough money to give us the largest navy afloat and the most efficient army which the world has ever seen, is annually offered up as a sacrifice to two diseases which are entirely preventable.

"Enough money to pay the annual expenses of every college student in the United States is absolutely thrown away every year." Senator Ransdell estimates the grand total loss from typhoid fever at $271,932,880 per annum, and the loss from malaria at $694,904,750 per year; the total per capita loss from these two diseases being 09.46. By comparative estimates it was shown that the United States Government appropriated $5,016,175 for the investigation and prevention of the diseases of animal and plant life and only $1,917,566 for the investigation and prevention of the diseases of man.

RED LETTER DAY.

Calumet, Mich., July 15.—One hundred and sixty-three gold medals, with an aggregate value of nearly $25,000, were presented today to 163 employes of the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company as tokens of the company's esteem for their faithful service covering a period of 40 years or more. More than 1,000 other employes of the company received silver medals. The presentation of the medals was but one of the many interesting features in connection with the big family gathering held in celebration of the company's semi-centennial. Twenty thousand persons participated in the celebration. From Boston, where the headquarters of the company have always been maintained, came a party of several hundred that included among its members the general officers and veteran employes, together with the descendants of Alexander Agassiz and Quincy A. Shaw, the two Bostonians who first began the development of the Michigan copper mines in 1866, and whose families are still dom[illegible] in the control of the great prop[illegible]es.

He Darted Off With Her.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Elise Made Her Brother a Coat of Mail.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WHAT daddy told Jack and Evelyn at bedtime was the story of a princess. Elise, who tried to save her eleven brothers from a spell that turned them into swans every morning. "A fairy told Elise how to crush nettles with her bare feet," daddy began, "so that they became flax which she could weave into coats of mail. But if she spoke a word before they were made her words became daggers that pierced her brothers' hearts. All depended upon her silence and courage, you see.

"After the fairy had told her how to break the cruel spell Elise spent the whole night weaving a coat. She could not rest till she had saved her dear brothers. All the next day, while her brothers were sailing the skies as swans, she sat alone and wove. But the time fairly flew away, and she finished one coat of mail and began another.

"Then suddenly a hunting horn sounded among the mountains. The sound came nearer, and dogs began to bark. She was much afraid and rushed into her cave with all the nettles she had gathered. She tied them into a bundle and sat down upon them. Just then a big dog bounded forward from a thicket and another and another. They barked loudly and ran to and fro.

"In a few minutes all the huntsmen were standing before her cave. The handsomest of them was the king of the country. He stepped up to Elise. He had never seen such a beautiful girl.

"'How came you here, beautiful child?' he asked.

"Elise shook her head. She dared not speak lest her words become daggers. She remembered that her brothers' safety depended upon her silence. She hid her hands in her apron so that the king could not see how the nettles had blistered her fingers.

"'Come with me,' said the king. 'You cannot stay here. If you are as good as you are beautiful I will dress you in silks and velvets and put a golden crown upon your head. You shall live with me and have your home in my richest palace.'

"Then he lifted her upon his horse. Elise wept and wrung her hands, but the king said: 'I think only of your happiness. Some day you will thank me for doing this.' Then he darted off with her across the mountains, holding her before him on his horse. And all the huntsmen followed," daddy finished.

"Oh, daddy, couldn't you tell us just a little bit more?" Evelyn begged. And daddy gave her a big hug.

"Thank you, daddy!" Jack called from the stairs.

Household Hints

GETTING READY FOR THANKSGIVING.

This may seem a trifle early for this item, but forewarned is forearmed.

To serve eight people with Thanksgiving dinner for four dollars:

MENU.

Tomato Soup. Bread Sticks.
Roast Chicken with Dressing.
Mashed Potatoes. Gravy.
Cranberry Sauce. Baked Squash.
Vegetable Salad. Jelly.
Preserves. Pumpkin Pie.
Cheese. Coffee. Candy.

Cost of menu—Soup, two cans at 10c; 20c; chicken, $2; cranberries, 16c; potatoes, 15c; squash, 20c; vegetable salad, 30c; pumpkin, 10c; candy, 16c; cheese, 30c; eggs, 20c; milk, 16c; total, $3.93.

To Prepare Duck for Thanksgiving—Remove internal organs. Save liver, gizzard and heart. After singeing duck rub with a brush al lover with hot soapy water. Rinse several times in cold water. If it seems "gamey," as is sure to be the case, cover with cold water and let stand for an hour. Add one-half teaspoon soda.

Then rinse in fresh water, fill well with good pultry stuffing, sew up opening, rub all over with salt, sprinkle with pepper and dredge well with flour. Twist wings back, tie legs securely to body, turn neck back inside skin.

Place in roasting pan and lay across top several strips of bacon or salt pork. Pour a cupful of boiling water in pan and put in a very hot oven, basting frequently until well browned. Then reduce heat, cover up tightly, finish cooking slowly.

Fowl when properly cooked is well done, yet in no way dried out. About twenty minutes a pound should be allowed for duck, although the time will vary, of course, with the degree of heat. When done, place on a hot platter arranged with celery leaves, surrounded with sausages, and here and there decorate it with cranberries cooked in a syrup almost thick enough to candy them.

Gravy—Pour off all but about a cupful of fat; add to this an equal quantity of flour; stir constantly over the fire until brown, then pour in gradually boiling water to make the desired consistency and cook three or four minutes; season to taste.

THE TABLE.

Pot Roast of Fresh Pork—Take from one to six pounds of pork cut from the shoulder, without bone. Wash well, place in small cooking pot, add one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon paprika, one-fourth teaspoon sage, one-half teaspoon of table relish, and one large onion. Place over very low flame with a lid over it and cover the meat, after it starts to simmer, with boiling water. This should be enough water to cook the meat done if it isn't cooked too fast.

Pork Chops With Stuffing—Take nice pork chops cut right size for serving; season with salt, pepper and sgee, place in hot spider in which a little fat has been melted. After cooking well on one side turn over. Now have the desired amount of stuffing made as for fowl, with an onion cut fine, and made in flat cakes size of the chops. Place a cake on each piece of meat and brown in oven. Be careful not to cook the meat too much, as it can be taken up and the cakes finished in the spider, if necessary.

Mock Beef Tongue—Lean raw beef, 3½ pounds minced fine; six square crackers; butter size of egg; cream, one-half cup; three eggs; four teaspoons salt; 2½ teaspoons pepper. Warm butter and mix all together; mold into two halves, put in pan. Bake 1½ hours. Baste with water and butter, browning both sides. When cold, slice thin. Very nice for lunch.

English Scones—Six ounces flour, two ounces sugar, two ounces butter and lard, one teaspoon baking powder. Mix flour, sugar and baking powder together; roll butter and lard well in, then mix to a stiff dough with buttermilk or sour milk. Roll out about an inch thick, cut in rounds and bake in nice hot oven. English flour is not quite so heavy as the flour in this country, so use a little less than what is called for.

Mexican Rice—Cook together one cup boiled rice and one cup tomatoes. Add chopped red pepper and an onion size of walnut, two tablespoons sugar, one teaspoon salt, butter size of egg. Cook until onion is tender. Turn into baking dish, cover with bread crumbs, using half of the butter on top. Bake twenty-five minutes.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ethel Laments Ralph's Inability to See the Funny Side of Her Helplessness.

"Did you ever see anyone who had so much trouble with maids?" asked Ethel as she seated herself in Nell Morton's pleasant kitchen. "I keep finding things that Pearson woman has ruined when she was too drunk to know what she was doing. She was capable all right when sober. I'll say that for her."

"I told you about finding her pockets stuffed with my fine handkerchiefs, didn't I? No? You see, her skirt was thrown over the back of a chair in her room and I dropped onto it and leaned back. I was up there while she was 'sick.' I felt such a bunch between the shoulders and moved the skirt to make myself more comfortable. In doing so, I discovered that she had three pockets in the skirt all bulgy as baseballs. I have become suspicious since my experience with that thieving Clara, so I investigated and found six or seven fine handkerchiefs, a lace jabot, some white silk gloves and a veil."

"I should have thought those bulgy pockets would have showed when she wore the skirt." Nell was looking into the oven to see how her baking was coming on.

"Oh, the pockets were low down where the skirts were full. They were evidently planned as convenient receptacles for trifles she fancied." Nell shrugged her shoulders in light-hearted disgust.

"I pity all the poor slaves to servants," said Nell, closing the oven door. "Don't you enjoy being alone, even if you have to work a little?"

"I am too truthful to say that I do," laughed Ethel. "My improvement in cooking is not so much that you could notice it. I made a cake last week. It was put on the table day after day as regularly as the meal-time arrived. At first Ralph tried to eat it. He does try to encourage my futile efforts at cooking, but he had the nightmare, dreamed he was being run over by an automobile. He screamed so I was frightened almost to death. Since that I alone nibbled at the cake."

"You poor little mouse!" exclaimed Nell.

"When the thing got so hard I could not dent it with a knife I threw it out of the pantry window in a fit of disgust. The man who brought the coal used it to block his wagon wheel with, and it served admirably." Ethel laughed at the recital.

"I wish Ralph could see the funny side of it, but his sense of humor is not sufficiently developed," continued Ethel cheerfully.

"But you are really improving, are you not?" asked Nell in a tone of anxiety.

"Oh, yes, I can boil water without burning it and I can open a can of vegetables and warm up the contents. Ralph cooks steak well, and we are eating steak and so sustaining life." Ethel yawned over the dreary prospect.

"You know I will be only too glad to help at any time," volunteered the good-natured neighbor.

"Thank you; but I can not let you in for a life job like that. I am hopeless." Ethel looked at the dainty hands clasped in her lap.

"But what are you going to do?" Nell's tone was anxious.

"I never was good at solving riddles or puzzles. I am just muddling along till I can get another maid." There was no anxiety in her tone.

"By the time you have had a dozen maids as dishonest as the last two you will not have much left to steal." Nell took her golden brown cake from the oven and carefully turned it out on the breadboard.

"Why was I not born clever enough to do such things?" Ethel looked admiringly at the cake.

GIVE THE BABY A CHANCE
HEALTH AUTHORITIES ADVISE

Bad air, bad milk, overcrowding, poverty, dirt, ignorance, heat—these combine in summer to kill the city baby. It seems as though the brunt of the cities' sanitary sins were focused on the baby. The baby didn't ask to come, to live in a hot, dark, air-tight tenement, to be fed on dirty, half soiled milk, to be pestered with flies and mosquitoes. He is not responsible for any of these conditions and it is his right that he have fresh air, clean surroundings and decent food. The United States Public Health Service issues free of charge to all applicants a bulletin on "The Summer Care of Infants." It should be in the hands of every mother.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

JUST TO BREAK THE MONOTONY.

There is at least one "native son" who has had quite a varied career on the diamond. That man is Jack Martin, and, while at present he is a member of the "little known and less loved" Milwaukee Brewers, he has seen service in the fastest company there is.

Beginning his career on the sand lots of this city, Jack's ability to outdistance any two of his comrades on the bases and to outfield and outhit them time and again, soon attracted the attention of the promoters of professional games in this vicinity. Ernie Dorflinger and Bill Steele were at that time just beginning to think of baseball as a means of attraction. The first team that they put on the field was the one with which Jack signed. He had played ball, more or less, with several other teams, but it was as a member of that team, that the writer, at that time only a "kid," remembers him. The club was known as the Clinton Avenues and numbered among its players such stars as Adam Schott, Walter Nelson and Britt Martin. Britt, who is Jack's older brother, is still a ball player and is managing the Hope Chapel team in the City League. But to get back to Jack. The "speed boy" soon demonstrated that he was fully capable of holding down the shortfield position. He was very popular with the fans, whom he delighted with his one hand stops, stabs and pick-ups. At the bat, he was good and was a terror with men on.

The advent of Dave Driscoll, at present manager of a Jersey City Sunday team, brought Jack closer to the "big men" of the game. Driscoll, it is said, knows more men engaged in baseball, than any other man connected with the game. While here, Driscoll helped Dorflinger manage the team. Dave furnished the talent, bringing with him Billy Stallings, Eddie Stallings, Joe Harter, "Chick" Boyd, Bill Dalton, Wally Cosgrove, "Buster" Brown and Albin Carlstrom. Each of these players is well known today and each was a star at the time he played here. Britt Martin and Jack were the only two local infielders on the team at that time.

Jack announced one day that he was "signed up" by a big league scout. The scout was Arthur Irwin and the team to which Jack was assigned was the Petersburg club of the Virginia League. In the South, Martin was a sensation and was soon advanced to Richmond, where a faster and more profitable team was stationed. Richmond fans took to Martin like a duck "takes to water." It was not long before Jack was pushed forward once more. This time he joined Rochester and, later, the Yankees, being assigned to shortfield, where he performed to perfection. Unfortunately, he met with one or two accidents while with the Yanks. The most unfortunate of these mishaps was the one in which Jack was hit on the head by a cannon-ball shot from the "master mind of military machinery," Walter Johnson. Jack was out of the game for some time after this unfortunate incident. His batting ability was lessened considerably and he never recovered his old time knack of knocking the hide off the ball.

Announcement was made one day that Jack was through as a Yankee. He dropped back to the minors, for a short time, but was snapped up suddenly by Boston. He played well there, but was assigned to third, alternating with Charley Deal, who finally supplanted him. Then the Boston management received word from Pat Moran at Philadelphia that the Quaker City team was badly in need of a shortstop. And so Jack was traded to Philly, Josh Devore going to Boston. In the "Sleepytown" Martin was a success and was, as usual, popular with his fellow players and with the fans. But, alas, he could not hit. One of the scouts employed by the team informed Moran that Gerber, a Columbus shortstop, was a wonder. The talk that Martin was to be supplanted began then and probably had an effect on the local boy. Gerber did not come to the Phillies but Davy Bancroft did. Davy is still with the one-time champions, although he is not hitting one bit better than Jack did. He is no better than Martin in the field, either. Jack was carried by the club as utility man, until one day Joe Kelly, manager of St. Paul, made a bid for his services. Jack was sent to St. Paul and was the best shortstop in the American Association, outshining McMillan and Derrick, two of his old rivals. When Al Timme, president of the Milwaukee team, set about to build up a baseball team—something he did not have then and has not got now—Martin was the first man he sighted. And a big offer induced Kelly to part with Jack.

At present, Martin is with the Brewers. He is not satisfied there and may not return to that team next fall. It has been unofficially reported around these parts that Roy Corhan, shortstop of the St. Louis Nationals, is to be "retired" in favor of Martin. Whether there is any truth in that report, we do not know, but we do know that Jack Martin, even though he is still a young man, has had a baseball career that any man might be proud of.

ROYALS TOO FAST.

One local manager—or was it the Royal manager—says that the Royals are too fast and that the South Plainfield baseball team is not "fast enough" to cope with the colored lads. That's all nonsense. If the lineup presented to us by the manager of the South Plainfield team did not include men who are just as good as those playing on the Royals, then we miss our guess. If the Southern manager called the game off for the reason assigned, then it was his place to see that he obtained players of Royal calibre before he arranged the game. On the other hand, if the Royal leader called the game off, he made a mistake. He may think that his boys can beat the South Plainfield team and they may be able to do it—but why not try the trick? The Royals are not "too fast" at all. No team is "too fast" until it demonstrates that it is, time and time again.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

It certainly is funny, but we don't read much of Bill Dodd these days. Bill, like his dad, is a devotee of the national pastime. He is a fairly good shortstop and can catch. With the stick he is not a marvel, although many a game has been broken up by his timely clout. Bill is a member of the Netherwood baseball team and has done must to keep that team on top.

The tallest pitcher in City League captivity is Duncan Patterson, the genial manager of the First Baptist team. Dunc was at one time a member of the Sauer baseball team, playing an outfield position. When we saw him performing with the shop team, litle did we think that he would ever turn his hand to pitching. But Duncan did the unexepected and is now a hurler of considerable repute. At times, of course, he is "easy" for the opposition, but, then can there are times when the opposition is easy for "Dunc."

Dan Randolph, who is secretary of the City League, is also a baseball player. Dan is by no means a "rookie," nor yet is he a "vet" of the Wagner type. He can hit and is a fair fielder. There is nothing sensational about his work, but he can always be depended on to do his best. Dan was at one time manager of the Baptists, but gave up the job at he close of the season last year.

Louis Brown, come forward. Few of his friends know him by any other name than "Lou." All of his friends know him to be a baseball player. He mingles in football, also, and is quite successful in that line. But, his long suite is baseball, at which pastime he is quite proficient, being both a competent fielder and a steady clouter.

Warry McLaughlin, at one time a Pittsburgh National League pitcher, is still on top when it comes to pitching ability. Warry leads them all when he is feeling right. But, when the big fellow is not in the pink of condition, his slants are not puzzlers, even thoug they do come over the pan, accompanied by creditable burst of speed. But, harken, batters, when Warren is feeling just as well as he could be expected, look out. Walter Johnson may be the "speed king," but Warry is no "flivver."

That rotund person who ambles around in the outer works for Dunellen, and who masters the pugilistic intentions of other players, is Jack Wilson, who like his mate, Lou Brown, is a football player. Jack weighs quite a little, we all know that. That he can cover as much ground as any outfielder in the league is also a fact. When Johnny's bat meets a fast one, the game is over—especially when there are men on the paths.

"Alec" McDonald! Alec gets his "pictures in the paper" very seldom but still we cannot refrain from discussing him. Not that we have anything against Alec, because we have not. But the genial little Tab worker has a sportsman's spirit and is ever ready to help his fellow along when it comes to working for a good cause. No man, no matter who he is, can compare with Alexander.

There is a trio of baseball players on North avenue. This trio, generally, gets plenty of publicity. But, unfortunately, one of the three gets a little less praise than the other two. "Vins" Mullin is very much interested in the nation's game and can play it creditably. He was at one time a pitcher, but realized that he was no star and, as a result, decided to try his hand at infield work. He has been most successful in the new role and each week-end finds him adding new laurels to his already lengthy list.

BASEBALL

Leading the Southern League in team batting doesn't seem to get the Little Rock team anywhere. The so-called Travellers are locked in the cellar.

Major league base stealers will have an excellent chance to overtake Ty Cobb—if Ty makes good his threat to retire from the game.

The full name of Third Baseman Betzel, of the St. Louis Cards, is Christian Frederich Albert John Henry David Betzel. Many a man is interned in Canada for less than that.

First half winners in leagues where the season is divided include: Dayton in the Central League, Augusta in the South Atlantic League and Asheville in the North Carolina League.

With so many of our best tossers drawing suspensions for rough stuff during the cool days it is to be hoped that the hot weather will lay off for the remainder of the season.

When it is remembered that every first-class "boner" ever pulled in the big show took place at the Polo Grounds, it's easy to answer the question, "What's the matter with the Giants?"

Ray Caldwell's work has shown a big improvement of late. With Ray going right and Cullop burning up the league, the Yankees are going to fight like the dickens to stick around up there.

It is said the Cleveland Indians are willing to have some other team lead the league for a while so they can prepare for the great drive later on. But the Indians had better watch their Ingersolls closely and catch the correct time to start.

Evidently Henri Rondeau is another of those pastimers who look like a million dollars outside the big yard. After several trials in the major leagues the Frenchman is once again with the Minneapolis Millers.

Willie O'Connor, mascot, is making the Western trip with the Braves for the first time since the 1914 season. If Willie succeeds in chasing the wimp as well as he did in 1914 the Braves are the next world's champs.

Manager Charley Herzog of the Reds missed a fine chance to create some amusement akin to a regular "laff." He should have protested that the "bean ball" was injuring his players.

The St. Louis Cards have been running true to form in every department of the game—seventh in league standing, seventh in team batting and seventh in team fielding.

John McGraw, the Giants' boss, employs an effective though heartless method to make his pastimers behave. He threatens to trade 'em to St. Louis.

The hitting and fielding of the Detroit Tigers this season has given good value, but a large share of their pitching has come dangerously near to cheating.

Peeved at the showing of the Pirates, a Pittsburgh scribe says Honus Wagner can't take care of the entire field and bat in all of the runs for the team. As the Old Wonder has been accomplishing this very trick for years past, he must surely be going back.

PROFESSIONALS TIE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Eugene McCarthy, Formerly of Somerville, Fails to Keep in Running.

A finish reminiscent of that at Brookline, Mass., 1913, when Francis Ouimet tied with the English professional pair, Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, for the national title, but lacking the international flavor of that historic event, was seen yesterday at Garden City when Charles H. Hoffner, Philmont Country Club, near Philadelphia; James M. Barnes, Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, also in the Philadelphia district, and Walter C. Hagen, Rochester, N. Y., all profesionals, tied for the open championship of the Metropolitan Golf Association, each with an aggregate for the seventy-two holes of 297 strokes. The play-off will take place at 10 o'clock today over eighteen holes.

Eugene McCarthy, formerly of Somerville, but now of Florida, returned a card of 165 for the first day and 84 and 85 for the first and second rounds yesterday.

RED STARS LOSE.

The Plainfield A. C. had little trouble defeating the Red Stars yesterday, the score of the game being 12 to 4.

"Ipp" Witteman twirled for the P. A. C., and allowed only one hit.

TO ATTEND GAME.

Many local fans are planning to be present at the T. A. B.—New York Firemen baseball attraction in Elizabethport tomorrow.

CITY LEAGUE OFFICER CHAMPIONS CAUSE

Daniel Randolph in Interesting Letter Gives Full Account of Postponement.

The following communication was received this morning from Daniel Randolph, secretary of the City League. Mr. Randolph, in his official capacity as secretary, has something to say regarding the game forfeited to Hope Chapel at the last City League meeting. All interested in the welfare of the local amateur organization would do well to read this communication carefully.

Jinks:

Allow me to correct the impression you gave the readers of the sporting page of your valued paper edited on July 14th, by your article, "Way to Postpone." You have given but one side of the argument. While I might not be in favor of the method Manager Patterson employed endeavoring to cancel the game scheduled with the Hope team, I think it only fair to Mr. Patterson that his side of the story be told.

When the City League was organized for the season of 1916, Mr. Martin attended as a representative of the Saurer team. At about the second meeting he advised us, indirectly, that he was unable to reorganize this team. A little later he attended as a representative of the Hope Chapel team, attending a very few meetings, personally. The Hope Chapel representative whom the League had to recognize at its meetings was Thomas Heron. Manager Patterson endeavored to get in communication with Mr. Martin on several occasions, but was unable to do so. The writer has personal knowledge that on Friday evening he 'phoned Mr. Martin at his residence three times. Mr. Patterson, being unable to get in touch directly with Mr. Martin, took up the question of postponement with Mr. Heron, the man who had been representing the Hope Chapel team at at least ninety per cent. of the League meetings. I understand Mr. Heron said that he would take the question up with Mr. Martin.

I beg to quote from minutes of City League meeting of June 5, 1916: "It was decided that all players must be in uniform." I understand from spectators that Mr. Martin did not have nine men in uniform on the field, when he requested the umpire to forfeit the game to Hope. In naming his nine men at the meeting he named one who was not eligible as his name had been taken from the Hope roster some time previous. Notwithstanding these facts, the League officials voted on last Monday night that the game be forfeited to the Hope team.

As secretary of the League, I am entitled to vote on all questions coming before the representatives. Before the meeting last Monday night, Manager Martin, in conversation with Mr. Dobbins and myself, remarked that the Baptist team had an unfair advantage inasmuch as I, as secretary, was entitled to vote, and Mr. Patterson as manager, was also entitled to vote. Up until this meeting I exercised my privilege of voting upon all questions that came before the League. When the question of forfeiting this game to the Hope team came up I did not vote, thinking that the other representatives would do the square thing by the Baptist team, as the game was claimed on a technicality and the Hope team did not live strictly up to the rules in having nine eligible men in uniform on the field.

Last year the Hope team asked for the privilege to postpone a game so that they might go on their excursion; it was granted; also this Saturday, to attend an outing entirely foreign to the Hope Chapel organization; it was granted.

My object in writing this is to put before the City League followers the facts of the case, and I trust you will see that this is published.

DANIEL F. RANDOLPH.

SAUER OUTING.

Over one hundred employes of the International Motor Company and their friends went to Highland Beach on their annual outing this morning. Owing to the fact that several members of the Hope Chapel baseball team wished to go on the trip, the weekly tilt with the Tabs, scheduled to be played on West End Field, was postponed.

The Lenox Leaguers have dispelled the jinx and have done what was thought to be the "impossible" by winning two straight games, defeating the East Ends 15 to 1 in the first contest and routing the Diamonds in the second match by the score of 8 to 4.

It was about time for the Lenox team to win. The boys have uniforms and attributed their inability to get started to the fact that they were not used to big league outfits. When the tailenders did get started, however, they ran the bases at will and clouted the ball to all corners of the lot. It was impossible for the official scorer to record things as they happened, but he is authority for the statement that there never was a dull moment during the entire game.

Anthony Deady adorned the mound in the game with the Diamonds and was in fine form. It was difficult for the Sparklers to connect with the Lenox slants. Luria, catching for the vistors, was the only man who could garner more than one hit.

ALLIES GAINING GROUND ON ALL SIDES AND GERMAN FORCES ARE PUTTING UP DESPERATE DEFENSE

FRENCH NEAR VERDUN AND RUSSIANS DEFEAT AUSTRO-GERMANS CAPTURING 3,000 MEN AND NUMEROUS CANNON.

BIG PROGRESS BEING MADE IN FLEURY REGION

One of the Key Positions on the Road to Verdun Has Been Bombarded Incessantly During the Past Twenty-four Hours—Russians and Italians Make Fresh Advances—British Admit Withdrawal From German Third Line.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

London, July 17.—Decided progress has been made in the region of Fleury during the past twenty-four hours by the French commanded by General Nivelle. This is one of the key positions in the northeastern front at Verdun and they have launched a vicious counter offensive against the Germans on both banks of the Meuse. The British are hauling up their heavy artillery to resume the drive against Bapaume and the new positions north of Bazentin-Longueville are being consolidated.

The Russians have won new grounds in the Riga sectors; the Italians have made fresh advances in the Trentino, and Russian troops in Turkish Armenia have taken the important town of Baiburt, sixty miles south of the Black Sea port of Trebizond.

In Volhynia, the Russians in the region of Ostroff and Gubine have put down heavy Austro-German attacks, launched in mass formation and forced the enemy to retreat to avoid the danger of being outflanked. Upward of 3,000 men were captured in the fighting.

The British admit a withdrawal from the sections of the German third system of defense which they penetrated Saturday and they are preparing for another surge. The big guns are keeping up a steady bombardment on German lines. News has reached here to the effect that the Portuguese Government has equipped an army with everything necessary to enable to enlist its aid with the Anglo-French armies and is awaiting a call.

The Germans are strongly placed on the Somme above Peronne, under the protection of the river and marshes. The crossing of the river by the French will result in hard fighting with probable heavy losses. The British and French armies are full of confidence in each other, the result of the joint offensive seems to be daily more assured.

A despatch from Berlin says that German troops under Gen. Von Linsigen, southwest of Lutsk, have been withdrawn to a point beyond the River Lipa, according to a statement issued by the War Office today.

Lord Robert Cecil, of the Foreign Office, announced in Commons today that the Government has no intention of establishing an international prize court.

Paris, July 17.—The German-Russian troops are at grips in France for the first time since the soldiers of the Czar were landed on French soil. The official communique issued by the War Office today stated that the Germans delivered a strong attack against the trench sections held by the Russians in the Champagne district last night but were repulsed. A brilliant counter attack was delivered by the Russian soldiers. On the Verdun front, in the region of Fleury, the French have made further progress in the offensive operations.

More Russian troops disembarked today at Brest, France. They will be sent to camp and later to the front.

Rome, July 17.—Despite stormy weather strong Austo-Hungary attacks were renewed along the whole front in the upper Posina Valley, but all have been repulsed, the Italian War Office announced today. Heavy fighting is in progress in the district which the Teutons seem to have received reinforcements. The upper Posina lies in the mountains northwest of Arsiero.

Algiers, July 17.—The British steamer Eccesia, 3,714 tons, has been sunk in the Mediterranean by a submarine. A boat containing the captain and 18 men has reached the shore and another boatload is reported to have been saved.

Amsterdam, July 17.—Emperor William is at the Somme front, according to a despatch received today from Berlin.

EFFORTS BEING MADE TO ARRANGE WEEKLY CONCERTS

Efforts are now being made by a committee from the Public Recreation Committee to have the Dutch Arms Band give a concert in the City Park on some week-day night. It is believed that such a concert would attract a large number of people and prove to be popular with the residents of the city.

The use of the park for musical affairs this summer has the endorsement of many prominent citizens, and there seems to be a need here for a weekly entertainmnt of this character, especially as the Dutch Arms Band has attained such a degree of proficiency.

MEETING OF DEBATING TEAM.

At a meeting of the Holy Name Debating Society yesterday, Joseph A. Gallagher was appointed president for the coming year. Frederick L. Greene was appointed secretary. Challenges were sent to fifteen debating teams in the State. Nine of these challenges were sent to Newark and the rest to representative parish teams in other cities. The members of the Holy Name team are Joseph McEvoy, Edward J. McCann, John V. Powleson, Edwin L. Sullivan, Frederick L. Greene and Joseph A. Gallagher, the last named having been a member of the Triangle Debating Team at Plainfield High School.

"THE SIN OF ALCOHOL."

Rev. Howard Clark, pastor of the Congregational church, spoke at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home yesterday afternoon, giving an interesting talk on "The Sin of Alcohol," and demonstrated the danger of putting such liquid into the stomach by setting fire to a small quantity, showing how it burned. The children's choir sang several selections during the service, using the Biederwolf hymn books.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature recorded at the State Trust Company today was as follows: 9 a. m., 75 degrees; 11 a. m., 81 degrees; 1 p. m. 84 degrees.

NO U. S. CONVOY FOR GERMAN SUBMARINE

British and American Governments Argue Over Status of Ship.

Washington, July 17.—Reports from Mexico City that the United States and Mexico had reached a complete working agreement for smoothing out their differences were denied by State officials today.

Washington, July 17.—The Navy will not give a convoy to the Deutschland when she strikes out for the open sea from Hampton Roads. No special precaution will be taken to guard her before she reaches the three-mile limit.

The usual measures will be taken to see that American neutrality is not violated by the cruisers now on the lookout for the submarine.

London, July 17.—That communications are proceeding between the British and the United States government over the status of the German merchant submarine "Deutschland," was announced in Commons today by Lord Cecil of the Foreign Office. While it is not the public interest to divulge the representations, Lord Robert said. Nevertheless the government would not commit itself to a dispute with the United States without giving Commons an opportunity discussing the subject.

POLO CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Naragansett Pier, July 17.—Narragansett Pier will hold the centre of the polo stage during the several weeks beginning today. The occasion is the annual tournament for the championships of the United States. The tournament program this year provides for nearly a dozen events, but those in which most interest will centre will be the contests for the senior and junior championships. The difference between the two classes is not in the age, but in the skill of the players, although in both championships the teams play without handicaps.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING OPENED AT DOUGLAS

Plainfielders Raise $2,000 With Which to Erect and Equip Structure for Soldiers.

Plainfielders who contributed to the fund of $2,000 raised for the purpose of establishing a suitable Y. M. C. A. building at Douglas, Arizona, for the use of the soldiers there, which includes members of Troop D, of this city, will be interested to know that the building was opened at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon with due ceremony. This fact was communicated to William D. Murray, of Plainfield, a member of the International Committee, by G. A. Reeder, one of the secretaries in the army and navy department of the association, who is on the border.

Mr. Reeder received his information concerning the building from F. A. McCarl, one of the association secretaries, who is at Douglas. The $2,000 needed to erect and equip the building was raised here in less than two weeks. The building is equipped with writing tables and other conveniences, while provision was also made to show moving pictures. Another diversion is a phonograph.

The soldiers are at leisure during the middle of the day owing to the high temperature, and the association building is destined to become one of the most popular centers at Douglas. In the telegram received by Mr. Murray, Mr. Reeder says that the building is appreciated by the New Jersey men and that work all along the border is progressing rapidly. It was the intention of General Secretary A. C. Estes, of the local association, to go to Douglas, but the detailed work preparatory to the local campaign for a new building prevented his leaving here at this time.

At the dedication of the building yesterday Captain Albert Borden, of Troop D representing those who contributed to the $2,000 found, presented it to the brigade, while Brig.-General Hines accepted it on behalf of the brigade. There were appropriate addresses by Chaplains J. Madison Hare aid C. W. Gulick. The First Regiment Band accompanied in the singing of the hymns. All units in the camp were represented at the gathering out-of-doors. The gift was kept secret until the time of the presentation.

CAPT. BENJAMIN DOANE DIES IN HIS 93D YEAR

Veteran Shipmaster Passes Away at Home of Son, F. H. Doane, in Bayonne.

Captain Benjamin Doane, a retired shipmaster and father of Mrs. J. Hervey Doane, of East Seventh street, died yesterday at the home of a son, FrancisH, Doane, of 55 Center street, Bayonne, with whom he was residing at the present time. Mr. Doane was very well known in this city through his frequent visits with his daughter. The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 p. m., at the residence in Bayonne. The interment will take place in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. Doane was born in Nova Scotia, ninety-three years ago and when still a mere youth went to sea and had a varied career following his favorite occupation. Frequently he went on long whaling trips of a year's duration and whenever he returned home the sea called him back again. He still followed his favorite work until twelve years ago when he retired permanently and this was caused primarily by his advancing years. Captain Doane was connected with the Clyde Steamship Line for many years and had toured the world a number of times. When he retired he was captain of the steamer "Cherokee," which ran to Jacksonville, Florida.

Beside the son with whom he lived and Mrs. J. Hervey Doane, another son survives him. He is Benjamin Doane, an attorney, who practices in New York City.

BOROUGH COURT CASES.

Frank Viltelli, who was arrested for allowing his mules to run loose, was arraigned in the borough court this morning. He had appeared late for his hearing on Saturday, but was on time this morning. Recorder Charles Hand suspended sentence.

Henry Radd, a colored ashman, was arrested for using a wagon that leaked and that was in a more or less dilapidated condition. He was arraigned in court this morning and sentence was suspended.

Mrs. Angelo Antronci, of Harmony street, was arrested for creating a disturbance in the neighborhood and for making things unpleasant for her nearest neighbors. When arraigned in court this morning, she was ordered to move. Sentence was suspended on that condition.

RAIN IS PLENTIFUL IN DOUGLAS CAMP

No Announcement of Rejections Made Known as Yet by Officers.

Douglas, Ariz., July 16.—Muster began at 8 o'clock, so the men could be paid. The muster was preceded by physical examination. The commanders expect to lose many men.

The shark tragedies on the Jersey coast are causing some of the officers considerable worry. Telegrams are being sent home telling their families to keep away from the ocean bathing beaches.

Friday night the officers of the First Squadron were entertained by the First Cavalry at a dance at the Country Club.

The three-quarter eclipse of the moon was observed here Friday night and was a beautiful sight.

It rains every day, usually in the afternoon and evening. This will continue, the residents here say, for at least six weeks. The rain has interfered with work of completing the adobe road and sidewalks through the camp and further work on the drains and shower baths which were nearly completed.

No regular drills have been held yet except the setting-up exercises for a few minutes before breakfast. Hose attached to the water faucets in the company streets has served as an excellent substitute for shower bath apparatus, but, when it pours real bad, many of the men take a shower bath in the rain.

There are no houses near the camp to interfere with the enjoyment of the ablutions.

Cots Easy, Hard to Wake Up.

For several nights since the rain made its appearance the men were compelled to sleep on the damp ground. Now, however, all have been supplied with cots by the government and they sleep so well at present that it is hard work to get them up for reveille.

The men are now digging a ditch five feet wide and three feet deep between the camps of the Fifth and First regiments, to connect with one being built by the latter to the north of its camp and which, it is believed, will keep away from the Fifth such floods of water as inundated it the other day. Most of this work, so far, has been done in the rain.

All the horses have now been shod and are being tried out by the mounted officers and men to whom they have been assigned.

The weather is cooler and the clear nights now are magnificent.

Chaplain Coon has been relieved of his duties as camp postmaster, this honor—and work—now going to Chaplain James Madison Hare of the Fourth Regt. senior chaplain. The main postoffice has been moved down to the Fourth quarters. We still have our postoffice for regimental distribution after it comes from the camp postoffice.

JOHN H. STAATS WALKS FROM CHATHAM TO NEWARK

John H. Staats of Chatham, father of J. A. Staats, of this city, got out of bed before daylight yesterday morning and walked to Newark, a distance of about fifteen miles. He wandered into the terminal station of the Public Service Corporation at Newark, where he admitted that he was lost. When questioned by the police he said that he had walked away from the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. E. Beerbower, at Chatham.

Mr. Staats is advanced in years and has been in poor health for some time. His relatives were notified and later in the day Mr. Staats was taken back home.

CONVENTION DELEGATES.

EMERGENCY ORDER OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally are hereby required to make report to the Board ON THE ARRIVAL at their hotels, homes and houses of any guest, visitor or transient from out of town. The report may be made personally, or by telephone, (No. 646), but must be made on the arrival in Plainfield of such guest, visitor or transient; and must give name, age, and the locality from which the party came. The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health, for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

SIXTIETH WEDDING DAY IS CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray Observe Happy Event at Wolfboro, N. H.

Sixty years of wedded life were completed yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, Sr., of Central avenue, this city, and the event was celebrated by a family gathering at the summer home of the couple, "Burnbrae," Wolfboro, N. H. Roger F. Murray was the only member of the family unable to be present. Congratulatory messages from Plainfield friends came to "Burnbrae" throughout the day and friends and neighbors at Wolfboro dropped in the cottage to wish them many happy returns of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray were married July 16, 1856, in New York city by the Rev. Dr. Buchard and eleven years later they moved to Plainfield, where they have resided ever since, residing at 804 Central avenue during the entire time. A significant fact of interest in the family is that there has been no death among the members. Mr. and Mrs. Murray were the parents of the following sons and daughters, John W. Murray, Jr., W. D. Murray, Roger F Murray, Mrs. J. W. Murray, Mrs. A. A. Tilney, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, all of Plainfield, and W. F. Murray and James L. Murray, of New York.

Ten years ago the couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at Wolfboro, at which time seventy-five guests were in attendance. Each year Mr. and Mrs. Murray spend their summer months at the latter place, where they have made a large number of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Murray is a veteran insurance man and until a few years ago, when he retired, was actively engaged in that business.

NORMAN WALT HARRIS DIES AT LAKE GENEVA

Uncle of A. M. Harris, Banker and Philanthropist, Passes Away in 61st Year.

Norman Walt Harris, banker and philanthropist, former head of Harris, Forbes & Co., of New York, and an uncle of Arthur M. Harris, of Central avenue, this city, died at his summer home in Lake Geneva, Wis., Saturday night in his sixty-first year. His home was in Chicago, and at the time of his death he was president of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank of that city, which he founded, and also president of the Harris Safe Deposit Company.

Mr. Harris was born in Berkshire county, Mass., and was a direct descendant in the thirty-ninth generation of Charlemagne, the Franklin King and Roman Emperor by his wife, Hildegarde. He was a member of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., to which he was a heavy contributor. In recent years he also contributed liberally to the Methodist church, of which he was a member, and various charitable objects. He was a member of several clubs in Chicago. The funeral service will be held in Chicago on Wednesday and a number of prominent clergymen will officiate, including Bishop Charles B. Mitchell, who was formerly pastor of the First M. E. church, this city, but now resides in St. Paul.

PARALYSIS CASE REPORTED HERE BUT OFFICIALS ASSUME CHARGE QUICKLY AND FEAR NO EPIDEMIC

TWO AND ONE-HALF YEAR OLD CHILD IN FAMILY OF MAX LEWIS STRICKEN AFTER VISIT TO FRIENDS ON STATEN ISLAND.

HAS NOT COME IN CONTACT WITH OTHERS

Parents Have Observed Voluntary Quarantine for Several Days Pending Development of Disease—Three Cases in Metuchen and One in Westfield—Plainfield Victim Isolated and No Possibility of a Spread Presents Itself.

HEALTH BOARD WARNING

The Board of Health urges upon mothers the necessity of keeping their children on their own premises, not permitting them to mingle with other children. It is only by precautions of this kind that an epidemic can be avoided in Plainfield. Mothers are also urged to promptly isolate and call a physician if children show the symptoms of any illness.

Householders are further notified to see that their premises are kept absolutely clean and free from decaying animal or vegetable matter; also any condition which might breed flies or insects. The latter includes the interior of the house also.

RANDOLPH CHANDLER,
Health Officer.

One case of infantile paralysis, the dread disease that is at present wreaking havoc in New York and other cities, appeared in Plainfield last night and was immediately taken charge of by the local Board of Health. The patient is a two and one-half year old child in the family of Max Lewis, 109 Liberty street, and contracted the malady during a recent visit to relatives on Staten Island.

The family has maintained a voluntary quarantine for several days at the request of the health authorities pending a diagnosis of the case and when the ailment was classed as infantile paralysis last night, Health Officer Randolph Chandler immediately took steps to isolate the victim.

The child has not been in contact with other Plainfield children since returning from the island and the precautionary measures already taken are believed to be sufficient to check any spread. It was learned this morning on good authority that the health officials are keeping a watch on several ailing children in Plainfield at the present time but developments will be awaited pending isolation.

While Plainfield has one case of the disease this need not be taken as a cause for alarm. So thorough has been the Health Board's work that there is practically no danger of spread and if other cases should develop it is probable that the victims have been exposed to the malady outside of Plainfield. No other victims are anticipated, however, but the Board is taking every precaution and nothing will be left undone in the campaign being waged against an epidemic here.

Three cases have been reported to Dr. Henry Gross, health officer of Metuchen. One victim is Anna Louise Hanneman, the two-year-old daughter of a Metuchen baker, and she has been removed to the isolation hospital at Elizabeth. A colored boy by the name of Parker, on Plainfield road, Metuchen, and the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dalsart, of Center street, Metuchen, are the other victims reported to the State Board of Health.

One Westfield patient has been taken to the isolation hospital at Elizabeth and reports from that place now indicate that both the Westfield and Metuchen children are doing well and will recover.

That the New Jersey State Department of Health has not declared quarantine against persons coming from New York is made clear in a letter from Dr. J. C. Price, director of health, to Dr. Haven Emerson, New York city commissioner of health. This letter, given out at the office of the State Department of Health this afternoon, reads as follows:

"As a result of the present outbreak of poliomyelitis we are receiving numerous telegrams and letters from individuals and from persons representing benevolent organizations in New York state asking if the Department of Health of the State of New Jersey has declared quarantine against persons coming from New York. While stating in replies to these inquiries that no such action has been taken nor contemplated by this Department, we have suggested to those desiring to bring groups of children from New York city into New Jersey that they first procure a certificate from the New York City Department of Health and also communicate with the local authorities in the district to which they desire to come in this State.

"This advice seemed advisable in view of the fact that, I am informed, local health officials in a few localities in this State have taken what appears to be extreme measures against all persons coming from New York city. Will it be possible for your Department to furnish such certificates?

"I will be glad to co-operate with you in any way possible to limit the spread of the disease, and will consider any suggestions you have to offer in this respect."

LETTER WINS OUT IN RACE ACROSS CONTINENT

An interesting race between a man and the mail was made July 7, and the mail won by three and a half hours including delivery. The man left Plainfield July 7 at 12 noon and arrived in San Francisco July 11, at 10:30 a. m. The letter was postmarked 4 p. m., July 7, and was delivered at his hotel at 11 a. m., July 11. This letter crossed the continent and was delivered in five hours less than four days, while the man was only one and a half hours less than four days, the letter gained on him three and a half hours including delivery, during regular service.

FIRE IN EMPTY HOUSE.

The borough fire department was called out at 12:30 Sunday morning in response to an alarm from Box 156, at the corner of Harrison avenue and Walnut street. The firemen, upon their arrival on the scene of the conflagration, found that flames had obtained a good headway on an empty house owned by Henry DeMott and situated on Jefferson avenue, near the foot of the mountains. Owing to the fact that the nearest hydrant was some distance away, it was necessary for the firemen to lay 1,300 feet of hose before they could begin work. They succeeded in confining the flames to the roof, which was burned off. The flames destroyed part of the interior of the house, but were held in check before further damage was done. The extent of the damage done or the origin of the fire is not known. The new auto engine made a record trip, under the careful management of Walter Zimmer, the demonstrator.

Bobby Moreland went to the pole at the word and Reuben Hal stepped up to his side and the two had it hammer and tongs to the turn home, when Reuben Hal outstepped Bobby and beat him to the wire. These two were the contending horses. The rest of the field were trailing.

Reuben Hal lost the pole at the first turn in the second heat and Maboo took it. She and Bobby Moreland had the fun for themselves for awhile, with Reuben Hal in the pocket. He managed to get out at the three-quarter pole and pacing around Bobby Moreland made play for Maboo, who was two lengths in front. It was a pretty race home until Maboo broke and all was over for the heat, Reuben Hal winning at his ease.

It was Reuben Hal's race in the and gave him a run for the prize third heat. Although Bobby moved Reuben won the deciding heat.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

In a thermo siphon why cannot one cool it by forcing the air in at the bottom hose connections and allowing it to come out of the top hose connection with the radiator removed, provided sufficient air is forced through?

The arrangement which you mention should be successful provided sufficient air could be forced through the cooling system. However, it would be impossible to force air through rapidly enough to keep the exterior of the cylinder walls cool, as the metal within the jackets is not of such shape as to transmit the heat from the metal to the air rapidly enough, nor would the jackets be able to carry a sufficient volume of air.

My four cylinder car knocks and pounds on a pull with retarded spark. It misfires when the current indicator begins to fluctuate. A new coil and platinum points have been installed. Is it possible that the relay is not right? The battery stands up well. Could it be a spark knock, and, if so, what is the cause? Would raising the block one-eighth of an inch benefit it or would it lower its power?

This is probably a spark knock. You must have the spark retarded too far. Try advancing it a little more on such a pull. There may be a great deal of carbon in the engine. It would be well to examine the spark plugs to see that they are not sooted.

Raising the cylinder block would give you more space in the combustion chamber, thus reducing the compression and consequently the power output.

I would like to know something about the properties of gasoline as a lubricant. Would a large size bearing which is constantly bathed in gasoline, revolving at a speed not over sixty or seventy revolutions per minute, with a light load, be likely to heat up if no lubricant other than gasoline were used?

High grade gasoline has no lubricating qualities. In other words, it has no viscosity. The function of a lubricant is to separate metal surfaces and prevent friction, which produces heat. High grade gasoline is very volatile and evaporates readily, leaving no residue. The lower grades contain more or less crude oil, and possibly you have in mind the use of the lower grades.

What size of wire is used on the armature of most magnetos, and how much wire is used? Also, what is the voltage of a magneto and the amperage?

Some authorities advise the use of one-half to three-quarters pound of No. 26 double cotton covered wire. Of course the amount and size differ. As an indication of the width of variation it may be said that in the line made by one magneto manufacturer, which includes 300 or more, not more than half a dozen have the same windings. This is a matter upon which the magneto maker very reluctantly gives information.

Voltage varies from 8,000 to 30,000, and there is a great difference in amperage also, the low tension having a greater amperage than the high tension.

Which will run the fastest, a four, six, eight or twelve cylinder car, size of wheels, gear ratio, cylinder displacement and everything being equal?

That depends entirely upon the design and mechanical excellence of the car. Two motors of exactly the same type and size might have very different performance for the reason that one was better designed than the other. So there is no basis of comparison.

Are aluminum pistons a success? What changes would I have to make other than changing pistons? How about the connecting rods, etc.?

Aluminum pistons have been adopted by many of the leading automobile makers after long test. The aluminum pistons can be used satisfactorily with the regular rods in the engine, if that is what you mean.

Kindly explain why valves are reground by alternating rotary motion, in view of the fact that valve tappets are arranged to give the valves a slightly continuous rotary motion in service. Also what are the objections to the continuous rotary motion in regrinding?

Valves are ground by an alternating rotary motion to avoid scoring the seats or the valves themselves. You know that if you were sandpapering a finely finished piece of wood, such as an automobile body, preparatory to painting it you would not draw the sandpaper around in a continuous path, for that would leave ridges or scratches. The same applies to grinding valves.

Will you please explain the correct method of refinishing fenders and hood on a high grade car?

If the hood and fenders are smooth and are simply dull from weather no preliminary sandpapering or smoothing will be needed, but you can best judge that yourself. With the surfaces as smooth as required, the first step is to apply a coat of metal primer. This should be allowed to dry overnight, after which the first coat of rough stuff or filler should be applied. Let stand for twenty-four hours and then rub down with a rubbing stone and water. Then another coat of this primer should be put on and the procedure repeated. Following this rubbing the surface should resemble a slate in smoothness. You are now ready for the ground color, which is a flat color put on to give a foundation for the color varnish. It should, of course, be of a shade to correspond with the desired final appearance of the car. Then a coat of color varnish is applied, and after dry the rubbing with rubbing stone and water is again in order. Finally put on a coat of clear finishing varnish that is of the right shade to correspond with the color. This is a lengthy procedure and, of course, could be simplified if you did not want a very fine finish. However, if the above directions are followed the metal surfaces should look like new.

My magneto does not distribute a very strong fire to the plugs. At times I can start the motor easily; then, again, I have a hard time starting it. Can you tell me what is the matter?

Probably the magnets have become weak. Take the magneto to a repair man who knows how to do the work and have the magnets renewed. If there is no shop in your town where this can be done ship the magneto to the factory.

What causes sparks to appear in the brush holder assembly when the throttle is opened about halfway? Is this harmful to the generator?

The sparks probably originate from a dirty commutator or from improper brush adjustment. This should be remedied at once.

I have been having brake trouble due to too small brake drums. The drums are only 12½ by 2 inches and are much too small for a 3,000 pound car. I want to equip it with 16 by 2 or 2½ brakes if it is possible to obtain a pair of this size drums bored for two inch hubs. I can do the fitting and think I can work over the old brake connections without much expense. What do you think of this plan?

It would be entirely practical to do this, although we do not know where you could get such a set of drums already made. It is probable that you would have to have them made to your order. Remember that you do not want to get them so large that they will interfere with the road clearance of the car.

Do you recommend removing carbon while the engine is running by means of warm water slowly fed through a primer connected to the intake manifold?

We do not believe that this would have very beneficial results, although it would do no harm. Warm water would not serve to dislodge much of the deposit.

What is a universal joint, and what is its use?

A universal joint is a connector between two shafts, allowing them to operate at any angle to one another within practical limitations.

Would it be practical to build a two cylinder opposed stationary engine with both cylinders firing at the same time?

It would not be practical, although it could be done. By having both cylinders fire at the same time you would have the same effect as a single cylinder engine of a size equal to the sum of the two cylinders, and then this impulse would have to carry the engine through two revolutions. So the cylinders should be arranged to fire alternately in order that there be an impulse every revolution. By firing both at once you simply defeat the purpose for which you have two cylinders.

What is the meaning of brake horsepower and piston displacement?

Brake horsepower is that measured at the flywheel of the motor and is the useful work done by it. Piston displacement is the total cubical area of the cylinders between the head of the pistons, when at their lowest point, and the top of the cylinders.

Is kerosene a practical substitute for water in the radiator of a car? Would it rot the rubber hose connections?

Kerosene alone in the cooling system soon would cause overheating of the motor. Besides, dangerous gases would be generated, and no doubt the water connections, if made of rubber, would be affected. Kerosene mixed with water in the proportions of two-thirds water and one-third kerosene has been tried, but the results obtained were not as good as with alcohol and water.

Will you kindly describe the process of lapping piston rings in cylinders?

In the factories the piston rings are lapped in on the pistons, and in most cases this simply means the running of the engine for several hours by external power. Usually a belt from an overhead drive shaft is placed over the flywheel and the engine driven thus until all parts are run in. Lapping in the rings in a repair shop should be done in the same way. Assemble them on the pistons and while using a good supply of oil drive the motor by external power for several hours if possible.

PLAINFIELD TROOPERS FOUND CAMP SITE HAD BEEN MADE FOR THEM BY BATTERY A

Guardsmen Fell "in Soft" on First Day of Arrival at Douglas—Finely Laid Out Site Was Ordered Turned Over to the Newcomers and Those Who Had Performed All of the Hard Work Were Forced to Look Elsewhere and Begin Anew—Some of the Happenings at Douglas.

Douglas, Ariz., July 12.—Sitting out here in the rain, watching the raging streams running across what were once our roads, digging ditches in an endeavor to drain the camp, dodging two-by-four beams that float merrily through the tents and carry away the bed sacks, and then when it dries up, digging deep wide graves for dead horses and little things of that sort, are keeping us a bit busy nowadays. Of course, in addition to this, we have morning setting up exercises, do duty on the heavy guards and are posted at night, and wash and dry our clothing every day—and many of us have only one uniform because of Uncle Sam's failure to send us into the field equipped according to his own specifications but, as I've remarked in previous correspondence, we are happy.

Maybe we grumble a little and maybe some of us feel the effect of being baked in the sun, chilled in the rains, and sleeping in flooded tents and wet clothing, but it is at least a novel experience and we do not complain because we know that the officers of the regulars here, as well as the guard officers, are secretly damning the army red tape that is causing us some of this inconvenience.

Regarding Arizona, we are very much like the "woman of few words," we have nothing to say about nobody, but we certainly can write poetry. Dr. Watson Rodemann, of the Field Hospital, is accused of writing a poem entitled "The Creation of New Mexico," but when questioned he merely waves his red whiskers and refuses to answer. He is now known as Golden Glow Carranza, the corral poet. The poem pictures the devil as getting from the Creator what was left over after the creation of Hades and using it to make the sections where the Jersey boys now are encamped.

And, Say, What Lightning.

Honestly, if some of the people back home were out here a while with eight pounds of adobe mud sticking to each shoe and the lightning playing tag about the streets—Jerseyites don't know what lightning and thunder are—and then in a few hours were baking in a tempertaure of 130 degrees or so, with a furnace sun laughing at them, and just as they were ready to collapse, the rain came again—well they would not raise their eyebrows and sniff at the poem—it says a whole lot.

So far, however, the populace has only shouted: "Give them anything they pay for"—and then boosted the prices. A common old cot such as is sold anywhere for $2, is $6 here, and a fifty-cent cotton shirt is $2. If we noble protectors stay here long enough, these poor citizens of Douglas will be able to live in comfort for the rest of their days.

Some Westerners, These Are.

We are not impeaching the poet who wrote "Out Here Where the West Begins," but already one of our men has ridden the worst horse in the territory, one that had thrown these bold cowboys; another trooper has taken the gun away from the town's favorite bad man and kicked him out of camp, and generally we are riddling the poet's ideas and boasts. Far be it from us to have started anything out here; every little affair in which we have been involved was forced on us by the big-booted, huge-hatted cowboys, who wanted to have some fun with the tenderfeet.

By the bay, the real American cowboy hereabouts is like the buffalo and the dodo—extinct. There are certain types of town loafers and Swedish farm hands who wear chaps and hair bands around their hats, but they ring hollow—they are what the real range man calls a "tin horn." The real range man in this part of the country does not mount a prancing pony any more, or wear boots, he leaves that to the "Chicago cowboys," as they are called, and the movie men, who like to come into the hotels in riding breeches. The cowman comes to town in his automobile, if you please, and the ranges are all pastured. Except in spots, just where we are, everything is fenced off, and the cattle are not the big horned range sort; they are stolid, white-faced Herefords, beef carriers.

Also all this southwestern hospitality reads well in the popular novels, but just as on Broadway, or in any other place, the people are marching under the international flag—the dollar bill. They seem to throw out their chests and beamingly say: "Well, well, here you are. Now, toddle right out on the border and stay there when you have no money, but on pay day come into town. But be sure to allow no one to interfere with our business. We are a generous people; help yourself to air and rain. We would go out there with a few regiments of our own to help you, but we have to stay in town and run our business so we can get your money."

There Are Sharks in Arizona.

Then there are men with mine prospects to try to induce the officers and the men of the troops to come in on a "sure thing." They have even tried to work the old game of the dying prospector in the shack, who is willing to sell his precious secret of the lost mine for a mere trifle that his "little daughter" may have a competence. They cannot seem to understand why the guardsmen do not "bite," and appear offended when reminded that these schemes died of old age in the East long ago, and that we do things much more cleverer there now—on Wall street.

Also there is the usual swarm of "cowboys" with fiery ponies, which they "wouldn't part with for no price, no siree." Then follows the tale of the wild ride in Mexico and praise for the horse that carried the owner sixty-five miles without stopping, and thereby saved his life. Or the reason for not wishing to sell may be that "there here was a horse o' Villa's given me by him, and he never rode anything but the best." A few of the men swallowed these yarns, but in several cases, when the boosters swaggered too much, they were thrown bodily out of camp.

Our young Jerseyites whose chins are tilted high, who look a man in the eye and walk without touching their heels in the dust, are somewhat disappointed at the tameness of these wild and woolly residents, who tell such wonderful tales of what they have done along the border, and then when an opportunity comes to demonstrate their metal, fail most miserably in utilizing it. We have a song down here about "Arizona Bull." It tells the story.

Quite Like an Eastern City.

In town they have adopted a cute little custom of tearing up streets and digging holes in them. They do the work indiscriminately, it would seem, but so thoroughly that one-half of the town is cut off from the other half. Then the rains come and these holes develop into washouts. Conditions are particularly pleasing at the intersection of the main streets, where there are no lights at night. One steps from the curb, falls four feet into a pool of water, scrambles out, falls over a pile of cracked stone, bumps into the car track that rises two feet above the street level and so finally gets across.

Of course, during the rainy season, these principal thoroughfares are lakes. General Edwin W. Hine, his adjutant, Major Alexander P. Gray, Jr., and his aide, Lieutenant John Hinchliffe, left their automobile in front of the principal hotel, and when they came out the water was up to the floor of the car and the machine was occupied by three men who had their feet against the windshield, and, who declared they would not get out until the water subsided. Major Gray promptly called their bluff and they got out—in a hurry.

In this principal hotel, where they charges prices that would make Broadway blink, the elevator has been out of business for two days. Some little thing is the matter with it and ten minutes' work probably would fix it. The management "aims" to fix it "sure enough soon," but in the meantime the guests walk. The hotel is popular with the officers and many of the men, who go there in droves to get away from camp cooking. They have not yet become accustomed to eating adobe mud or alkali dust in their food. But, seriously speaking, the food in every mess really is wholesome and palatable, and practically every mess has extras. The officers and the medical officers inspect all kitchens every day, and will continue to do so.

Policeman Bosses the Cooks.

Bill Stucky, formerly captain of the Newark mounted police, now quartermaster sergeant of Troop C, in which several Plainfielders are enrolled, has two negro cooks who are wonders. As his assistants, Stucky has picked Trooper Leith Speiden, of Summit, who was the best mile runner at Cornell last year—Bill says that is for speed—and Newell Wedd, of Montclair, who made a swimming record at Andover. Last night the cook outfit fed the men sauerkraut, weiner wurst, mashed potatoes, tomatoes, iced coffee and regular pie, of the sort that mother used to make.

Moving Days Seem Frequent.

When Major William A. Bryant pulled in with Troops B, of Red Bank, and D, of Plainfield, every one was glad to see them, but it meant a whole lot of work for poor Battery A, which had been quartered next to the cavalry, in the direction of brigade headquarters. A beautiful street had been dug, a fine network of ditches prepared and Captain Claude E. Lanterman proudly boasted yesterday that when the rest of the camp was under water his camp was dry because three or four engineers in his outfit had scientifically laid out the street and drainage.

When the two additional troops pulled in, Captain Lanterman was ordered to move his camp to make room for the troops near the other cavalry, and he had to begin building a new street, taking down his canvas and moving to the right of Battery B. Just in the midst of the moving, another beautiful storm came up. It was no place for a minister's son, that camp side of Battery A.

There was a move on in the battery to "pass the buck" to the Signal Corps in that moving matter, but Sergeant Scudder was told of it by a little bird and he told Captain William Y. Dear, who reached General Hine before Captain Lanterman did. It was this way: The Signal Corps is supposed to be next to the brigade headquarters because of its wireless and wire facilities, but it had been quartered between the cavalry and the infantry. The game was to have it moved instead of the battery. However, General Hine decided he did not want the Signal Corps disturbed, and Captain Lanterman then assured him that the commanding officer's slightest wish was an order—and trouble began in Battery A.

See Mexicans in Their Sleep.

Captain I. Newton Davies, adjutant of the First, has received a number of complaints from company officers about men who suffer from nightmares. They seem to think the Mexicans are on them, and arouse the whole company street. They will be put in pup tents if they do not succeed in controlling their dreams.

The work is beginning to increase. The men now arise at 5 o'clock, drill and exercise in the early morning hours and then go to ditching and road building. Taps sound at 11 o'clock at night. Hours before that, however, the camp is wrapped in slumber.

MISS KATHERINE REGAN IS CHOSEN CARNIVAL QUEEN

The Knights of Columbus Carnival closed Saturday night with a record attendance at the show grounds at West Front street and Clinton avenue. It seemed that everyone turned out for the final night and scores of local persons paraded about the grounds hugging Teddy bears, dolls, vases and other articles, awards they had won at various booths.

Miss Katherine Regan, ont of the contestants in the Queen of he Carnival conest came to the fore Saturday with an unusually large vote, jumping a comfortable distance ahead of her nearest competitor and thereby was duly crowned the "Queen." She was presented with a handsome diamond ring. Miss Florence Hogan, who led in the conest practically every night since it opened, came second and was rewarded with a gold watch, while Miss Lillian Coffee got the third prize of a gold lavalliere.

The carnival was the most successful of any ever held by the local Knights, and despite the two rainy days the splendid turnouts of patrons on the clear days and their generous patronage far overweighed the loss of them. The members of Watchung Council are especially appreciative to all who helped to make it such an event.

HOW OUR BOYS PASS THEIR TIME AWAY ON HOT PLAINS OF MEXICAN BORDER

Little Stories From the Front That Give Keen Insight Into Daily Lives of National Guardsmen.

How One Married Man, Who Insisted on Teaching Son to Fight, Drooped Dead En Route to Texas.

OUR boys are at the front, and everybody is proud of them. Everybody likes to know what they are doing, how they are faring in Texas, and the little things that arise in their daily life always prove interesting. So these little stories have been selected from the great amount of news that is sent from the border:

Returns With Father's Body.

The body of Color Sergeant Samuel Garrett of the Fourteenth infantry, N. Y. N. G., who went from Brooklyn to face the perils of war, but found death waiting for him this side of the Rio Grande, has been returned. He dropped dead the other evening.

The lone escort of the body is George Garrett, bugler of Company C and a son of the dead man. The father went with the colors for the expressed purpose of "teaching that kid how to get along straight in the army."

When the president called for the national guard Colonel Foote, commander of the Fourteenth, told the married men of his regiment that "the young men were the ones to go." Samuel Garrett at once sought his chief.

TEXAS GIRLS GREETING THE BOYS IN UNIFORM.

"I'm one of the married men who perhaps should remain at home to take care of my wife," he told the colonel. "But I have carried the flag of this regiment for nearly a decade, and I just can't see it go to the front in any other hands. I've served the United States as a sailor too. I'm ready to serve her again."

"But there are plenty of younger men who are eager for service," it was suggested. "Don't you think it's their turn now?"

"No, sir, I don't," returned Garrett.

The following day he returned to the armory with a radiant smile on his face.

"I've got to go," he told his officers. "You see, my son is just nineteen, and it was myself who directed him to enlist in this regiment. Why, he's just a kid. So I'll have to go along with the youngster to protect him and to show him how to be a soldier."

This logic was not contested. So when the Fourteenth entrained Sergeant Garrett marched with youthful steps at its head, proudly bearing the stars and stripes. A quiet little woman who wore a gray shawl was at the armory with a wife's kiss for the sergeant and a mother's kiss for the bugler.

Picked Up New Soldier.

One of the New York specials carried a new passenger—a negro with the legs and the uniform of a cavalryman—to camp.

He boarded the train in the yards at Dallas surreptitiously and sat on the steps of Company D car until the conductor came along. The conductor knew there had been no black soldiers on the train and told the cavalryman (among other things) that he would be dropped off at the first stop.

Colonel Fisk heard of the "stowaway" and went to investigate.

"Where did you come from? Who are you?" he demanded.

The darky grinned conciliatingly.

"J. L. Cox, sah," he said, saluting. "Private in K troop, Tenth cavalry, sah."

"K troop of the Tenth?" echoed Colonel Fisk.

It was—but Private J. L. Cox hadn't been in that affair at Carrizal.

"Jes before that I got a furlough to go see my ma in Fort Worth," he explained. "Now I'm hurrying to Columbus as fast as I can without any money to go back to Carrizal and help clean 'em up. I knowed Captain Morey and Captain Boyd for sho' nuff fightin' men."

Colonel Fisk had an extra ticket, and Private Cox traveled as his guest on D company's car.

Want Everlasting Ice.

General Parker, at Brownsville, has received information that a wealthy resident of New York wants to present each soldier in the New York division with something that will be of use to him in the field. The general has been asked to designate what the boys ought to have, and he is stumped.

The government furnishes its soldiers with every necessity and all that a soldier can carry of same. The most acceptable present from the philanthropic New Yorker would be an individual cake of everlasting ice, which could be carried in a soldier's trousers pocket or hat.

Must Wear Hats.

Brigadier General Dyer, who was at one time colonel of the Twelfth New York, has found it necessary to issue a peremptory order that the soldiers must wear their hats in the sun. The Texas sunshine is strong enough to scramble the brains of one not in the habit of exposing his dome to the blue of heaven. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon General Dyer issued orders that all the men of the Twelfth not engaged in necessary work should crawl into the shelter of their tents. At that hour the heat was blistering, and the hospital corps was getting a lot of practical field duty.

Mixup With a Mule.

The well known but inexplicable disposition of the army mule was responsible for an exasperating and at the time amusing series of episodes in the camps of the Seventh, Seventy-first and the Twelfth of New York. Especially recalcitrant are the mules of the Seventh. By orders of Colonel Fisk a corral was being erected around the faithful, noisy but essential aids to the soldier when the preliminary dust storm that heralds a rain in that part of Texas came blustering out of the east. The mules decided the corral was no place for them, and several jumped the barrier and went in the general direction of Mexico.

It was time for quick action. One of the first men to grab a mule and attempt to subdue it was Private Thornton Brown of Company K, a cousin of J. Pierpont Morgan. A moving picture concern would have given a million dollars for a film of the wrestling match between Private Brown and the mule.

The mule won, but Private Brown came out of the encounter with glory and mud and also equipped with much knowledge of mule strategy.

War Camp Lingo.

Here's the way the soldiers say it:

Mule skinner—a teamster.
Sinkers—dumplings.
Bean shooter—a commissary officer.
Black strap—black coffee.
Bowlegs—a cavalryman.
Butcher—the military barber.
Cit—a citizen.
Cits—civilian clothes.
Dough puncher—a baker.
Punk—army bread.
Salt horse—pickled pork.
Old skipper—company captain.
Grayback's retreat—the guardhouse.

With St. Louis Men.

During the journey of the St. Louis troops one day was through dry territory. "Nobody Knows How Dry I Am" was sung by the men. The officers had a different version. The chorus was as follows:

Oh, take me to that happy land
Where the river of Beer is found,
And sloe gin Rickeys fill the air,
And highballs roll on the ground.
What? Highballs roll on the ground?
Sure! Highballs roll on the ground.

Though nearly all the members of the colonel's staff are gifted with mellifluous voices, the staff quartet is the pride of the regiment. The members are Colonel Donnelly, Captain Nulsen, Major Gruner and Major Burgher.

Led by S. E. Guthrie, the hospital corps woke up some of the sleepy towns in Arkansas with this bloodthirsty yell:

Well man, sick man, dead man, stiff;
Cut 'em up, slice 'em up, what's the diff.
Humorous, tumorous, blood and gore;
First Missouri Infantry Hospital corps.

First Snake Bite.

Venomous fauna of the tropics nicked their first victim. Lieutenant Charles T. Keating of an Illinois regiment was getting ready for retreat. He picked up his coat from his tent cot and thrust his arm into the sleeve. A scorpion exerted the claims of priority. Lieutenant Keating dropped the coat and tumbled the poisonous insect to the tent floor. In attempting to trample it he narrowly escaped a second bite, as it made a fastening on his sock. A side kick killed it.

Lieutenant Keating reported at once to Major George C. Amerson, chief of the regimental medical corps, and was treated and sent to the hospital.

"There is no danger," said Major Amerson. "The poison was taken in time and an antidote administered before it had a chance to work."

Major Amerson issued a warning to all of the men to take care in putting on their garments to make sure no poisonous insects were in possession.

With Massachusetts Men.

Over on Polk avenue in Morningside heights, northwest of Fort Bliss, the First Massachusetts ambulance corps have set up dinky little pup tents and occupy the entire field, w the exception of their fellow service men of the hospital corps and the field signal corps of the Massachusetts command. Little Red Cross flags flapped in the hot breeze, and the signal corps men lay under their tents all day, eating ice cream cones and fanning themselves. While they slept and ate a gang of Mexican laborers in command of General Jose De La Luz (Joseph of the Light), Blanca Madero's ranking general and associate of Villa in the Madero revolution, dug water main trenches, grubbed Spanish dagger plants from the rocky soil and cleared the ground of grease weed and sage. General Blanca has retired from the field and is now a waterworks foreman.

Jerseyites at Douglas.

A and B batteries of the New Jersey field artillery were sent to Douglas, Ariz., presumably to relieve regular cavalrymen. It is reported that the cavalry will be ordered to the San Bernardino valley, east of Douglas, to protect its large supply of cattle, horses and forage from possible bandit forays.

A regiment of New Jersey infantry, two troops of cavalry and a signal company also left westward for an unannounced point along the border.

TROOPER WITH AN ANNIHILATED PEST OF BORDER LIFE.

General George Bell, Jr., announced that he had employed a corps of undertakers to go to Carrizal to bring here the bodies of the American soldiers killed in the engagement there. The undertakers will go into Mexico under personal guarantee of safety from General Alvaro Obregon, Mexican minister of war.

How Maloney Made Weight.

The happiest man in the Illinois section is Jimmie Maloney of Troop K. Jimmie, be it said, is a strategist. He is a light lad with a pleasant, likable face. Jimmie feared he wouldn't make the weight required by army rules—120 pounds. Jimmie did weigh more than this before he went to Springfield, but hard drill knocked off five pounds. The night before federal examination Jimmie weighed himself—118 pounds. A chill ran along his back. Jimmie sure was going to Mexico—but, an idea. Jimmie went to the pump and drank long and deep. He did this many times. When he stood on the scales of fate the next day he was six pounds overweight, and when it was all over Jimmie's sober face relaxed and he chuckled.

Mexican Flag.

Lieutenant Runschkolb of St. Louis propounded a puzzler. He inquired as to the colors and design of the Mexican flag. Colonel Donnelly grinned, but ventured not one word.

Captain Freen Nulsen said he didn't know what it looked like, but that he would get one for the staff correspondents soon after arriving at the border.

Major Gruner said the question was idle, as the residents of that troublous land awoke each morning under a different flag. This closed the argument.

Heat In Laredo.

The townspeople of Laredo hail the advent of the troops with delight. They do not fear the Mexicans—indeed, it is the other way around—but soldiers spend money, and Laredo is getting ready for a boom.

Concerning the intense heat here, the inhabitants like to repeat the story told of Laredo "bad men" in border days of the past. When they died and passed away to a merited berth in the lower regions—here the teller of the tale always chuckles—they took their blankets with them.

JAMES A. MAHONEY MADE TREASURER OF STATE AERIE

James A. Mahoney, of West Third street, represented the local aerie Eagles at a meeting of representatives of the twenty-six aeries of the State, held at Newark yesterday, when a State aerie was organized. The election of officers resulted in Mr. Mahoney being made treasurer.

It was decided to hold a field day and parade in Newark on August 26, as the Eagles' contribution to the 250th anniversary of the city. Aeries from New York, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania will also participate. Plans are now being made for the annual State convention to be held at Wildwood in the fall.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Miss Ximena McGeshan, a young California girl, has cleared $500 in ten weeks of butterfly farming, and is at present averaging as much as $75 a week for her work, which is done only in summer. Her outfit for the work is of the simplest, consisting only of fruit jars and barrels covered with gauze to contain the caterpillars, a net and a few chloride bottle for day work, and a miner's lamp for use at night. Plenty of moths sell for a dollar a specimen.

The choice of the Duke of Devonshire for the governorship of Canada is a pleasing one for the Dominion's social circles. The Duchess, who is a close friend of Queen Mary's, is already well known to many Canadians. She was formerly Lady Evelyn Fitzmaurice, daughter of the Marquis of Lansdowne, himself once governor-general of Canada. The Devonshires have two sons and five daughters, and it is expected that so many young people, and five young girls in the lot, will make Rideau Hall, the Canadian White House at Ottawa, particularly animated throughout the social season. Some of the Duke's finest estates and homes in England have lately been thrown open to the care of soldiers wounded in the war, and the Duchess and her daughters have taken an active part in war relief work.

Mrs. John B. Allen, of Seattle, widow of the first U. S. Senator from Washington, will run for the Republican nomination for senator on a platform comprising national suffrage, national prohibition and international peace in the platform. Her opponents will be Senator Poindexter and W. E. Humphrey.

Mrs. Charles O. Bell, of Denver, Colo., began raising dahlias for the trade after having passed her sixtieth birthday. She not only built up a large loacl business, but is now shipping bulbs to twenty-one States.

Lord Kitchener estimated the number of women who would be widowed by the war in the British Isles at 50,000. Women now outnumber men by more than 1,250,000 already in the United Kingdom, while in some of the Empire's oversea dominions, men are largely in majority. To redistribute these women who are widows when the war is over, the Salvation Army is developing a plan to send them to the dominions to remarry, and is raising a fund of $1,000,000 to defray the expense of their emigration and that of their children. In France, another scheme, more of a sentimental than of a material nature, is on foot to honor war widows. "Votes for Widows" is the slogan for giving to the widows and orphans of soldiers having died for their country the right to vote for a period of ten years after their death, the gift of the franchise being intended as a token of gratitude to the dead in the person of their kin.

The first Indian girl to become an author of romantic fiction is a Spokane girl named Morning Dove, who has written the love story of an Indian girl named "Cogewea," which means chipmunk. Morning Dove is a member of the Okanogan tribe of Colvilles, and wealthy, with extensive lands which she rents to white farmers. As a young girl she stoutly demanded an education, and after completing the grammar studies in the Colville schools, persuaded her parents to send her to Calgary, Alberta, where she took a business college course. She speaks excellent English and has a remarkable vocabulary. In her book she has tried to express aspirations of such a young Indian girl as she is herself, toward a life on a higher social and mental plane. So far as is known, Morning Dove is the only Indian girl ever to have written a book.

From Gary, Indiana, comes a whiff of war romance. The story goes that a handsome National Guardsman, a member of the First Indiana Infantry regiment, has lost his heart to a Mexican belle, this no less a personage than Carranza's own niece, and in the event of a war with Mexico would find himself in the cruel obligation of marching upon his beloved's country. The principals in the story are Private Sherwood Moe, son of a wealthy contractor of Gary, and Senorita Oralia Carranza, who was educated at Notre Dame University in Indiana. There she met Miss Margaret Moe, a sister of Private Moe, later visiting at the Moe home, where the romance began. When ordered to join his regiment at the command of President Wilson a few weeks ago, young Moe was preparing to leave on a trip to Mexico.

CHOIR TO TAKE VACATION.

FORM LOCAL LEAGUE TO AID FREEDOM FOR IRELAND

An organization to work for the freedom of Ireland was started at a meeting in Commercial Hall on Liberty street yesterday. There were about sixty men present and all were enthusiastic over the success of the movement. It was unanimously voted to send a telegram to United States Senator James E. Martine requesting him to do all in his power to secure a commutation of the death sentence of Sir Roger Casement recently imposed by a British court for taking part in the uprising in Ireland.

Another meeting of the organization will be held in Commercial Hall Monday night, July 24, when officers will be elected and plans for further activity will be planned by the members. All interested are invited to join.

NO SICKNESS AT FRESH AIR CAMP, VISITORS BARRED

During the infantile paralysis scare Miss Sarah Curry, who is in charge of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp, is complying with the request of the Plainfield Board of Health and allowing no visitors at the camp. When interviewed over the telephone this morning by a Daily Press reporter, Miss Curry said that there was no grounds for any rumors that there were any cases of paralysis at the camp.

On the contrary, she said, where in past years there has been at least four children sick most of the time, this summer there was not one of the three hundred and fifty that could not be about. All are a great deal better than when they first arrived.

'Extra-Size" Garments Make It Possible for the Large Woman To Dress Smartly and Becomingly -- Long Lines Should Be the Watchword of the Stout -- Neckwear An Important Detail.

THE fat woman is no longer a hopeless proposition—to herself and her dressmaker. The latter does not try to adapt fashions intended for slim women to the bulky figure with disastrous results, but designs special modes for her stout patrons—modes calculated to give the utmost of height and grace while cleverly subduing curves and heavy outlines. "Line" is the fetish of the stout woman, her watchword, her very gospel of clothes. So long as "line" is the prime consideration in any costume, the details matter little. Even ruffles and flounces, once sternly denied the poor soul whose inward yearning was for ruffly, feminine effects, may be incorporated in the costume, provided the general lines make for dignity and slenderness.

Good Materials Important.

The stout woman must spend money for best materials. The two or three yards of cheap satin that a thin woman can adroitly incorporate with a chiffon dance frock are impossible to the stout woman, on whom six yards of the same satin will show up in deplorable commonplaceness. Only beautifully woven, fine textured stuffs fall into the long, gracious lines desirable for large figures, and by the very elegance—the simple elegance if she is wise—of her costume, is the stout woman made distinguished. Elegance, in this case, does not mean an overloading of trimming or an overabundance of jewelry. The stout woman who wears yards and yards of glittering jet fringe or passementerie, long strings of beads, many bracelets, and so forth, makes a sad mistake. For her are softly draping satins—meteors, charmeuse and the like—the softer taffetas, faille of not too high a luster, voiles, crepes, grenadines and chiffon wherever it can be used. Nothing falls into such lovely lines as chiffon; it is the last hope of the stout woman—she can wear it when all other materials fail.

Laces the stout woman adopts as her particular privilege, wide, rich laces with handsome patterns on a net ground, used in skirt draperies, in fichu effects and sleeve ruffles. For her tailored suits, there is broadcloth, first and foremost, and plain colored serge and gabardine for second choice. Mohair she will beware of but she may adopt the beautiful worsted and mohair weave with perfect safety. This material, much favored by Paris couturiers, comes in rich, soft-toned colors, the plum and brown shades being particularly pleasing.

Neutral Colors Always

This question of colors is also important, almost as important as that of materials. The stout woman knows by instinct—or ought to know—that gowns of royal blue, purple or old rose are impossible for her. The slim, chic little lady may make herself into a dashing scarlet tanager, or bird of paradise, or green parroquet, or Baltimore oriole, if she so chooses, but the heavy, stout woman must be content to imitate the modest wren, the starling and the crow. Her gowns must never attract attention to her contour by their bright hue. Most stout women know this, as has been said; but not all stout women seem to realize that even a touch of bright color may spoil a costume—for them. Color must be used with great discrimination—nay more, consummate art—in the stout woman's costume and it must never be so placed as to call attention to heavy lines, as at waistline, bust or hip. Bright hued coat linings are quite possible, gay parasols, handbags in rich coloring, petticoats also. A very little strong color may be adroitly placed in the hat. But the general tone of the costume should be dark or neutral.

All White Is in Order.

This does not mean that the stout woman may not wear white in summer time. All white is quite possible for her if the fetish "line" is carefully observed, and materials are of the very best. A white linen or pongee tailleur, with white hat, parasol, gloves and boots may be worn by even a woman weighing 220 pounds, provided she is well corseted and her tailor understands his business. Better still, will be a suit of natural pongee, with blouse of cream tinted batiste or chiffon cloth, a hat of coffee brown straw and pumps of coffee tinted glazed kid with stockings to match. The stout woman will find a dark hat the wisest choice, as a rule, whatever the tone of her costume. There are colors and colors also; a tailored suit of natural linen is possible for summer wear, or one of dull green linen, but linen in the violet or lavender tone should be avoided as the plague.

Of Satin-striped Voile in Dark Blue Tones.

Every line is cunningly designed to give length in the afternoon gown of dark blue satin-striped voile, mounted over dark blue taffeta in the skirt and blue chiffon in the bodice. The long V at the front of the bodice, showing a narrow vest of lace is excellent for a stout figure and the fronts of the bodice are cleverly brought over the taffeta girdle to prevent a sharp crosswise line where girdle and bodice meet. The deep cuffs, giving a trim effect at the wrist, are excellent also. Though without gathers at the top, the skirt has a graceful flare, a facing of stiffening being inserted in the hem. The bodice is of course draped over a carefully shaped and fitted foundation, featherboned at the waistline so that trim lines are secured.

The stout woman is apt to be a tiny bit vain of her foot and ankle for wonderfully slender ankles and slim pretty little feet are often the possession of women with extremely stout, ungainly figures. So the stout woman is fastidious about her footwear and quite rightly wears the daintiest buttoned boots and the smartest pumps and silk stockings she can afford. When she selects her gloves, she should see to it that they are rather loose than tight, for a tight glove strained over a fat hand is painful to the artistic sense.

Wraps Should Conceal, Not Reveal, The Figure.

The stout woman usually looks her best in a long wrap or coat whose graceful cut makes her appear much slighter than a gown that is fitted in to the curves of her figure. Two very good wraps are pictured; one a loosely belted coat of black gabardine with collar and cuff facings of black taffeta, and the other a dignified wrap for a middle-aged matron, a loose, ripple garment of gunmetal cloth and faille of the same shade with big button and loop trimming of the silk. This model comes also in taupe and in black with lining of white or pale buff soiree silk, a handsome new silk with a very lustrous sheen.

Both of the evening gowns pictured are admirably adapted for "extra-size" figures; the dance frock is dainty enough to please anybody, yet every line is calculated to make its wearer look slimmer than she is. The bodice and flaring tunic are of black satin embroidered with gold thread and the edge of the tunic is defined with a piping of gold colored satin. Under this tunic is a petticoat of gold tissue veiled with shirred black tulle. The yoke and little sleeves are of black tulle. A clever idea is the drawing of the draped satin bodice over the waistline; beneath is a boned, fitted lining. A long loop of white pearls adds to the suggestion of long lines on the bodice. The second evening gown is of black satin with black chiffon introduced at the foot of the skirt to give a soft effect. The long panels running the length of the skirt are a good idea for a short, stout figure. The surplice bodice, edged with jet trimming, is draped over a guimpe of black tulle, and the graceful lines of the bodice, trim yet not in any way tight, attest a carefully fitted and featherboned foundation beneath. Sleeves of this sort will be found more becoming to a very plump arm than mere frills at the shoulderline.

LIPS ALLURING

IF you have ever delved into that fascinating study, physiognomy, you know that the beautiful mouth is not always the perfect mouth—from a character standpoint. No facial feature reveals so much to the physiognomist as the mouth. A woman can control, more or less the expression of her eyes and the gestures of her hands; but, whether she will or not her mouth tells the story of what she is and has been; of her thoughts, her aspirations, her temperament, her conquests over, or her yielding to, unworthy impulses. The forehead, physiognomy tells us, shows what man makes of himself, the things he may achieve, the heights he may rise to. The shape, the size, the bumps and the wrinkles on the forehead all express the capacity—and the limit—of personal achievement and conquest over self. The mouth reveals what he has made of himself. Its shape, its lines, firm or relaxed, the lines surrounding it, its smile, its expression in surprise—all these tell the story beyond peradventure.

Sagging Lines Around the Mouth Must be Massaged Away.

Four Out of Five Women Use A Lip-Stick Nowadays.

Pure Cologne Perfumes the Lips Daintily and Freshly.

So no painstaking applications of creams and ungents; no massage, no perfuming, no artistic use of cosmetics, can make a beautiful mouth, if the soul within is not beautiful; if meanness, envy, spite, jealousy, selfishness, hard-heartedness have been the chisels that have curved the lips and drawn around them the lines that demonstrate character. A cheery expression is much more helpful than a lipstick, a bright and winning smile that comes from the heart and not merely from the desire to please counts for more than patient massage. Pure thoughts and refined tastes will give the lips a lovelier curve than any art can accomplish. A generous nature will keep them full and curved and alluring into old age. If every woman did but remember this and take the lesson to heart, one need not be saddened by so many middle-aged faces with thin, indrawn, compressed lips, bespeaking hardness, selfishness and intolerance; or so many flabby, relaxed lips bespeaking vanity, selfishness and self-indulgence; or so many down-curving lips bespeaking sarcasm, pessimism and arrogance.

Now, if you are positive your lips show no traces of bad temper, sarcasm, envy, hatred or malice—evils which you can remedy, though by no outside help — some of the merely physical aids to more alluring lips may be touched upon. The pinker the lips are, and the more clearly cut in a skin of surrounding fairness, the prettier they are. Only youth or bounding health can give this clearly drawn line of demarcation between the white of the skin and the red of the lips and it is always a sign of youth or good health. Biting the lips and pressing them together occasionally help to keep them rosy and moist and young looking, but the biting and pressing together habit grows on one and by and by becomes a form of nervousness that others notice. Pale, bloodless lips usually come from some derangement of the system and if the health and the circulation be improved the lips will almost surely resume the rosy tone that nature intended. French women suck a tiny candy that colors their tongues a bright red—for the French woman who neglects no detail—remembers that naturally rosy lips are usually accompanied by a rosy pink tongue, the sign manual of health.

There is no art of make-up upon which more art must be used than the rougeing of the lips. So very little too much makes such hideous claim to artificialty. A lipstick should be used in the strongest possible light and color applied only to the full part of the lips and blended back carefully to the edge. Afterward go carefully around the edges, making sure that the line is not blurred or broken anywhere by some of the color slopping over. Lipsticks are very generally used now and provided the effect is never overdone, there seems no harm in the custom. Pale lips are so dreadfully aging and unbecoming and rosy lips instantly brighten up a face and make it look younger, more rested and happier. Beet juice applied with the finger tip will give a little color to pale lips; so will strawberry juice. Liquid rouge is used by some women in preference to the lipstick, but one must be very sure to get just the right shade of rouge or purplish lips may be the result.

If you must have rosy lips be sure and have, also, rosy ear lobes; for in perfect health the lobe of the ear is always touched with pink. A rosebud of a mouth with dead white ears is a sure sign of artificiality to the initiated in cosmetic lore. A wee touch of rose on the tip of the chin, too, will make the touched up effect more natural.

The woman with a large mouth should be very careful about using a lipstick, or any sort of coloring. If she be not careful, her mouth will become the most prominent feature of her face and even suggest cruelty or sensuality, traits really foreign to her nature. A large mouth may be made to look smaller by rubbing face powder into the corners, but this will rob the lips of some expression, which is a pity. Fortunately for the large-mouthed woman prunes and prisms mouths have gone out of fashion; a wide, laughing, flexible mouth, bespeaking good temper and generosity, is much admired these days—quite as much admired as the prim little pursed-up rosebud mouth which was the ideal of the seventies. No woman of great mentality, great talent or great temperament ever had a rosebud mouth, so let the girl who bewails her big mouth rejoice in it as a mark of individuality and personality.

Lines around the mouth may be softened by massage with a good cream. Massage the forehead and cheeks, drawing the fingertips upward, to counteract sagging lines around the mouth. Keep the chin fair and white by scrubbing and the use of cold cream. Pinch the lips gently at the center several times a day if they are flat and thin, and by and by they will grow fuller—If you have the generous, good tempered disposition that goes with curved lips. If the upper lip seems too narrow for the lower, curl it backward many times a day and be careful not to compress your lips when intent or concentrated on any pursuit. Be brave, be fearless, be optimistic; timidity, apprehension and pessimism can spoil the most beautiful pair of lips, bestowed by nature, in a very few years.

Keep the teeth in scrupulous condition. Go to a dentist every six months to have all tartar removed—even if there are no cavities to be filled—for tartar makes the breath offensive. Use a good mouth wash night and morning, avoid digestive troubles and your breath will be fresh and pleasing always. Perfume on the lips is a harmless coquetry and the best perfume to use is pure cologne water.

AMERICAN EAGLE JEWELRY FOR SUMMERTIME.

FAD jewelry always makes its bow with the beginning of summer when ornaments as well as clothes may be more informal and picturesque than in the winter season of conventionalities. This summer patriotic jewelry is fashion's fad and the American eagle has been chosen as the symbol of patriotism. In colored enamel on metal, he is to be found mounted on scarf-pins, brooches, veil-pins and bracelets. For the masculine lapel button there is a small device showing an enamel eagle poised in characteristic attitude against a silver shield. Most unique of all this midsummer jewelry is a watch-chain of fine gold links with the swivel hook for the watch at one end and a metal eagle to weight the opposite end of the chain in the vest pocket.

An Easy Way To Cover Porch Cushions

SUMMER hammock, porch and couch pillows can be covered in a quick and easy way with material sufficiently wide to measure twice the width of the pillow. The pillow should be square to start with. Cut a square of denim, cretonne or any preferred fabric, exactly twice as wide and twice as high as the pillow. Lay the pillow in the center of this square of material, the four corners of the pillow pointing toward the centers of the four sides of the large square of fabric. Fold the corners of fabric over the pillow until they meet at the center and fasten them together. Then with needle and thread, run seams from the corners of the pillow to the central meeting point where the corners of the cover come together. Half a dozen hammock pillows can be covered in no time at all by this easy method

WHEN THE CHILDREN GO TRAVELING.

A SPLENDID train plaything is a box of the colored modeling clay which little fingers can mould into fascinating dogs, pigs, birds and butterflies. This clay is very plastic and is ready for use, no water being required to soften it. A box full of clay slabs in various colors, with instructions for using, may be had for twenty-five cents. There is no danger of soiling the clothes, if a pinafore is slipped over the traveling frock, and little hands may be wiped clean in a moment, for the modeling clay is neither sticky or messy.

WILL HISTORY REPEAT?

Will history repeat itself? It is said that history does, but it is not always necessary that history repeat itself to make the statement true.

It looks very much as if President Wilson is following the McKinley policy that existed prior to the declaration of war between the United States and Spain. Nearly every citizen of the United States felt that the conditions in Cuba were unbearable, not only to Americans living in Cuba but to the persecuted people of that island; that through the wretched, dishonest and rotten government furnished by Spain, disease was constantly spreading into the United States; that Americans in Cuba were being taxed and American interests confiscated to an intolerable point, and that the United States should intervene.

President McKinley made up his mind that he would not ask Congress to declare war on Spain until all Americans were out of Cuba. It seems that President Wilson is at last adopting a policy of removing all Americans from Mexico as rapidly as possible, and this would point to intervention or war with Mexico. Although it is said Carranza has laid down on every point raised by our State Department and that diplomatically we have accepted his apology for murdering our people as well as our U. S. Army and raiding American territory, yet our actions seem to point in a different direction from our words. We are still sending thousands of soldiers to the border, training them day and night and equipping them as fast as we can.

McKinley stood like a rock against war with Spain until he thought he was ready. Wilson seems to be following in McKinley's footsteps. When the Americans were out of Cuba—although our Army was not ready—McKinley sent the following message to Congress: "In the name of civilization, in behalf of endangered American interests which give up the right and duty to speak and to act, the war in Cuba must stop." Then did the United States Congress authorize the President to declare war on Spain.

Will history repeat itself? The only thing the people of the United States can do today is to sit tight, get ready and not rock the boat.

WAR AND OUR HOUSEHOLD SERVICE.

"What has become of the supply of girls available for household service?" remarked a Plainfield lawyer this morning. "I've been two weeks looking for one and my home problem is just as near solved now as it was when I started."

It is estimated that 100,000 housemaids could be placed at once in American homes that are clamoring for them. Is it any wonder that Plainfield is among the sufferers? Ordinarily the shortage of girls in domestic help has been made up from the throng of alien girls that come crowding in from Europe. The war has cut off this supply. It is to many women what the shortage of chemicals is to industries.

As the manufacturer has learned resourcefulness so the home will have to adapt itself to circumstances. Now is the time for the young hands. There is no good reason why the mothers should be baking bread while their daughters are attending parties. What is this economic course in the Plainfield public schools but a return to the days of grandmother's girlhood when the arts of the home were early and easily taught to the youngsters.

Too many undervalue this training and prefer that their children devote their time to the pleasures they could not enjoy. Higher values have been placed on slight smatterings of music, painting, fancy work and social polish, than on the higher culture of ministering to the family circle needs.

Romain Holland said: "A woman is in possession of all her senses only when she is working—only then does she possess all her charm and suppleness of movement."

VILLA OR CARRANZA, WHAT DO WE CARE?

Reports from over the international border indicate that Pancho Villa is returning to his own once again and that the peons are flocking to his standard with a possibility that he will have the countenance of some of the more important Mexicans who are disgruntled with Carranza because of the pacific tone of his note to the United States. During the last few days the bandit leader has kept himself before the public eye mainly through his schemes to line up new followers and if all we have been given to believe is true, he has been fairly successful.

But what does it matter to us? If Villa gets strong again and claims the upper hand of Carranza, why Wilson can "jine" Villa. What does a little flopping around among friends amount to? We must have that campaign slogan: "He has kept us out of war."

YOU'RE NOMINATED AS A HEALTH WORKER.

Health Officer Randolph Chandler and his co-workers in behalf of public health have taken up the problem of ridding the city of any nuisances that will tend to spread disease. They have their work cut out for them and the co-operation of every individual citizen is needed to crown the effort with success. Odoriferous refuse is one of the surest disease spreaders and people nowadays treat the garbage dispostal issue in an altogether too careless light. Plainfield hasn't a collection system; this is one of the municipal needs we hope the future will bring forth. But if every householder does his or her personal duty toward cleaning up and keeping clean both the interior and exterior of residences the burden of health work, particularly heavy at this time, will be greatly lightened.

Plainfield's delegates to the Grand Lodge of Elks, held last week in Baltimore, have returned home with reports that indicate a gratifying growth in the order. During the fiscal year just closed 43,320 new members were enrolled, bringing the total membership up to 453,516. The net assets of the subordinate lodges amounts to over $28,000,000, and the order has dispensed more than six million dollars in charity since 1880. Well might it be termed the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. The broad and liberal, yet elevating principles, of the B. P. O. E. and the Elks' home in Plainfield affords a meeting place from which radiates influences that are helpful to the community.

From the Perth Amboy News: "Just as we get our first park fixed up and ready for people to enjoy themselves, along comes a demand for an isolation hospital on the site. As the hospital was there first and as no other location has been provided, it looks bad for the park."

Now we'd like to know if the hospital picked the site for a park because it was a good place for isolation.

If We Have Nation-Wide Prohibition.

There, little gin mill, don't you cry,
You'll be a drug store by and by.
Plenty of sick folks then will come,
Seeking the bottle called "Bay Rum."

All kinds of illness, lots of work
For the reformed prescription clerk.
Gout, rheumatism and scarlet rash,
All to be cured by the old Sour Mash.

Folks will be thrown into the dumps,
Plenty of fever, jaundice and mumps,
Measles and ringbone, spavin, pip,
Nervous prostration, rabies, grip.

Earache and toothache, pleurisy,
Springhalt and ague, housemaid's knee;
Victims in terror al will fly
Quick for the spirits frumenti.

Business then all day for doc,
Diagnosing by the clock;
Folks who were never sick before
Will patronize the new drug store.

The Hickeyville Clarion

Abijah Wicks is lookin' into some of them schemes to remove superfluous hair to see if any of 'em will work on restaurant butter.

Elder Haskins came in on Thursday and paid his subscription to the Clarion. Good boy, elder. The elder is one of nature's noblemen and never lets it get more than six years behind, which is quite unusual in these parts. The elder has recently purchased a new automatic barbwire stretcher, and, in addition to putting up fences, is now ready to tune pianos at a moment's notice. Give him a call. He has a good ear for music, having played B flat cornet in the Silver Cornet Band in 1874. The elder also played the melodeon and is some pumpkins on the triangle.

The railroad that runs through our town buys a ham every year and that is enough to supply the ham sandwiches along the line.

It's a Long Way to Nantasket.

If you wish to catch the 10:15 a. m. boat for Nantasket, says the Boston Post, be at Dudley street or Sullivan Square the night before and wait for the Atlantic avenue train. Get off at Rowe's wharf. You will recognize it because it is near T wharf, which smells like a rose. Let the crowd carry you downstairs to Atlantic avenue. Face toward Europe. Walk for a few minutes down the wharf. Approach a ticket window. Put your hand in pocket—anybody's pocket will do—and withdraw 50 cents. Tell ticket seller you would like a round-trip ticket. He will tell you they do not sell round-trip tickets. Then ask him if he has a nice pair of seats in the front row of the second balcony. Swap him the 50 cents for his tickets. Board boat. The boat will then start. Do not get off the boat when it stops, no matter how many people do get off. To make sure, it is better to be on the safe side and remain aboard until somebody in uniform puts you off. Then you will know that you are at Nantasket.

- Proctor's Theatre -

A special attraction at Proctors' today and continuing throughout the week is the daily appearance of Gertrude Hornidge, vocalist, at each performance, rendering all the latest and most popular song successes, in conjunction with their appearance on the screen in story form.

The headline photoplay today is a Metro production entitled "Playing With Fire," in which Olga Petrova is starred. Superior direction by Francis J. Grandon and the excellence of the work on the part of Madame Petrova and most of her fellow players make this subject absorbing nearly every foot of the way. The continuity is sustained remarkably well, and there are numerous touches which enrich the whole in a gratifying degree. Madame Petrova has a congenial role, which she interprets in a refined, artistic fashion. She is given opportunity to play in a strong emotional key, as Jean, who, in a moment of weakness, steps from the path of marital honor. Other features today include the presentation of the 11th episode of "The Mysteries of Myra," and a famous L-Ko comedy entitled "How Stars Are Made," featuring Alice Howell.

Tomorrow the program consists of Lillian Gish in a Triangle-Fine Arts production entitled "The Innocent Magdalene," the dominant note in which is the mischief wrought by small-town gossips. It is the story of a girl compelled to undergo all manner of hardships because her father is so stubborn as to refuse to recognize the young man she weds. It is a play that carries a striking symbol—the rose that buds, blossoms, withers and dies representing in all save the last, the pathetic career of the lovable little girl who is the central figure of the story. A special Keystone comedy will also be on view tomorrow in addition to the 6th episode of "The Secret of the Submarine. On Wednesday, Theda Bara, the most popular of emotional stars, is seen in the leading role of a modernized picturization of that famous play "East Lynne," which she enacts with all her sure-fire forcefulness and gripping personality.

NEW JERSEY OFFICIALS PLEASED WITH WAY TROOPS MOBILIZED FOR BORDER

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Sea Girt, July 17.—From the Governor down, the New Jersey officials here are expressing gratification over the fact that the New Jersey troops now on the border have arrived there well equipped and without having trouble of any kind over food and other supplies. The experience of the men of the National Guard in other States, who left their home stations without being fully equipped, and who have had to raid grocery stores in order to get enough to eat, and were without necessities when they arrived at the border, have not been duplicated by a single outfit from this State, as has been proven by the written reports received from the various commanders now at the front. In addition to getting all the men off with all equipment that was absolutely necessary to their comfort, the New Jersey officials point with pride to the fact that this State is the only one that has forwarded all men called for up to the present date, and these men left here over two weeks ago.

Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., is especially incensed at a report which was published in a Jersey City newspaper last week regarding Battery B, of Camden, in connection with a criticism of the National Guard in some of the States which were not properly equipped when they started to the front. In speaking of the matter this morning the Adjutant General said:

"A statement is made that the boys of Battery B, of Camden, laid all night in the open because of want of tents, that is absolutely untrue, and the insinuation that they lacked food is just as false. The commander of the battery, Captain Barnard, is an experienced officer who has been attending the army schools for five years and knows his business. He had his tentage with him, and almost a full complement of horses which had been examined and passed by the army officers sent to Sea Girt for that purpose. The organization had a kitchen car and double rations, and uniforms were provided for all. The double rations were provided because of the fact that the car containing the rations for Battery A was attached to the B train by mistake, and we had to supply a second lot of equipment of A just before their train pulled out.

"There were no delays, as everyone knows, in getting the men to the New Jersey mobilization camp, all organizations being here forty-eight hours after the call was received. The great amount of training which was given our guard, which has been a source of so much complaint from some people, while irksome, has proven to be a wonderful thing for it.

"The statement that the War Department months ago gave the right to bring the units to war strength is a glaring falsehood; the fact being that until the call of June 19, we were not permitted to enlist more than the maximum peace strength, which in infantry companies is sixty-five, while war strength is 150.

"If any organizations of other States failed to supply proper food, no such statement can truthfully be made in regard to our troops.

"The matter of machine gun purchase is up to the government, not the States. If the Bennet-Mercier machine guns have proven faulty, and I believe they have, the blame can be placed upon the War Department, where it properly belongs.

"Other States may have left without the required number of horses; New Jersey did not. We sent more than a thousand, and have reports of but three that were lost en route, one of which was badly kicked. If the troops that went from other States had brought horses to their camp ground and refused to move until the government allowed purchase, as did New Jersey, they would have had what they needed, and splendid animals had they been inspected as ours were.

"The uniforms given the men were those furnished by the War Department, and no blame can be laid on any State if they proved too heavy.

"No wonder that Battery D, of New Mexico, stands their own climate better than eastern troops. It is stated that this organization has old packs; they can get no other until the War Department sends them to New Mexico.

"I deny that the guard of New Jersey has proven inefficient, but to the contrary has surprised our people with the rapidity with which they were mobilized and reached Sea Girt with all equipment furnished by the War Department, and they have been complimented by army officers upon the quickness of their movement, efficiency and appearance.

"Local and State politicians had nothing to do with the guard, except as the Legislature provides a part of the money for encampment and incidental armory expenses. I do not believe that any member of Battery B is correctly quoted in saying that if all the money for the New Jersey guard had been expended on equipment, instead of 'gold lace,' the guard would be in better condition to take the field. No member of Battery B can be so ignorant, but the fact is that the uniforms and equipment of the men are furnished by the government and not by the State, and the officers purchase their own uniforms.

"The whole article shows that it was written by some one who has not even a fair superficial knowledge of conditions, but like many others of the kind, is published broadcast and believed by a number of those by whom it is read. Articles of the type referred to do immense damage, and their falsity should be exposed. For years, because of the encouragement of ranking officers in the army who seem to be determined to crush the National Guard, these stories have been sent out and it is about time for the public to know the truth.

"If the conditions described really existed, the newspaper men with the New Jersey regiments would have known of it, and made report."

Captain Stephen H. Barlow, of Trenton, property officer of the Quartermaster General's staff, expects to complete his work here by the end of the week, in connection with the mobilization, and will leave at once for Douglas, Arizona, where he will have charge of transferring New Jersey State property to the government.

PARTY ELECTORS WILL BE CHOSEN

Republican and Democratic Conventions to Be Held October 3.

TO FOLLOW GERAN ACT

Electors of the Party That Wins Will Meet in January and Cast Ballot for Candidates for President and Vice-President.

Trenton, July 17.—The Republican and Democratic State conventions, which will meet in Trenton on Tuesday, October 3, will have the important duty of nominating the Presidential electors to be voted for on November 7. The number of electors in New Jersey now is fourteen, or equal to the number of all the State's representatives in Congress, which is two United States Senators and twelve members of the House of Representatives.

The Presidential electors of the party that wins on November 7 will meet at the State House on the second Monday in January and cast their ballots for the party candidates for President and Vice-President.

The act of May 13, 1912, provides that the State conventions as now organized under the Geran act, in the year in which a President of the United States is to be elected, shall severally nominate for their respective parties the necessary number of Presidential electors. It is also provided that the candidates for elector shall be subject to all the provisions of the corrupt practices act of 1911.

The Republican convention will meet in the auditorium of the Republican Club in East Hanover street, this city, on October 3, and after drafting the State platform will proceed to nominate its electors. The convention will be composed of the candidates for Governor, the eight hold-over Republican Senators, who are: Wells, of Burlington; Stevens, of Cape May; Colgate, of Essex; Gaunt, of Gloucester; McCran, of Passaic; Allen, of Salem; Smalley, of Somerset, and Pierce, of Union; the candidates for Senator in Atlantic, Bergen, Camden, Cumberland, Hudson, Mercer, Morris, Ocean; the sixty candidates for the Assembly, and the twenty-one members of the new State Committee who will be elected at the primary elections on September 26.

The Democratic convention will be held in Masonic Temple, State and Warren streets, Trenton, on the same day. Its procedure will practically be the same. It will comprise the candjate for Governor, the five hold-over Democratic Senators, who are: Martens, of Hunterdon; Florance, of Middlesex; Ackerman, of Monmouth; Munson, of Sussex, and Barber, of Warren; the candidates for Senator in the same eight counties above mentioned, the sixty nominees for the Assembly and the members of the new State Committee.

GAMBLERS FINED $2.

William Clancy and Ledrane Jackson, two youths traveling with the carnival that showed on West Front street last week, were fined $2 by Judge William G. DeMeza in City Court this morning on a charge of gambling. Frank Terril and Dick Simpson, two other youths who were arrested at the same time, did not put in an appearance and lost $5 apiece that they had to put up as bail.

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week. Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.—Adv.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

A Fairy Gives Elise Some Good Advice.

She Twisted Them Into Green Flax.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

RIGHT after mush and milk daddy began the bedtime story: "After a long journey through the skies, carried by her eleven swan brothers, a princess, Elise, at last landed in a cave, where she slept well and dreamed a fairy visited her. This fairy was very like an old woman who had once met her in a wood and given her some berries to eat when she was hungry, when she first set out to find her brothers. In fact, 'twas this same fairy who had told her where to find eleven swans with golden crowns on their heads beside a brook.

"'Now, in her sleep Elise heard this fairy say: 'Your brothers can be delivered from the spell that changes them into swans every morning. But have you courage and endurance enough to do it? The sea is softer than your hands, and it molds the hardest stones. But it does not feel the pain your fingers will feel. It has no heart and does not feel the anguish your heart will feel. Do you see this stinging nettle I hold in my hand? Many like it grow around the cave where you sleep. Only those like it and those growing in the churchyard may be used. Mark this! Those you may pluck, but they will burn and blister your hands. Crush the nettles with your bare feet and you will have flax. Of this you must weave eleven coats of mail with long sleeves. Throw these over the eleven wild swans and their spell is broken. But remember that from the moment you begin this work till it is finished, even if it takes eleven years, you must not speak a word. The first word you say will fall like a dagger into the hearts of your brothers. Their lives hang on your tongue. Never forget that.'

"She touched Elise with her wand, which was like burning fire, and Elise woke. It was bright daylight, and close to where she slept lay a nettle like those in her dreams. She said a prayer of thanks and left the cave to begin her great work of saving her brothers.

"She seized the horrid nettles with her gentle hands, and they burnt like fire. Blisters rose on her hands and arms, but she suffered them gladly. She crushed every nettle with her bare feet and then twisted them into green flax. When the sun went down and her eleven brothers came to the cave as princes they were alarmed to find her mute. They thought it was some new witchcraft used by their wicked stepmother, the queen. But when they saw her hands they understood it was for their sakes. The youngest brother wept, and when his tears fell on her hands the blisters stopped hurting and disappeared."

Household Hints

A GIFT CHILDREN CAN MAKE

Any small child can make a very pretty and useful Christmas gift by taking a long, narrow, two-quart grape basket; on each side fasten a quart strawberry box.

Line the compartments with a pretty soft material, such as cretonne or silk, covering the sides with frills of the same material. Wind the handle as around with strips of the material, or narrow ribbon; cover it completely.

Make pretty little bows at each side of the handle.

Make a couple of pockets in the large basket for thimble and buttons. Put a little cushion in each of the small baskets for needles and pins.

Very easy to make.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

When cleaning woodwork, baseboards and moldings especially, place a piece of tin about three feet long and a few inches wide tight up against the board to be cleaned. Hold it with one hand and clean with the other. Damp or oily cloths may be used without danger of soiling the paper or the wall. Also more work may be accomplished in less time than if one has to be so very careful of the paper.

THE TABLE

Oyster Pie—Put two quarts oysters on the fire with six ounces butter, letting them remain just long enough to melt butter. Season, add one-half pint milk and cream and slice of bread cut in small pieces. Prepare a dish with pastry around sides, put in oysters and bake.

Meat Dressing—When cooking backbones or ribs, make a dressing as you would for meat when roasting. Put dressing in roaster and when soup looks clear on the meat, pour some over the bread and put in oven to cook. If meat ground and a little onion are added to the bread it makes it better.

Fried Apples—Pare, core, cut in half-inch slices, put in frying pan with drippings. Let fry a few minutes, then add one-half cup water and a little sugar. Cook until tender. Be careful not to break. Lift out and lay on platter around roast meat.

Boiled Eggs—Have your water boiling. Put eggs in and time them. Allow them to actually boil for two minutes only. Remove egg from shell at once as they harden a little if allowed to remain in until cold or cool. Put each egg in a tea cup. Pour a little tepid milk over, into which a little butter has been allowed to melt. Season.

Minced Lamb Stew—Three pounds of spring lamb (cubed), cup chopped celery, one-half cup chopped carrots, one-half cup peas, three slices of onion. Stew lamb very slowly until it begins to soften. Parboil celery and carrots. Add all vegetables. Stew one-half hour longer. Season. Thicken a little. Serve very hot on biscuits. This is very nutritious.

Plain Drop Cakes—Two cups flour, one-third cup butter, one-half cup milk and water mixed, two level teaspoons baking powder, two egg whites (beaten well), pinch of salt, vanilla, one-half cup sugar. Cream butter and sugar together. Add milk and water; then flour sifted with baking powder, add salt, vanilla. Fold eggs in lastly, bake twenty minutes in pretty hot oven.

Banana Custard—Make an ordinary soft custard, using two eggs to one pint of milk, two tablespoons of sugar, vanilla, six bananas, one-half cup chopped nuts. Slice bananas lengthwise. Put through food press. Form in small molds. Bake five minutes. Remove from oven. Pour custard over. Garnish with nuts. (Be sure to have very ripe fruit.) Serve warm.

Buckwheat Cakes—Pour a pint of boiling water or milk on half a cup of fine cornmeal; add half a teaspoonful of salt. Mix well, and when lukewarm, add half a cup of white flour, one cup buckwheat flour, one-fourth cup of yeast. Beat vigorously. Let it rise over night. In the morning stir down and beat again. When risen and ready to bake add one saltspoonful of soda, sifted through a strainer. Beat again and fry in large cakes.

Never Fail Cake—One cup sugar half cup (scant) butter, three eggs (whites of two left out for frosting) half cup sweet milk, two teaspoonfuls cream of tartar, one teaspoonful soda, two cupfuls of sifted flour and vanilla. Cream butter and sugar together, add the eggs well beaten, add milk, lastly add flour into which the cream of tartar and soda have been sifted.

Escalloped Squash—Boil a small squash until tender, remove from shell and cut into small pieces. Butter a baking dish, sides and bottom put in layer of squash, then dots of butter; then another layer of squash and so on till all is used. Cover top with bread crumbs, and bits of butter. Bake until golden brown.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Company Is Coming and Ralph Wishes He'd Married a Cook.

"A letter?"

"Yes; read it." Ethel tossed the dainty monagraphed envelope to her husband.

"Humph! How do you propose to take care of them?" he asked after reading the letter and dropping it onto the table.

"We have beds enough. Let's see; there are Mr. and Mrs. Folsom, her sister and brother-in-law and the two children," enumerated Ethel on her fingers. "We could put the children in the maid's room or make a bed for them on the floor."

"I was not thinking of the sleeping. The main anxiety of my life these past few weeks has been to get enough food to sustain life; food that will not be a broad road leading to the destruction of the stomach. Ralph grinned rather dismally. "And here are six souls that are taking their lives in their hands and proposing to eat three consecutive meals with us. What's to be done? We can not kill them; we would be held responsible."

"Oh, I think they will be able to stand it for three meals if we stand it right along for days." Ethel tossed her head disdainfully.

"Seriously, what are you going to feed them?" asked Ralph, rising and going to the window.

"Take a cheerful view of things, my dear. Remember that we have not eaten the one meal we can cook for fourteen consecutive days. They therefore may attack it with relish. I can boil potatoes and not burn them if you watch the process. The coffee made in the percolator is good, you have said. We will open some canned peas and fry steak; that with some canned fruit and cake will do."

"We will have to have some salad, won't we?" he asked, turning from the window.

"We will cut up some bananas and put them on lettuce leaves. If chopped nuts and prepared salad dressing are used the combination is fairly good. I saw Mrs. Morton making some the other day," was Ethel's cheerful reply.

"Better try it on the dog first," answered Ralph. "Then there is breakfast and supper."

"I can make muffins. My last were a success. Those and some breakfast food will be enough with fruit."

"What about supper?" persisted Ralph.

"Oh, don't worry me. I will ask Mrs. Morton to show me how to make a decent supper dish." Ethel's tone was fretful.

"I wish to the Lord I did not need to worry. I wish I could have confidence when company is coming that everything would go off all right, as other men can, but——"

"Oh, you certainly have your woes," was the sarcastic answer.

"Look here!" Ralph turned fiercely upon her. "Suppose I could never be depended upon to provide groceries or meat; that I did it in a haphazard way, getting a few groceries one day and none at all for a week. Suppose you were expecting company and you did not know whether I would get anything to eat or not. Would you not worry? And tell me this: would you not have cause to complain?"

"Don't be absurd, Ralph." Ethel looked away.

"Absurd! Isn't it about that way with the cooking? You cook by fits and starts. Some days you make effort enough to get a fairly decent meal; then you weary of the drudgery, as you call it, and I come home here to nothing. We go to that abominable hotel or I forage in an empty cupboard for something. We cannot live like that; it is making me sick." Ralph thrust his hands in his pockets and paced the room.

"I wish to heaven I had," was the response.

CHEAPER CHECK COLLECTIONS

Country Wide Payments by Local Checks Facilitated Through New Federal Reserve Plan.

To facilitate the transfer of money from one part of the country to another, the Federal Reserve Banks inaugurated on July 15th the country wide system for collecting bank checks. This is an event in the development of the Federal Reserve System, second in importance only to the opening of the twelve Federal reserve banks in November, 1914.

Speaking of its effects, R. H. Tremain, Deputy Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York says: "The use of checks instead of currency for the payment of debts is a custom that now prevails almost universally throughout the United States. For this reason the question of effecting the prompt and economical collection of checks, especially those payable at a distance, has been for years past a problem of ever-increasing difficulty, the complexity of which has been growing with the development of the country's business.

"The banks themselves have usually made arrangements with each other for these collections, which in many cases have not been entirely satisfactory. The routes chosen have often been round-about, thus necessitating a waste of time in collecting the items, and some abuses have grown up in connection therewith so that these arrangements have never produced a simple, comprehensive and scientific plan, such as is now contemplated by the plan inaugurated by the Federal Reserve Board.

"The new system is of importance to every one who receives out-of-town checks, or has out-of-town remittances to make. The reduced cost of check collections will be of general benefit. The actual and proper cost of transfer of money between points will be more equitably distributed, that is, some items formerly collected free will properly carry a small charge, while items on which heretofore somewhat excessive charges have been made will now bear a charge, approximately equivalent to actual cost of collection.

"There will be less money tied up in the mails and each community generally will probably benefit by the retention in the local banks of funds which have hitherto been transferred to the larger cities as a necessary incident to the existing collection arrangements.

"This new collection system is only one of many benefits which the operation of the Federal Reserve System will bring to the business interests of the country and which will inevitably result in better and more scientific banking methods. The country has already benefited through the freedom from currency panics which the Federal Reserve Act has ensured, and the greater stability in the supply and cost of credit which the system is bringing about.

"In order to bring about this needed reform, the national banks and the state banks which are co-operating with the Federal Reserve System, are called upon to forego the income from 'exchange' charges which they have been receiving for remitting for checks drawn upon themselves. This will result in a general revision of the relations between the banks and that class of depositors whose accounts have been carried at an actual loss to the bank. These depositors will undoubtedly be asked either to keep their balances sufficiently large to compensate the bank for the services rendered, or to pay the bank a reasonable, though nominal, sum for such services, so that the bank will not be required to perform any service at a loss. Many bank depositors probably fail to realize the items of cost in banking. For instance, every check passing through the average size bank costs from two to three cents to handle, and this is typical of similar small items of expense which have entailed some loss, the aggregate of which is quite large.

"The various changes made necessary in the banks in the development of this banking system which is producing results so advantageous to the country have entailed upon the member banks some losses of revenue, and the business community should properly be expected to share the cost of the evolution of the system."

SECOND REGIMENT GOING INTO CAMP

Co. K Has Been Ordered to Report at Sea Girt July 22.

Orders were received Saturday by Lieutenant-Colonel William B. Martin from Colonel Horace M. Reading, commander of the Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., stating that the organization will move to Sea Girt to participate in "field exercises" from July 24 to July 29. The regiment will move to the State reservation on Saturday, July 22.

The acting regimental quartermaster will furnish transportation and make the necessary train arrangements for the movement from the home station to Sea Girt and return, and will notify commanding officers of the arrangements for the movement of the respective units. The First Battalion, headquarters in Elizabeth, Major Conrad Hall commanding, will in all probability receive orders for assembly early next week.

The cotton service uniforms will be worn and the men will have the full field equipment. That there is evidenty plenty of tentage and other equipment at Sea Girt is shown in the statement that the acting regimental quartermaster will take action for the reimbursement to each unit of the equipment loaned to other regiments.

The mess of the officers will be by battalion, and the battalion commanders will cause arrangements to be made in their respective commands for the mess. The noncommissioned staff, the band and hospital corps will form the mess under the regimental commissary.

General Orders No. 14, which have also been issued, provide that each company commander must forward to regimental headquarters a roster of his command, giving only the names of the men who have not taken the oath together with a request that they be dropped.

ENDORSEMENT OF HUGHES REPUDIATED

Everett Colby Says G. O. P. Candidate Will Have Progressive Support.

The New Jersey Progressive State Committee at a lively meeting in Newark, Saturday, repudiated the endorsement of the Presidential candidacy of Charles E. Hughes by the Progressive National Committee, despite the efforts of Everett Colby to bring about such endorsement. Notwithstanding this action, Mr. Colby since the meeting sent word to Mr. Hughes that he would have the support of a majority of the Progressives in this State.

Charles C. Wheeler, of North Plainfield Township, who was among those present, voted on all resolutions to maintain the State Progressive party and in favor of the movement to allow the members of the party to vote as they please at the primaries and election.

State Chairman Hopkins made an attack on both Hughes and Roosevelt and attempted to show that the latter had said that Hughes was only "another gold brick." This statement attributed to Roosevelt, has since been positively denied by the former President. It is quite likely that the Progressives will have a State ticket in the field. What support will be given it is problematical for a small majority of the faction was represented at Saturday's meeting.

FIRE DESTROYS GARAGE AND DAMAGES AUTOMOBILE

Fire, the cause of which is not positively known, destroyed a small auto garage on the premises of O. F. Waring, at Park avenue and Ninth street, early yesterday morning, and considerably damaged an automobile valued at $1,700. It was 12:29 when the fire was discovered by Patrolman Brower and an alarm was turned in. The department responded quickly and while it was impossible to save the garage, Captain George Feiring by pulling the car out of the blazing structure, was able to prevent its entire destruction.

Fire Chief T. O. Doane, who made an inspection of the place afterward, was of the opinion that the blaze was caused by spontaneous combustion, possibly from oily rags left in the building. The garage was of frame construction and once lighted it did not take long to burn it to the ground. The loss is estimated at $800.

TAKE ANOTHER COTTAGE.

Former Governor and Mrs. J. Franklin Fort and Miss Fort, of South Orange, are now settled in their Newark avenue cottage at Spring Lake, which has been occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Leslie R. Fort, of Cedarbrook road, this city, since Decoration Day. The latter have taken a cottage on Worthington avenue for the balance of the summer.

BROKE PAROLE.

William Ryan, a fifteen-year-old boy with no home, is being detained at police headquarters until his case can be investigated. He was picked up Saturday night, after he had run away from a farm in Bound Brook, where he had been put on parole from the Jamesburg State Home for Boys.

JONAS LIE, WELL KNOWN ARTIST, WEDS MISS INGA SONTUM, NORWEGIAN DANCER

Miss Inga Sontum, a pretty Norwegian dancer, well known in New York and Newport, is now the bride of Jonas Lie, the artist, well known here, and also a native of Norway. The announcement, which has just been made, has occasioned no little surprise among the many friends of Mr. Lie, both here and in New York, and it also discloses the fact that Mr. Lie secured a divorce from his first wife, who was also a Norwegian, and was free to wed again.

The marriage of Miss Sontum and Mr. Lie took place at the artist's studio, No. 2 East Eighty-first street, New York, on July 1, and the bride and bridegroom are now spending their honeymoon at a popular mountain resort in New York State.

Mr. Lie's first wife was his own cousin, both families being highly connected and prominent in Norway. The divorced wife, it is said, has since married again, her husband being a police official of her native country. She will be remembered by many Plainfielders whom she met when she lived in this city for a time.

In 1910 Mr. Lie and his first wife went to Norway. It was his first trip home since he was a boy. He spent several months painting the scenery of his native land, and brought back the pictures and exhibited them. Most of them were done in winter and the first Mrs. Lie was pictured at that time accompanying her husband on skiis on sketching trips through the mountains, although she was not an artist.

Miss Sontum organized and appeared as premier danseuse in several successful entertainments in Newport during the last three summers. She also maintained classes there and in New York in formal and fancy dancing, her pupils including the daughters of the families well known in society. Last winter Miss Sontum arranged the dancing features of the annual performances by the Junior League, the leading charity organization of young women of society in New York.

Mr. Lie is even more famous in his line than his bride. Born in Norway in 1880, he has lived in America since he was thirteen. He studied at the National Academy and the Art Students' League and has become a landscapist of renown.

For years he has had a studio in the hills near Plainfield, where he made his home. He has held frequent exhibitions of his work at leading New York galleries and several of his paintings are in the present annual exhibition of the Art Association of Newport.

NETHERWOODS CONTINUE ON TO PENNANT WHILE FARMERS SINK STILL DEEPER

East End Clan Captures Another Victory at Farmer's Expense—Baptists Fail to Hit Harney and Lose—Tabs and Hopes Idle Over Week-End.

Dunellen, 5; Baptists, 0.
Netherwood, 8; Farmers 2.
Hopes vs. T. A. B. S. (postponed).

The City League had a busy session over the week-end, although only two games were played. The scheduled tilt betwen the Hopes and the Tabs was not played, as several of the Hope players went on the Saurer outing. The game was called off with the knowledge and consent of Manager Jim Scott, of the Abstainers.

The battle between the Netherwoods and the Farmers was not the farce that it was expected to be. The Netherwood team did win and did experience the "big" inning in which seven runs were scored. But, outside of exhibiting quite a little ability at that time, the league leaders showed no unusual class and did not maul Morley in the style anticipated.

The Baptists took a little trip to Dunellen. The jaunt was not profitable from the Baptist viewpoint, inasmuch as that team went down to defeat at the hands of the Maurer contingent. The locals were not adept with the willow and could not connect with the offerings of Harney. The Dunellen lads were not able to do much with Mills, the new Baptist hurler, but managed to get away with a win.

There will be a City League meeting in the Daily Press office this evening. It is not expected that any discussion relative to the amateur or professional standings of several of the league leaders will be allowed inasmuch as that matter was definitely settled at the last gathering. There is a rumor afloat, however, that the Baptists are going to revise discussion regarding the game forfeited to Hope Chapel.

DUNELLEN CITY LEAGUERS CANNOT HIT "JAKE" DEINZER, NOTED NO-HIT HURLER

Scholastic "Phenom" Had Apgar's Men "Eating Out of His Hand"—Warry McLaughlin Allows Only Four Hits—Gunzelman's Double Results in Only Local Run.

The Dunellen City League team lost to St. Peter's, of New Brunswick, at New Brunswick yesterday afternoon by the score of 4 to 1. Too much "Jake" Deinzer is the reason assigned by the Dunellen manager for the defeat of his team. Warry McLaughlin occupied the mound for the league team and pitched great ball in all but the first inning, when his delivery was nicked for three of the four hits which the Saints were able to obtain during the entire game. These three hits, together with an error by Gunzelman, and the failure of "Box" Apgar, who caught in place of Bergen, to hold "Mac" in proper style, netted the St. Peters their only runs of the game.

The Dunellen tally was scored in the first inning, when Gunzelman doubled and stole second as Lou Brown whiffed the ozone. Kenny's muff of Trust's grounder allowed Gunzelman to make third. He scored on Bergen's long sacrifice fly.

Manager Tommy Apgar had a very strong team on the field and brought along a capable array of second string men. Lou Slocum was carried as relief pitcher. Randolph, of the Farmer A. C., was also carried along. The score:

CAMP ACKERMAN IDEALLY SITUATED

Benefits to Be Derived From Stay at Camp Prove Value of Undertaking.

The championship contest this fall among the Boy Scout troops of this city is going to be something quite out of the ordinary if the efforts of Eagle Scout Parater, director of the Boy Scout camp, Terrill road, count for anything. He is arranging with the various troops of the city and vicinity to give them a special course in scout training in conjunction with some of the other scout activities that are taking place at Camp Ackerman.

Champion Troop 5, which has been out of training for almost a year because of the lack of a scoutmaster, is arranging to have a period of training at the camp. Troop 14 and Troop 9 have spoken for the last week in July. Troop 11 has asked for reservations in the third week in August. Twenty-four or more scouts from Newark are anxious to be here during August; fifteen to thirty-five scouts are coming from Roselle during the first and second weeks in August. There are only seven more weeks of camp, so that parents desiring to have their boys enjoy the benefits of Camp Ackerman should make their bookings with Commissioner A. V. Searing, Jr., telephone 758-J, at once.

Camp Ackerman

Camp Ackerman is ideally situated on a rising knoll overlooking Terrill road, in Fanwood township. Board of Health authorities from Fanwood and other places have pronounced it to be admirably adapted to camping. The drinking water is piped from the Plainfield water supply direct to the cooking shack; ice is delivered to the camp daily; the scouts sleep high and dry on canvas cots under waterproofed canvas tents; a shower bath is on the premises and a dandy swimming pool has been provided by Mr. Nelson, of Fanwood, for the use of the boys in the scout camp.

The accompanying picture shows the layout of Camp Ackerman. The first picture to the left is the permanent scout camp building of wood, with its luxurious big hearth and open fire-place erected last year. Next is the wooden, screened-in cooking shack in which a United States Navy cook has charge of the preparation of food under most sanitary arrangements; next is the director's tent and the other tents housing sixteen boys—completing the company street. The cook's tent is on the extreme left and does not appear in the plate. Attorney-General Westcott, who visited the camp recently, said it was the finest arranged boys' camp he had ever seen.

With over one hundred acres generously contributed to the use of the Plainfield Boy Scouts by W. W. Coriel, including woodland, plain and dell, there is excellent opportunity for prosecuting scout work to its fullest possibilities, and the regular weekly treasure hunt, with its many thrills, and real treasure for some lucky boy, makes Thursdays one of the most popular days at the camp. The hunt always starts at 2 o'clock. Dr. F. W. Westcott, of Fanwood, has given his personal attention to the sanitary condition of the camp and the medical examinaions for entering scouts.

Boys who go to this camp are trained to be good citizens, to respect the rights and property of others, to help other people at all times, to learn true patriotism by keeping the body strong, the mind clean and the heart willing to serve in all good enterprises and to be a good man. Toward these purposes many prominent Plainfield people have subscribed toward the maintenance of the camp.

NETHERWOODS WIN AT FARMER'S EXPENSE

Joe Morley Pitches Well, But Has One Very Bad Inning.

The Farmers were easy victims for the Netherwoods, league leaders, in the weekly tilt, Saturday, losing the game by the score of 8 to 2. The East End team, although victor, realized that it was in a conflict as the game was more tightly played than the score would indicate.

Joe Morley essayed to pitch for the "cellarettes." This effort was his third attempts as a league pitcher. It may be said that this was the one time he showed to unusually good advantage. The Netherwoods used a new man, Hebding by name, in the box. Russ Stewart also tried his hand at hurling. Each of these fingers was a puzle to the opposing batters, who were able to gather together only five hits during the entire contest.

Billy Ryan was the hardest hitter on the losing outfit. Billy smashed out two singles. He had little or no work to do in the field, however. Brandt, of Bound Brook, banged out two doubles and had a perfect day in the field.

HARNEY HYPNOTIZES BAPTIST CLOUTERS

Norman Allows Only Three Hits, While Mills Permits Eight Clouts.

Dunellen with Norman Harney, the Bound Brook twirler on the slab, defeated the First Baptist's aggregation by the score of 5 to 0 at Maurer Oval, Dunellen, Saturday afternoon. Harney twirled one of the best games of his career, holding the First Baptist sluggers to three scattered hits and obtaining twelve strike-outs.

Dunellen procured what would have been a sufficient margin with which to win in the first inning when Bergen singled through the box, sending Trust, who had doubled across the rubber. This margin was enhanced by two tallies in the third inning on a pass to Harney and a single and a double by Guzelman and Brown, respectively.

The best chance that the First Baptists had to score was in the sixth inning when Townley doubled after Patterson had been extinguished, Brown to Apgar. All that was needed was a single, but Dunham and Stine proved unequal to the occasion, both striking out. The score:

DENNY AND M'FADDEN HURL ONE HIT GAME

Jack and "Mickey" Toy With Garwood, Allowing Only Pitcher to Hit.

Jim Scott's T. A. B. S. finally hit their stride yesterday and resumed their winning ways by taking the lively Garwood A. C. into camp to the tune of 3-0. The home boys were favored with some good pitching for, through the combined efforts of J. Denny and McFadden, their opponents were held to a solitary hit. This hit, a fly which dropped between McCarty and Rosenson, was made off Denny, who pitched the first three innings and then gave way to McFadden, who displayed his old-time ability. In the six innings he twirled only a single ball was hit beyond the infield, that being a fly to Brennan. Brennan's trip to the Polo Grounds last Monday evidently was not in vain for in the second inning he made a running catch of a drive by Dunn, which would make Speaker's efforts seem feeble. Another feature of the game was a terrific two base clout by McFadden.

For the visitors, Watt off third, made good plays, and Ruddy pitched a good game, only one T. A. B. run being earned.

HARRY STITES PITCHES NO-HIT CONTEST ALLOWING ST. JOSEPH'S NO RUNS

Art Kyle and Jimmy McCarty Save Day for Him—Stites Fans Fourteen Opposing Batters—Eddie Conshay in "Saint" Debut Allows Only Two Hits.

Harry Stites, pitching for the Plainfield A. C. against the St. Josephs on Hyde Oval Saturday, allowed no hits and no runs, winning his game 2 to 0. The excellent fielding of Art Kyle and Jimmy McCarty, both T. A. B. City Leaguers, saved him on two occasions.

Eddie Conshay, who recently left the Farmer A. C. to become a member of the Saints' team, permitted only two hits, fanning thirteen men. Stites fanned fourteen of the opposing batters and had excellent control. Despite the fact that four errors were made behind him, Harry easily earned the right to have his picture in the baseball "Hall of Fame."

Ahearn was the star in the field, making three difficult catches in "big league" style. The score:

SITUATION WANTED—MALE.

YOUNG professional man desires position during summer months; clerical or outdoor work. Address "Professional," care Press. 6 28 tf

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

COUNCIL AWARDS SEWER CONTRACT

Lange and Haslam's Bid of $115,000 for Extension Work is Accepted.

STREET WORK PLANNED

Ordinances Providing for Macadamizing and Extensive Separate Surface Drainage Adopted—Other Routine Business.

Because of the lack of a quorum the City Council was an hour late in holding an adjourned meeting last night, and it was necessary to do considerable telephoning to secure the presence of the required number of members. Those present in addition to President Francis J. Blatz were Councilmen Sminck, Hamilton, Bird, Hylan and Babcock, Messrs. Hamilton and Babcock being "rounded-up" by 'phone.

John J. Carroll, city clerk-elect, who took office yesterday, filled his position at the meeting, his predecessor, James T. MacMurray, who held the office for twenty-two years, being an interested spectator. A fine bunch of roses graced the clerk's desk, being the gift of former State Senator E. R. Ackerman to the new clerk. Owing to the great amount of business transacted at the previous meeting, it took Mr. Carroll over a half-hour to read the minutes, a tedious job.

The business of the evening was chiefly routine. A public hearing was granted on the ordinance providing for the macadamizing of certain streets, but no one appeared to enter a protest. Later the ordinance was adopted.

The director of revenue and finance, Jersey City, communicated with the Council in reference to a proposed appeal to the Public Utilities Commission for the purpose of securing a uniform electric light rate. This was referred to the finance committee, and a communication from the State Board of Health approving the city's plans for a sewer extension, was filed.

Lange & Haslam, of Ridgefield, the lowest bidders, were awarded the contract for an extension of sewer work, in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Hylan. The concern's bid was $115,000. The work to be done is chiefly in the West End of the city.

Hawkins, Delafield & Longfellow, of New York, certified that the $30,000 school bonds were correct as to form and this matter was referred to the finance committee. Petitions asking for an extension of the sewer system on East Sixth street, near Central, and the macadamizing of Lake street were referred to the street and sewer committee.

The petition of the Newark Auto Supply Company, of 304 West Front street, to install a gasoline tank of 555 gallons' capacity in front of its place of business was granted. In this connection Mr. Hylan suggested that the concern be requested to use the type of pump having a door that raises up, instead of opening side-ways. Mr. Hamilton explained that the permit was simply to install a tank and that the pump is put in at the owner's risk. However, he thought the owner would be willing to adopt the suggestion.

Louis Kadish, of Somerset street, who has been making extensive improvements to his property, asked the Council to see that electric wires at that point be placed on one pole, which is some times done, before he lays a concrete walk. The matter was referred.

Mayor Leighton Calkins appointed John Custis as dog-catcher and the appointment was confirmed. City Judge W. G. DeMeza's quarterly report showed that he had disposed of 467 cases and that $715 had been collected in fines. After deducting necessary expenses $547.45 was turned over to the city treasurer, William F. Arnold.

Upon motion of Mr. Hylan an ordinance previously introduced which provided for the construction of separate drains for storm sewers in certain streets was reconsidered and then withdrawn, the member stating that the city engineer had discovered a way of doing the work at a great saving in money. He then presented maps showing where these improvements are to be made and an ordinance providing for the work which was adopted on two readings. Assessments for the work will be levied on property-owners the same as in the case of other street work. A public hearing will be granted on the ordinance at the meeting of the Council, August 7.

Mr. Hylan reported back the contract between the city and the architect in the matter of the supervision of the building of the city hall, it having been approved by Corporation Counsel C. A. Reed, and it was ordered filed.

CARDS FROM REINHART.

A notable collection of postal cards from the Mexican border is being gathered at police headquarters that have been sent to the various officers by Johnnie Reinhart, who was court stenographer before he enlisted in Troop D. One received this morning is a photograph of dogs feeding on dead Mexicans.

PUT ON BLACK LIST.

When he was arraigned in court this morning on a disorderly and desertion charge, John Kanary was put on the black list all over the city by City Judge William G. DeMeza and ordered to pay $12 a week for the support of his wife and four children.

CENTRAL AVENUE WIDENING REPORT

Improvement Will Cost $9,687—Cut First Baptist Church Assessment $500.

The report of the commissioners in the matter of widening Central avenue, from West Front street to the railroad bridge, was received at the adjourned meeting of the City Council, last night, showing that the cost of the improvement will be $9,687. Of this amount the city will pay $2,187, an additional $500 assessment being levied on the city, reducing the assessment of the First Baptist church to $500, which in the opinion of the commissioners was a fair proposition, the original assessment being considered excessive.

Through a resolution offered by Mr. Hylan and adopted, William R. Townsend, tax collector, was authorized to receive the assessment money for this improvement and the compensation of damages in excess of benefits was authorized to be paid to the affected property-owners.

RUSSELL BRAKELEY CHASING THE "BLUES"

Dunellen Boy the Life of the Camp at Douglas.

Camp Funston, Douglas, Ariz., July 18.—Getting acquainted with the rainy season is what the sanitary troops of the First Field Hospital Company are doing here these days. The first storm last week partly flooded the camp, and Major Harold D. Corbusier, of Plainfield, commander of the hospital company, had all his officers and men digging ditches to drain the camp site. Fine work was done, and in a few hours a good drainage system was installed.

Captain David A. Kraker, the executive officer, superintended the drainage work with the assistance of First Lieutenants William A. Stapleton and Frederick H. Thorne. Officers and enlisted men all took a hand at swinging the picks and shovels.

The company has been furnishing amusement to the neighboring militia organization with the aid of the phonograph. Concerts are given during spare time in the tents of the enlisted men, and sometimes in the officers' quarters.

There is no vaudeville comedian that has anything on Russell D. Brakeley, of Dunellen. There is no incident that occurs in camp that "Legs," as he is called by his mates, doesn't see some fun in it. Brakeley gets the officers and men of the outfit laughing every time he appears on the scene.

Napoleon has arrived in camp. He came with an old campaign hat, and when the hat is properly worn the face of First Sergeant Richard F. Doran beams under it. The sergeant had his picture taken the other day in a typical Napoleonic pose. All the boys are waiting to see the result and hope to have it appear in the Plainfield Daily Press.

"Doc" Barnard, the Plainfield druggist, is on the job in the dispensary tent and is doing good work under Corporal Howard McD. Wagner, of Bound Brook. They work well together and they are fast gaining a reputation for the company. They also take a hand with the pick and shovel whenever there is necessity.

The field hospital is now being used for receiving patients for the whole brigade, and a large number of minor cases have been taken care of. It has been a great aid for the immediate treatment of cases.

Corporal Lawrence Knowles has been in charge of the camp "laboring" squad, and despite the unpleasant job he has been obtaining good results. All hands are ready to work at the drop of the hat for Corporal Larry.

There is no "blues" in the camp, for Brakeley is the sure cure. He and the goat mascot can upset anything in the way of depressing feelings.

Bugler Moreland has been designated as the camp alarm clock, but the alarm clock always has to be awakened by the men doing guard duty.

The field range in the kitchen tent of the hospital company is the pride of the whole brigade.

MEXICO REMEMBERS JUAREZ.

WILL ORGANIZE RELIEF LEAGUE

Prominent Women of the State to Meet Mrs. Fielder at Sea Girt Tomorrow.

FUND TOTALS $2,100

Branches of State Body Have Been Formed in Nearly Every County—Already Many Appeals for Aid Have Been Received.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Sea Girt, July 18.—Mrs. James F. Fielder, wife of the Governor, has called a meeting of twenty-five well-known women from various parts of the State, to be held tomorrow, at which the organization of the New Jersey Soldiers' Relief League will be completed. The work is well under way in some of the counties, and prospective county chairmen have been secured in others. Already over $2,100 has been raised to aid in the work by Mrs. Fielder, and a few of the active members of the first branch, which was formed two weeks ago at Spring Lake. Contributions of money continue to come to Mrs. Fielder, and she said this morning that few people can realize how great are the appeals for aid. "The cases which we are helping," declared the Governor's wife, "cannot by any stretch of the imagination be called charity cases. I have been asked to give out the eext of some of the letters which I have received, and feel that if that should be done, and the writers saw their appeals in the papers, it would interfere greatly with the work, even if names were not given out."

The central committee of the league, which will meet here tomorrow with Mrs. Fielder and a number of the county chairmen who are already at work, consists of Mrs. J. N. S. Brewster, of Elizabeth; Mrs. Garret A. Hobart, of Paterson; Mrs. Arthur Mackie, of Newark; Mrs. Dwight Morrow, of Englewood; Mrs. Karl G. Roebling, of Trenton, and Mis. William D. Sherrerd, of Haddonfield.

County chairmen thus far elected are: Atlantic, Mrs. John J. White; Bergen, Mrs. H. V. D. Moore; Burlington, Mrs. William A. Slaughter; Camden, Miss Elizabeth Reeve; Gloucester, Miss Elizabeth B. Matlock; Hudson, Mrs. H. Otto Wittpenn; Hunterdon, Mrs. E. B. Allen; Mercer, Mrs. Francis C. Lothrop; Middlesex, Mrs. W. Parker Runyon; Monmouth, Mrs. Louis C. J. Barthelemy; Salem, Mrs. Howard C. Whitehead.

The work has already started in Essex, Hudson and Passaic counties, and a local organization which is cooperating with the league has been formed in Plainfield to care for dependents of members of Troop D of that place. In Essex County the work is being done by private investigators, and in Hudson, Marshall Van Winkle is taking charge and all appeals made are being investigated by volunteers. In Paterson, Mayor Radcliffe and a committee of citizens began the relief work before the league was formed, and money has been forwarded to him with which to continue giving aid.

Mrs. Fielder said this morning that she confidently expects chairmen in every county who will be at home all summer, to actively begin work by the time tomorrow's gathering is completed. Luncheon will be served to the visitors at the Governor's Cottage.

DRESS FABRIC BUYERS.

New York, July 18.—The present condition of the dress goods business in all its phases was discussed here today at the mid-year meeting of the Jobbers' Association of Dress Fabric Buyers. Representatives of the trade in all sections of the country filled the assembly room at the Waldorf-Astoria when the gathering was called to order this morning by President W. M. G. Howse, of Wichita, Kans. In addition to the general business situation the subjects that receiev'd particular attention at the meeting included methods of sampling and the present developments in the dyestuff situation.

AT CAMP ACKERMAN.

The Cave Scout of "Boys' Life" fame will be the guest of honor of the local scouts at the campfire exercises at Camp Ackerman on Thursday evening. All the scouts of Plainfield have been invited to attend these exercises. The "Cave Scout" is a nom plume assumed by one of the writers in the Boy Scout Magazine. The game of hostile spy will be played this afternoon and evening. A treasure hunt will be followed by campfire exercises.

SOPRANO SOLOIST.

Mrs. Joseph Edgar, of West Sixth street, has been the soprano soloist in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church during the months of June and July, and will continue in this capacity a part of September.

PRAYER MEETINGS TONIGHT.

Te prayer meetings scheduled for this evening are as follows: Mrs. L. C. Sheppard, 28 Somerset street; Mrs. R. V. Kinney, 71 Pearl street, and Mrs. Frank Kesselring, 24 Chatham street.

FREE POSTAGE FOR VOLUNTEERS

Congressman Capstick Seeks to Secure Franking Privilege for Men.

PRESENTS RESOLUTION

It is Designed to Facilitate and Encourage Correspondence Between Soldiers and Their Families and Business Associates.

In response to an urgent request from former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, Congressman John H. Capstick introduced a concurrent resolution in Congress this week the purpose of which is to accord to United States soldiers on the Mexican border the franking privilege in the matter of sending letters.

The resolution provides that "the ranking commissioned officer of each company of volunteers is authorized to initial, or otherwise distinguishly mark, all forwarded first-class mail from any member of his command, said distinguishing mark to be in lieu of the customary postage and entitling the letter or communication to passage through the mail in the usual manner, this rule to be in force so long as the troops are in the field for the present emergency." The resolution was referred to the committee on postoffice and post-roads. Mr. Capstick in speaking of the matter said:

"In offering the resolution to facilitate and encourage correspondence between the volunteer soldiers, their families and business associates, I am prompted by the practical and economic benefit such an innovation would work, and am also conscious of the sentimental feature it embodies.

"I think the country generally realizes now the full meaning of the changed conditions of the men along the border. They returned to their homes from business as usual one day recently and next day went into camp. There was no time for preparation of their private affairs or to fortify their families for the indefinite separation.

"Now they are encamped along the Mexican border and have time to think of the things they would like to have done and the things they would have said in parting. I feel they would like to spend some of their spare time writing. It will be an easy matter to get paper and envelopes to do this, but quite another thing to get postage stamps. I do not believe any of the men are without funds to buy stamps.

"The purpose of the resolution is not a financial one, but is to provide a convenience to these men to keep in touch with their personal affairs, and as an incentive for them to write oftener than they otherwise would, thereby relieving the monotony of camp life and keeping them profitably engaged.

"It will also have a stimulating effect on the folks at home. They will write oftener. A letter from home at regular intervals will means a great deal to those men. This idea is not new. It is employed by the nations abroad with troops in the field and has proven a boom to the men. Investigation shows this and also that the cost to the Government is very small. Proper regulations can be adopted to prevent abuse of this franking privilege, for that is what it amounts to. I have designated the ranking commissioned officer of each company of volunteers as the official to mark the envelope in lieu of postage. It seems to me that his name, or initials, the company and regiment, could easily be placed on the letters of the men in his command and forwarded from headquarters with other mail or in the usual manner."

FIREMEN PLAY BASEBALL.

"Something new all the time"—that's the motto of Captain Al Fritts, of the borough fire department. Al's latest stunt is centered about the installation of a device known as a "baseball game." The game is played with quoits and contains all the thrills of a regular National League attraction. It is being enjoyed daily by the firemen, who have already become adept at playing it. The scores or games played this morning were Fireman Reynold, 12; All Fritts, 7; Reynolds, 2; Fritts, 3. Other games were played during the day and the idea promises to become unusually popular.

EMERGENCY ORDER OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally are hereby required to make report to the Board ON THE ARRIVAL at their hotels, homes and houses of any guest, visitor or transient from out of town. The report may be made personally, or by telephone; (No. 646), but must be made on the arrival in Plainfield of such guest, visitor or transient; and must give name, age, and the locality from which the party came. The purpose is to place the information at the command of the Board of Health, for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

VILLISTA FORCES GATHER FOR RAID

Concentrating in One Mass for Atttack on Texas Towns.

REPORTS OF COALITION

No Settlement Yet Made With Mexico, According to Washington—Pershing Again Warned to Keep His Men in Readiness for Attack.

Chihuahua City, July 18.—That Villista troops are proceeding to the border bent on attacking the American guardsmen was the report here this afternoon. General Jacinto Trevino has notified General Pershing and warned him to make preparations to check a raid. Villa's troops have eluded the de facto government's forces sent out to keep them south of here and are travelling in small groups numbering about 200 each.

The plan is to reassembele at Tanajas and Las Escobas, where they will be joined by big forces of bandits prior to the raid on several Texas border towns. Trevino, who is at Santa Rosalia, one of Villa's strongholds, has issued orders to the commanders of the garrisons at Ojinaga and Piedras Negras to use every soldier at their disposal in an attempt to head off the bandits.

Further reports of plans devised by a coalition of Mexican military chiefs and Mexican exiles in the United States for the overthrow of the Carranza government are to the effect that a complete set of governmental officers has been tentatively selected.

In connection with a statement that General Felipe Angeles, the military protege of former President Diaz, who later became Villa's chief of artillery, was on his way to Washington to lay the project before Assistant Secretary of State Polk, it was stated that the expatriates from Mexico are willing to furnish $20,000,000 bond for the removal of Generals Carranza and Obregon and $50,000,000 more for the temporary rehabilitation of Mexican finances, mortgaging their property in the United States and Mexico and pledging stocks, bonds and jewelry, as well as contributing cash. They will also guarantee to recruit and equip 15,000 men.

Washington, July 18.—The existing differences between the United States and Mexico have not been satisfactorily settled. The negotiations proposed by General Carranza for their settlement have not yet begun. There has been no conferencee recently between Eliseo Arredondo, ambassador designate of the de facto government and Secretary Lansing, who is on his vacation.

This is the reply of State department officials to the dispatch from Mexico City that General Carranza considers the differences settled. The only thing that has been settled appears to be the appontment of a commission of Mexicans and Americans to consider the existing differences.

NO NEW CASES OF DISEASE REPORTED HERE

There is only one case of infantile paralysis in this city, according to the Board of Health, that of the 2½-year-old son of Max Lewis, of 109 Liberty street. Such care was taken when the boy was found to have the disease that the health authorities are of the opinion that there is no need for fear of an epidemic in Plainfield. The Board of Health is taking no chances, however, and there is no relaxation in the strict rules put in force recently.

The board feels that Plainfield is most fortunate in not having more cases of the disease, especially as there have been a number in this immediate vicinity.

MARTINE FAILS TO SECURE ACTION ON CASEMENT BILL

Washington, July 18.—Efforts by Senator James E. Martine to get action yesterday on his resolution for intervention by President Wilson in the case of Sir Roger Casement, condemned to death for treason, failed through refusal of the Senate to waive the rules for its consideration, and the same fate also befell a modified resolution of much the same tenor, likewise through invocation of the rules. Although defeated on both lines, Senator Martine found opportunity to deliver an address, in which he cited the attitude of the English people in the case of Jefferson Davis.

BRITISH NEAR GERMAN'S THIRD LINE OF DEFENSES AND PREPARE FOR ATTACK AS KAISER DIRECTS

ALLIES VICTORIOUS IN NEW DRIVES AND CAPTURE 1,500 YARDS OF ENEMY'S SECOND DEFENSES WITH QUANTITIES OF AMMUNITION.

WAR COSTING GREAT BRITAIN $30,000,000 DAILY

French Remain on the Aggressive in Verdun Region and Are Gaining Ground West of Fleury—Italians and Russians Active—Latter Hurled Against von Hindenburg on the Dvina—Emperor William Leading on the Somme Front.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

London, July 18.—British forces are within striking distance of the third German line, according to today's official report, and General Haig's front has been carried forward to the crest of the Albert Plateau. The British have captured 1,500 yards of the enemy's second line positions north of the Bazentin-Le-Petit Wood, a strong German position at the Waterloo Farm, between Longueville and Guillemont, besides completing the capture of the whole of the village of Ovilles la Boisselle. The war is now costing Great Britain $30,000,000 a day, but with such news as the success of the Entente Allies this outlay is no longer grudged.

Emperor William is reported at the front in the Somme sector, where the allied armies are forcing a deeper salient into the German lines. On the eastern front General Kuropatkin, Russian commander, has launched an offensive against Field Marshal von Hindenburg on the Dvina River, and General von Linsinger's forces have been forced to retire southwest of Lutsk, a great Russian tactical success.

The French has been on the aggressive in the Verdun region and in gaining additional ground west of Fleury captured three machine guns. Russian troops in France inflicted heavy casualities on the Germans in a futile raid by the Germans on a trench in the Champagne. Paris reports the landing of more Russian troops in France, this time at Brest.

Italian forces in upper Posina Valley report that in hand-to-hand fighting they repulsed the Austrians along the whole front. Berlin announces that British artillery has been unusually busy along the front from north of the Somme to the sea, its fire at some points attaining "great violence."

Petrograd, July 18.—Shifting for the third time the direction of his attack in Volhynia and striking this time southwest from Lutsk toward the Galician border, Gen. Brusiloff, today's official bulletin announces, once more has broken through the Austrian and German lines opposing him and driven them back upon the River Lipa, several miles to the south.

The results of the battle, as so far announced, include the capture of more than 8,000 men—13,000 in all Volhynia during the day—and twenty-four guns, besides other material. The tactical results of this new blow at the Austro-German lines, in the view of Russian military critics, are destined to be of great importance, even beyond the immediate results. The advance southwest to the Lipa creates a dangerous salient in the Austro-German line further south and threatens their position at Brody, on the road to Lemberg.

A later bulletin said:

"In Volhynia, in the region of the Lower Lipa, our troops continued to press the enemy. Prisoners are still coming in.

"Northwest of Kimpolung (in the mountains of Southwestern Bukowina) our cavalry have advanced along the Kirlibaba-Marmarooksiget Road (leading through the Kirlibaba Pass into Hungary)."

Constantinople, July 18.—"On the Caucasian front," today's official report says, "our advance troops began battles at some points which went in our favor. On the centre the struggle temporarily has assumed the form of an intermittent battle with artillery. Local fighting continues here and there.

"North of the Tchoruk, on the left wing, attacks undertaken by the enemy in close formation were frustrated. The Russians suffered considerable losses. An enemy battalion was surrounded and destroyed in one of our counter attacks. Aside from these developments there is no news of importance."

Washington, July 18.—Great Britain has declined the offer of the American Red Cross to send to the central powers of Europe an American commission to receive and distribute Red Cross supplies to the sick and wounded of Germany, Austria and their allies.

Former President William H. Taft, chairman of the Central Committee of the American Red Cross, on June 10, made a proposals to the British Government that such an arrangement be made to insure the proper delivery of Red Cross supplies sent from the United States to Germay and Austria.

NO ILLNESS AT NORTHOVER CAMP

Not a Single Case of Disease of Any Kind Reported Among Children.

The fact that so many of the children at Northover Camp this month are under sixteen years of age has naturally raised the question whether their presence, even in a place so apart, can be a danger to the public health. For this reason it seems wise to state definiately that there is no case of infantile paralysis or other disease at Northover Camp.

Every child now at Northover has been under supervision for a period longer than that which this disease might have developed had there been unconscious exposure while still in the city.

Moreover, none of these children even came from infected localities. Ever since the epidemic made its first appearance the office at Christodora House has been in receipt of daily reports of the Health Commissioner on the spread of the disease, and no child has been allowed to join the camp who seemed in the least likely to have been infected. Each was carefully examined also before being allowed to leave New York, and by a competent physician.

Northover Camp is doing a preventative work under conditions which reduce risk to the minimum, or do away with it altogether, and it is to be hoped that restriction of this work may be relaxed at the first possible moment.

SCHOOL AND POOL CLOSED.

The summer schools and the High School swimming pool have been closed by the Board of Education indefinitely. This action was taken because of the infantile paralysis epidemic.

SUBMERSIBLE READY FOR UNDERSEA DASH

Deutschland Loaded and Only the Clearing Formality Remains.

Baltimore, July 18.—Although the German super-submarine Deutschland has not yet obtained clearance papers, there are many reasons for believing it may leave today. Certain it is the big submersible will be ready by noon.

Off the coast are several British and French warshhips, and somewhere not far away are American destroyers, said to have been sent to see there is no violation of American neutrality. The Deutschland has been painted to resemble the ocean, even to splotches representing whitecaps. The last of her nickel and rubber cargo will be stowed early today.

According to one theory, the Deutschland will leave her pier flanked by tugs enough to conceal her. These tugs will proceed to sea. Somewhere the Deutschland will drop from this hollow square and be swallowed up by the waves. The tugs will continue, and nobody can tell the submarine is not still with them. But there is no official sanction for this story.

An elaborate guard is over the Deutschland for her last hours here. There are lookouts and sentinels. All night searchlights played about the waters and kept off other vessels. No more visitors will be permitted after one party leaves this morning. The tug Timmins, that met the Deutschland on her arrival, has freshly coaled and is standing by to carry out the program, whatever it is.

BELIEVES SEWER SYSTEM FAULTY

J. Alfred Wilson Tells Council He Doubts Whether it Will Work Properly.

SAFEGUARDS NEEDED

Resident Complains That Sewer Laborers Drink Beer While at Work—Council Continues Membership in State League.

J. Alfred Wilson, of Washington avenue, told the Common Council at the adjourned session of that body last evening that doubts were entertained by some of the taxpayers as to whether the sewerage system was going to work when completed, and he asked how much of the money due the contractor was being retained by the borough to safeguard it in the event of the system failing to work as expected.

Mr. Wilson was told that fifteen per cent. of the total contract price was being retained and that when the work is finished and a certificate issued by the engineer certifying that the system is all right ten per cent. of this amount will be paid the contractor, and the other five per cent. retained for a year. In addition to this, Mr. Wilson was informed that the borough was protected by a bond for $41,000 for the faithful performance of the contract—this bond to remain alive until one year after the completion of the work. Mr. Wilson said that he was glad to hear this and added that in his judgment the borough should retain as much as possible.

Voicing his opinion of what people knew about sewers who said that the borough had been given a poor job, Councilman Jones said they knew nothing. Mr. Wilson then took the floor and gave a few concrete examples of the type of work which he said had been done. He said that in front of the residence of W. A. Houghtaling when an excavation was made for the house connection the "y" could not be found and considerable digging was necessary before it was unearthed a number of lengths of pipe away. He also said that while the sewer work was progressing in front of his home that he never saw an inspector once get down into a trench to see whether the pipe was being properly connected or not.

CITY LEAGUE MEETING MILD GATHERING

Very Little Business Transacted at Weekly Confab of Moguls.

At the City League meeting in the Daily Press office last evening, very little business was transacted, the time being taken up with the transfer of several players.

Jimmy Montross resigned as umpire, in order that he might play with the Hope Chapel team. Henry Winters, formerly a member of the T. A. B. team, was elevated to the position left vacant by Montross. It is expected that Montross will act in the capacity of pitcher for the Hopes. Randolph, the Farmer slugger, was released by that team and signed up with Tommy Apgar's Dunellen band. The Dunellen team dropped Veneto to make room for Randolph. Howard Freeman, formerly a pitcher for Yale, was released by the Baptists, who added Mehaffey.

No discussion regarding the amateur standing of the league took place at last night's meeting. No action regarding the game forfeited to the Hope Chapel team was taken at the meeting, although it was reported that such action would be taken today.

ROYALS WANT GAMES.

Pete Simmons, manager of the Royals, is looking for games for his team. Pete has received assurances from the manager of the Tabs that he will get a chance to play that team on Avon Oval some Sunday. HAND SUCCESSFUL AS FIELD GENERAL

Frank, With Randolph on the Mound, Scores Win in Managerial Debut.

Frank Hand's first effort as a manager met with great success. When Frank took over the reins of the Washington, "Steel" League, club, after the release of Billy Pfau, he was informed that he would have to supply the Washington fans with "real" baseball or throw up the sponge. It is evident from the score of Saturday's game and from glowing newspaper accounts of that game that the Scotch Plains catcher has been successful. The Washingtonians won the contest with Bangor, 6 to 3.

Cliff Randolph, having been induced to come out of seclusion, twirled one of the best games of his career. Cliff allowed only seven hits and fanned eight men. He had perfect control, walking none. Tommy Mullin performed at third base, scored a run and made a hit. "Red" Grimes contributed three hits, while Hand's share of bingles numbered two.

The fans of Washington were well pleased with the exhibition and the directors of the club have decided to retain Hand as manager. Northampton is the next victim.

AUTOMOBILISTS FIND ROADS EXCELLENT

New Jersey Highways in Good Condition Says Man Who Made Trip.

Automobilists contemplating taking extended tours this summer may find some valuable road information in the account of a trip of more than two thousand miles which has just been conmpleted by Floyd C. Huff, of Newark, and a party of friends, who made the round trip to Chicago and back, a few days ago.

The outgoing trip was made by way of Morristown, Washington, Phillipsburg, Reading, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, South Bend and Chicago. The return, after leaving Cleveland was made over the Buffalo-Albany post road, and thence along the Hudson river.

Accompanying Mr. Huff in his Standard Eight touring car were Sidney G. Duffy, Clarence R. Schuyler, Roy Lasher, Frank Strauss and R. W. Sykes. The average weight of the six passengers was 165 pounds.

Excellent roads were encountered in New Jersey, while the roads of Pennsylvania were fair to Pittsburgh, with the exception of some rough going before picking up the Lincoln Highway at Chambersburg. The roads were in very bad shape between Pittsburgh and Cleveland due to road repairs and heavy thunder storms, which made the roads all but impassable. Several autos were stalled along this section of road, but Huff and his party went through all right. Excellent roads were encountered between Cleveland and Toledo, and fairly good highways then led into Chicago.

The return trip by way of Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Albany was made without a stop, in thirty-four hours, four minutes, actual running time, which is but three hours behind the record between the two cities.

A few tire changes were all that were necessary, the hood not being lifted during the entire journey. The car averaged 10.48 miles to the gallon of gasoline and 113 miles to a quart of oil. This showing is remarkable in view of the great amount of low speed work necessary on account of the mountains and muddy roads.

Mr. Huff reported that the roads between Buffalo and Syracuse were in ideal condition, but road repairs between Albany and New York city made it necessary for nine detours, although the latter were over fairly good roads.

BITS OF BASEBALL.

Charley Aschenbach, who was manager of the Easton baseball team, with which Tommy Mullin played, has been signed up by the Newark International League team, and played in the double-header yesterday. Charley is by no means a newcomer in the fast circles, as he played with the St. Louis Nationals under the name of "Charles." While managing the Easton team Aschenbach performed at third base, with Tommy Mullin as his right hand man.

The Perth Amboy Pacers lost to Rahway Sunday. Mullin made one hit, but Hand failed to connect. In talking with one of the Amboy scribes, Tommy stated that Eagen, the Rahway hurler, had the best control of any left handed pitcher he had ever seen.

GAME OF BASEBALL.

The game of baseball is popular at the fire headquarters in the borough. The firemen spend their spare time contesting with each other in a quoit game, centered around the principles of baseball. Captain Al Frits is one of the most proficient contestants in this sport. The fall and winter quoit tournament will be arranged soon.

MARTY O'LOUGHLIN IN GARDEN CITY EVENT

Teamed With Haines, Local "Pro," Finishes Well up in List.

From what took place yesterday in the amateur-professional best ball competition, the prelude to the seventy-two hole open tournament which the New York Newspaper Golf Club is running just to prove that Barnum & Bailey did not have a monopoly on the biggest shows on earth, it was seen that the experts did not leave all their golf buried in the bunkers of Garden City last week. The "seventies" of the metropolitan open championship have this week given place to the "sixties" of Van Cortlandt, and unless some one starts out overnight with a plough no one would dare forecast that a player making four rounds of seventy will finish in the prize list, extensive as that is on this particular and unusual occasion.

Low best ball score of the day was made by Roger B. Taft, champion of the North Jersey Country Club and present holder of the Herald cup, and Louis Tellier, the "mighty atom" from Brookline, Mass., one time holder of the open championship of his native land, France. Their score was 62, made up of equal parts, as they were both out and home in the thirty-one strokes.

Behind these two, but three strokes away, came C. B. Harris and Elmer Loving, amateur and professional from Quaker Ridge, a new metropolitan links in that hotbed of golf, Westchester county. Then there were two 66's and a number of 67's, 68's and 69's.

Marty O'Loughlin, the local "pro," and H. A. Haines, of the Newspaper Club, were among those who registered a 69. Marty and his pal made 38 going out, but did much better on the return trip, covering the distance in 31 strokes. Roger B. Taft and Louis Tellier, who made the best score, covered the distance in 62, making 31 on the trip out and the same score on the return. Had Marty and Haines been able to equal their score for the return they would have been tied with the leaders. As it was, they finished well up in the list. The lowest score for the day was an 82.

SHAMROCKS DEFEAT ENERGETIC EAGLES

John Newell Allows Only Three Hits, Reasoner Getting Two of These.

The Shamrocks captured another victory yesterday, the Eagles paying expenses. The score was 9 to 0, and the defeat was overwhelming. The losers could get but three bingles, Bill Reasoner obtaining two of those. Several of the Shamrocks were able to register a duo of bingles. The score:

THE PARROT REPEATS--

SOME ABSORBING NEWS of the July Clearance Sale

"What I Saw at Tepper's!"

(From a Women's Point of View)

I saw more people at Tepper's during this sale than I have witnessed in many a day. Assuredly the Plainfielders know the economy of buying now. The prices re so low, that you can hitch a bigger load to your dollar than it ever drew before.

I saw the prettiest dresses on the second floor for $1.98, $2.98 and $3.98 that surely, from the standpoint of style and quality were made to sell for almost double that, and the coats, too, in styles that as snappy as ever. At these prices it surely would be a wise thing to buy one of them for cool evenings.

If every woman knew what bargains the suits were, I believe there wouldn't be one left after this tip appears in print. To think that suits that were marked at twenty-five dollars only a few days ago, are now only ten dollars.

I don't wonder any more that Tepper's have gained fame for their white tub Skirts. Just thihnk, the 'Never Shrink" Skirts wich they carry, are guaranteed not to shrink, and they cost no more than ordinary skirts.

Talk about July Savings—It's a regular July Jubilee amongst the Waist Section. A counter full of the prettiest styles in crepe de chine and silk blouses are selling for only $1.98. I just felt like buying them all, they were so attractive in price and in appearance.

I was told by Mrs. Jones of some splendid ladies' regular 10c Vests that are marked down to only 7c. I certainly will keep this in mind, when I'm there tomorrow morning, and buy up a good supply of them.

Women were certainly eager to get some of the big bargains at the Silk Counter. Why Silks, Satins and Crepes are sold so low that I really think it unwise for any woman not to profit by any of the savings in this section.

And Sakes Alive! To think that such pretty flowered and figured Spring Voiles should cost only forty-nine cents. I heard some friends say that they bought lots of these and other wash goods at similar low prices, because another bargain like this may never be offered as long as this war lasts.

Talk about the war! You'd think it has not had the least effect on the New York markets from the low prices which are asked for Longcloth or Nainsook. Why, I've seen on one counter a lot of Nainsook Remnants which were regularly 29c per yard, and are being sold at only 15c per yard.

Most of all that impressed me, was the fairness of prices throughout the store. The reduction sounded genuine and had the true ring of good value in every offering.

I've often heard friends say "Tepper's for Children's and Infants' Apparel," but I never really got the full import of the meaning until my visit to this department this time. Infants' and children's goods are all combined into one department now on the main floor. Shelves full, racks full, counters full, tables full—My, what a display. The prices were so low, and the values so real, that I couldn't help buying up a good supply of apparel for my children.

On one rack they have an assortment of the prettiest suits for boys. Brown and blue mixtures are on sale for $2.69 now. The original prices of these suits was, as I've been told $4.50. This is certainly some bargain, I assure you.

I could not help buying one of the Juvenile Wash Suits that are selling for a few cents less than a dollar. If I were to buy it another time I would have to pay much more for it.

It seems that the practice of giving clever values has become a habit in the Children's Department. I've seen there several assortments of dresses to fit girls from 2 to 14 years old. There were chambrays, stripes, checks and voiles, and so many others some having bloomers, others empire effect, selling at prices that were really tantalizing.

It seems that almost everyone bought something for their little baby. All the pretty things for infants are on display, and the prices—well, just come and see for yourself. They are enough to open anybody's pocketbook.

Don't think that men don't love to hunt bargains as well as women. You should have seen men around that counter buying Shirts, Socks, Underwear and the like. Why, I was told confidentially by one of the office boys that he had to help out all day last Saturday in this department in order to give prompt service to the purchasers. The prices are low enough to make everybody buy.

And, surely you must go and see with your own eyes how far your dollar can travel at Tepper's.

This store will be closed every Thursday in August. These are our employes' recreation days.

WILL RESTRICT THE PARKING OF AUTOS

Taxicab Drivers Must Not Back Cars to Curb Opposite Railroad Station.

There is to be an abatement of one of the taxicab nuisances on North avenue, that of the drivers parking their cars against the curb, opposite the railroad station. Mayor Leighton Calkins had his attention called to the matter and this morning a new rule went into effect which will bring about the desired reform. Two traffic posts have been placed at either end of the railroad station and all taxis must park between those two points. Those who are unable to stand their cars in that space will not be permitted to park on the avenue. They will have to wait their chance to run their machines into the prescribed limits.

The police have been given instructions not to allow the taxicab men to back their cars up to the curb opposite the station as they have been doing for some time, much to the annoyance and inconvenience of the merchants on that side of the thoroughfare. It has been impossible at times for customers of these merchants to approach the stores, especially if they happen to be traveling in automobiles, and it was this condition that led Mr. Calkins to take prompt action. As for reported violations of the hack ordinance, the Mayor earnestly requests the cooperation of Plainfielders, those who patronize those who operate hacks and taxicabs, so that these violations may be stopped.

Referring to this matter, Mr. Calkins said:

"I would advise that a person detecting any violation insist that the taxicab driver take him as a fare, and then direct that he be taken to police headquarters where a complaint can be lodged against the driver of the car. I am determined that these men shall comply with the ordinance and have instructed the police to that effect. If they don't their licenses will be revoked promptly."

INSURE EMPLOYES OF THE PRUDENTIAL

The largest single amount of life insurance ever covered by any company in the world was announced today by the Prudential Insurance Company of America. The insurance will total over $16,000,000 and covers the lives of the Prudential's more than 16,000 employes, both those at work and in the field, and those working at the home office of the company in Newark.

The insurance will be carried by the company absolutely without cost to the employes and will be in sums ranging from $500 to $2,000, according to the employe's length of service and without reference to age or position, except that it does not apply to officers or directors, or to those whose whole time is not given to the service of the company. It will affect men at work in nearly every State in this country and throughout Canada. No medical examination will be required.

The Prudential is the first life insurance organization employing so large a staff to insure its members under such a liberal method. It had had a disability plan in effect for some time for the care of its employes during illness, also a retirement system, which provides an income after faithful service, and the latest gift of free life insurance is the rounding up of the company's effort to care for its employes and their departments. Needless to say the announcement by President Forrest Dryden met with hearty response from each and every employe as the members of their families.

Reforms in American Banking.

"It has become a mere platitude to speak of the great reforms and improvements in American banking brought about by the new law of 1913. Every one knows how the central reserves of gold and credit have been mobilized and what the benefits are of the sound note issues that are adjustable to the needs of the country.

"These newly created safeguards against the old-time panics are such outstanding features as to overshadow other advantages now enjoyed by the public from the daily operations under the same law. Readily available reserves and an amply supply of currency afford the very necessary provision against emergencies, yet for ordinary times and in the day-to-day work of financing the industry and commerce of the country other new developments are equally or more important. A low and stable rate of discount has for the first time been made effective throughout the country. A considerable volume of trade is being cheaply financed by bankers' acceptances. A national discount market has passed the first stages of development. Many economies are apparent in the settlement of domestic exchanges through a central gold fund.

"Perhaps more important than all in ultimate effect upon American banking is the beginning of branch banking by the national banks. If many follow the lead of the two or three who have started to operate domestic and foreign branches, the possibilities for American banking are unlimited."—H. V. Cann, in the August Century.

THE FORUM

Editor of the Plainfield Daily Press:—I recently took a walk up Somerset street, North Plainfield. That street is certainly being improved, but, the improvement that attracted my attention most was the North Plainfield City Hall. For financiering, North Plainfield has Wall street "beat to a standstill." In the first place at a cost of between $3,000 and $3,500 they have made room for all the borough offices in the engine house—collector, borough court, street commissioner, police and lock-up. Everything is in first-class shape. The old police station is being fitted up as a store and leased for five years for enough money to pay for heat, light, interest on money, etc., so there will be no rent to pay for city offices.

North Plainfield should be proud of those responsible for such management of borough affairs. I am certainly a believer in giving credit to any public official who does his full duty to the public, and North Plainfield seems to have business men who understand their business at the helm. I am also a believer in giving any public official who does not work for the best interests of the public, which places confidence in him "Hail Columbia."

Somerset street is being widened from Jackson avenue to Johnston's drive. When finished it will be a great improvement. The street is also being remade and the entire width is also a much needed improvement. Few people realize that Somerset street has had as hard usage as any street in New Jersey, there being two stone crushers and the ice pond is located at the upper end. Every load that comes down weighs from 8,500 to 10,000 pounds, which is very wearing on a road. The strangest part of it all is that every man from architect down to street laborer is a North Plainfield man thereby keeping all the money spent in North Plainfield. Hard to believe, but true. Some larger towns should get a leaf out of North Plainfield's book. Everything seems to be orderly over there. No drunkenness to speak of. Jails empty almost all the time. By the way, the jail was the only dusty place I saw, which shows there had not been anyone sleeping there for some time. That speaks well, in a way, for the borough.

I have always hoped that North Plainfield and Plainfield would be consolidated some day, but, somehow things do not cost half as much in North Plainfield as they do in Plainfield. I'm afraid if I owned any property in the borough now and the question should come up I would look well into conditions before I voted for annexation. We Plainfielders are getting too sporty. Some people of North Plainfield are complaining of high taxes. Those people should remember that the borough line only runs to the center of Green brook and that the taxes on one building on Front street is as much as the taxes on some blocks in North Plainfield. I have been in a number of different towns in my time, but I never saw a town where the natural advantages for a town site equaled the Plainfields, water under the whole town, gravel bottom solid enough to start any building on drainage. It seems that the Almighty when he made the earth made a town site to order for the Plainfields.

EDUCATION NOTES

One of the most distinguished visitors to American schools and universities this coming year will be Sir Rabindranath Tagore, Hindu poet and philosopher, winner of the Nobel prize for literature in 1913, who will visit the United States and make a lecture tour of the principal educational institutions of the country. He plans to arrive in Seattle in September, and after a short stay on the Pacific coast, to spend several months in the East.

Cincinnati educators have made an enviable record in the matter of being authors of school text books. No less than twenty-six prominent Cincinnati school teachers, past and present, are authors of text books of wide circulation. The first of these, "Ray's Eclectic Arithmetic," was published as early as 1834. The series of "Ray's Arithmetics," by Dr. Joseph Ray, then professor of mathematics at Woodward College, Cincinnati, is still in use as standard text book throughout the country.

Interesting news comes from China of the great track and field meet held on the grounds of the Methodist University at Peking, and in which eleven schools competed, representing the three northern provinces of China. This was the fourth North China track and field meet, and was won by the Nanki School of Tsientsin. Field meets were a great novelty in China until recent years, as the old type of classical student in China abhorred exercise of all sorts and never engaged in violent atletic games.

John Edward Calfee, head of the normal department of mathematics at Berea College, Kentucky, has resigned his post to become president of the Normal and Collegiate Institute at Asheville, N. C. Mr. Calfee was born in a one-room log cabin in the wilds of Dode county, Maryland, and has spent his life entirely among the people of the Southern mountain section. He has become widely known for his conviction that teaching country boys and girls mathematical problems dealing with Wall Street operations, the building of submarines and skyscrapers and some other things that are found in ordinary school text books, is of much less importance than solving their own problems. His courses in arithmetic to his mountain pupils dealt entirely with rural problems, such as bad roads, waste of machinery, health and satnitation, and the title of "father of rural mathematics" was jokingly bestowed upon him by fellow professors.

Two college presidents among the officers, in the unprecedented circumstances connected with the First Vermont Regiment of Militia, now under arms in preparation to do its duty if war calls. Its colonel is President Iral L. Reeves, of Norwich University, and its chaplain is President John B. Thomas, of Middlebury College, both Vermont institutions. Colonel Reeves is a former officer of the regular army. He was installed as president of Norwich a day after the call came for the militia, and doffed his academic robes to don his uniform.

A committee of eleven professors and instructors in Eastern schools and colleges has been appointed by the College Entrance Examination Board to consider a further revision of the requirements in Latin for admission to college, and with a view to making these requirements of simpler scope. One of the changes suggested is a reduction in the total number of entrance examinations, such as would be gained, for instance, by combining into one examination the separate tests in grammar, elementary prose composition, and Cicero and sight translation of prose, or by using the comprehensive papers, covering all this ground, which Harvard, Princeton and Yale employ.

Seven thousand students are enrolled for summer study at the summer session of Columbia University, which opened last week. Two important conferences are now being held in connection with the summer session. The first of these is on classical studies, and President Gilbert Murray, of the University of Oxford, and Professor Paul Shorey, of the University of Chicago. With the aid of these two distinguished scholars, President Butler aims at a revival of the classical languages, of which he has always been a determined advotate. A second conference of importance now in progress in connection with the summer session is one on religion.

POSTMASTERS MEET.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—Many of Uncle Sam's postoffices will have to struggle along without the boss this week, for a large proportion of the postmasters throughout the country have gathered here for the annual conventions of their national associations. The opportunity that the meeting affords to become acquainted with the workings of the postal service at the main center of operations has served to attract an unusually large attendnce of the postmasters. Postmaster General Burleson and other high officials of the Postoffice Department will address the conventions and President Wilson will receive the visiting postmasters at the White House.

England Once Offered Spain the Great Rock in a Trade.

I know that for everlasting stability and stubborn resistance there is nothing in the world like Gibraltar. Did you ever hear of a curious little bargain, which was never consummated, but in which that great rock at the mouth of the Mediterranean figured as part of the price? It had to do with an important part of our own country, and yet it is seldom mentioned in any of our histories.

The impregnable fortress was fought over by the Spaniards and the Moors for two centuries, and it came in for the keen interest of Oliver Cromwell, who thundered at the British the fact that if they ever hoped to become the dominating sea power of the world they must control the Mediterranean from Gibraltar. This great necessity was never lost sight of, but a suitable pretext did not arise until the war of the Spanish succession, when England and France were at each other's throat for the mastery of Europe.

Under Admiral Sir George Brooke the British fleet made an unexpected attack on the Spanish defenses and captured Gibraltar in 1704. Presently the English sickened of their bargain. That was long before the digging of the Suez canal by the French and the Egyptians, and the cost of maintaining the rocky fortress appeared to be out of all proportion to its worth. When Spain was approached by Napoleon for the purchase of Florida as a blow at England from the western theater of the Anglo-French war, England offered Spain to trade Gibraltar for Florida. Had the trade taken place England would not now be undisputed mistress of the sea.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

HEALTH OFFICIALS HOLD CONFERENCE

Ways and Means to Prevent Spread of Infantile Paralysis Discussed.

FURTHER PRECAUTIONS

Summer Schools and Swimming Pools Closed—Full Co-operation of the Public is Urged—'Clean-up" of City is Underway.

A conference of the local physicians, Mayor Leighton Calkins and the Board of Health was held in the Board of Health rooms last night to discuss the infantile paralysis situation. The secretary and health officer of the North Plainfield Board of Health as well as the health officer of Westfield were present, and an interesting discussion took place in regard to the first case in Plainfield that developed yesterday.

The present policy of the Board of Health in its attempt to safeguard the health of Plainfield was approved and, with some additional precautions, will be continued. The policy, briefly outlined, has been (1) the discouragement of gatherings of children, (2) publicity to secure the co-operation of the public, (3) a campaign of sanitation.

Under the first head, the efforts of the Board of Health have resulted in restrictions on the Netherwood Fresh Air Home; the closing of the summer schools; the closing of the Sunday-schools and postponement of the excursions. The Board also advises against the taking of children out of town if they are to return in a short time.

The co-operation of the public in furnishing the Board of Health prompt information concerning visitors and cases of illness has been of great help and greatly lessened the probability of any epidemic, and the Board asks that the people continue to do all they can to help. Papers printed in several languages are to be distributed asking for this assistance.

The special effort to improve the general sanitary condition of the city is to be continued with the assistance of the police department and individual householders are asked to redouble their efforts in helping. A revised list of what the public is expected to do follows: "Promptly notify the Board of Health of visitors; promptly send for a physician at the first sign of illness and isolate the patient; keep your children on their own premises and keep your premises in a clean condition.

FRANKLIN W. FORT FAVORS FRELINGUYSEN

Declares That Somerset Co. Man is Qualified for U. S. Senatorship.

Somerville, July 18.—That Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, former State Senator, is well qualified for the position as United States Senator, is the opinion of Franklin W. Fort, a well known lawyer of Newark, who also is a son of former Governor John Franklin Fort. In discussing the United States Senatorial situation recently, Mr. Fort said:

"Former Senator Frelinghuysen has had some excellent legislative training in the State Senate, and he is the logical candidate for the nomination. This is the day of the young man in politics, and I believe the young Republicans throughout the State will rally to the standard of Senator Frelinghuysen. He has not been mixed up in any of the differences of opinion in the Republican party, and he is a man of strong convictions, an excellent record, splendid personality, and I consider him an ideal candidate."

Asked what he thought about Essex county, Mr. Fort said:

"There is plenty of esntiment in Essex county for Senator Frelinghuysen, and it is growing rapidly. He is the type of man that appeals to the Republicans who like men of the character of the Presidential nominee, Justice Hughes, and I am confident that Frelinghuysen will make many friends in Essex county and receive splendid support at the primaries. He is acceptable to the Republicans with Progressive principles, and at the same time the 'old line' Republicans find in him a candidate they can support."

The organization of the "Frelinghuysen League of Essex County" is planned, and it is expected that the enrollment of members will be begun actively in the near future. Sufficient interest has already been displayed by Republicans in all parts of Essex county to indicate that it will not take long to organize a league that will do some effective work in behalf of Senator Frelinghuysen. Frelinghuysen Leagues will be started in other counties, also.

Reports from many of the counties in South Jersey indicate that the trend of sentiment for Frelinghuysen is growing rapidly, and he is receiving many promises of support from prominent Republicans in many of the counties of that part of the State. The Senator has recently been down in Atlantic, Cumberland and Cape May counties, and everywhere he met with enthusiastic receptions, and his campaign received fresh impetus as a result of his trip through these counties.

Everywhere there appears to be a greater interest manifested in the Senator's candidacy, and it is conceded that the sentiment in his behalf is growing stronger daily, with the certainty that he will have a good vote in many of the counties, particularly in te farming sections because of his popularity with the farmers and grangers.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

How much oil should be put in the crank case at a time?

Most engines have a pet cock on the side of the crank case, which determines the oil level. If not this, there should be a sight gauge. Not knowing the type of motor you have it is impossible to tell definitely the amount of oil necessary except to state that there must be sufficient oil in the crank case to allow the connecting rods to dip in a bath of oil and splash the oil in and about the various bearings, including the cylinder walls.

I am overhauling my car and find that the intake valve opens before the exhaust is closed. What is the reason for this? Would it not allow the exhaust gases to back up into the carburetor? Or, if not that, would it not impair the suction of the intake charge?

The point is often brought up as to why the exhaust valves are left open after the inlet has been opened and also why the exhaust is opened before the end of the power stroke, thus allowing some of the explosive pressure to escape through the valve opening. Examination of the conditions of operation soon dispels any thought that the exhaust should remain closed until the very end of the explosion stroke at least.

As a matter of fact, the practice is almost universal of leaving the inlet valve open until the piston has not only reached the bottom of its suction, but has actually started back on its compression stroke, ordinarily about one-half inch up. At first it would seem that some of the gas drawn in would be forced back again into the inlet passage, but the speed of the engine must be taken into consideration. At a normal rate of running about fifteen cycles would be completed in one second with a moderate speed engine, and at such a speed the piston has reached the lowest point of its stroke before the gas has all been able to get in because the gas moves slower. So even when the compression stroke has begun there is still some slight suction tending to draw more fuel in.

What is meant by three point suspension of a motor?

Three point suspension means that the engine is supported in the chassis at three points only. There is usually a support of either side of the flywheel and one in the center at the front. This allows the power plant to maintain a level position without regard to the twisting of the frame under any conditions.

Is there any way to take up the wear in a full floating rear axle?

If by wear you mean wear of the gears you can take this up by moving the teeth of the pinion and ring gear closer together. There are usually adjustments either side of the ring gear to allow of its being moved slightly to the right or left, and there is usually an adjustment providing for the moving of the pinion back or forward.

What is meant by thermal efficiency?

Thermal efficiency is the ratio of the work actually done, when expressed in heat units, to the total heat supplied in the fuel that enters the combustion chamber.

What is meant by center of gravity of an automobile?

The center of gravity of a body, whether it be a motorcar or any other thing, is that point about which, if suspended, all the parts will be in equilibrium and there will be no rotary tendency.

Does a carburetor work as economically on medium or very low throttle as it does on open throttle?

An engine will not operate very economically on extremely low throttle, due to the fact that it requires a richer mixture. This is inherent and cannot be overcome in the carburetor. A carburetor will give the best mileage at medium speeds, although there should not be any particular speed at which the motor will run most economically. Of course wide open throttle running is not economical because the motor is overcoming increased internal resistance if high speed is attained, and if high speed is not attained it is due to work put on the engine because of a grade or bad road.

My car runs well on the battery, but misses at all speeds on the magneto. Everything has been done that I can think of to remedy this, but to no avail. The induction coil has been changed, spark plugs, wiring tested, etc. Can it be in the relay? The distributor block has been changed.

Since you get a good spark on the battery side it is very likely the fault lies in the magneto side of the distributor points. These probably are pitted, and until you have repaired or replaced them you will continue to have trouble. Examine the points of your distributer. If there is enough platinum left they may be cleaned by filing, but if they are worn down to the brass they must be replaced with new ones. Then again, they may be set wrong. It is hardly likely that the fault is in the relay. Get the distributer points right first, then if the trouble continues look to your relay.

If a motor has a long stroke and small bore and another has a short stroke and large bore and they both have the same cubic inch displacement, what would cause the difference in power, or is there any difference? Which is considered the better?

The problem as to which stroke bore ratio is better seems to be insolvable at present, as engineers disagree on this point. Some prefer the short stroke, others adhere to the square motor, while the majority believe in the long stroke. A recent article set forth the advantages and disadvantages of the long stroke motor as follows: The advantages resulting from a careful study of the subject are: (1) Smaller mechanical losses and less wear in the motor bearings; (2) better thermal efficiency in the medium long stroke type as caused by the decrease of heat losses from the cylinder and better mixing of the fresh charge at its entrance into the cylinder; (3) higher range of maximum obtainable piston speed; (4) more favorable type for high compression work; (5) better for the use of poor grades of fuel; (6) smaller loss of pressure in the cylinders due to less harmful influence on the performance of the motor because of expansion and distortion due to piston and cylinder heating; (8) accessibility of the valve mechanism due to greater space permissible for these parts; (9) better low speed performance; (10) somewhat lower temperature and pressure of the exhaust.

The disadvantages mentioned are: (1) Motor accelerates with more vibration unless extra light moving parts are used; (2) larger timing gears necessary due to the distance between the cam shaft and crank shaft to provide for connecting rod clearance (larger timing gears call for more noise, a higher peripheral velocity and added cost); (3) heavier valve mechanism parts, resulting in noisier valve action; (4) less adaptable to four cylinder motors using two bearing crank shafts and sixes using three bearings.

These advantages and disadvantages take for granted that the long and short stroke motors discussed have the same construction otherwise. The advantages of the long stroke may be considered as disadvantages of the short stroke, and vice versa.

I cannot get the motor of my new car to run smoothly, although I have adjusted the carburetor in every possible way. After running the motor a few minutes I notice that some water is discharged from the exhaust pipe. The water from the radiator goes through the intake manifold. Could water get into the cylinders from that source? I strain the gasoline through chamois skin and do not think it could get in that way.

Water should not come from the exhaust pipe when the engine is running. You state that the water pipe from the radiator goes through the intake manifold. If this is the case possibly one of the gaskets is defective and water is being sucked directly into the cylinders from this source.

If you cannot readily detect the water leak in any of the joints you possibly will find a sand hole in one of the castings which is leaking water. It may be necessary for you to have the cylinders taken off and tested under pressure for a water leak. A very small sand hole in a cylinder will cause you trouble and cannot readily be detected under ordinary pressure. Water in the cylinders will cause the miss in your engine irrespective of carburetor adjustment.

Will you please give me the formula for figuring the number of revolutions a gear must be turned to bring corresponding tooth marks together on timing gears set with odd teeth?

The method of figuring the number of revolutions a gear must turn to bring corresponding tooth marks together on timing gears set with odd teeth is simply to calculate the least common multiple of the number of teeth on each wheel. For instance, if one wheel has sixteen teeth and the other has ten teeth the least common multiple would be 80. Then for every eight revolutions of the ten tooth wheel or five revolutions of the sixteen tooth wheel the same teeth would come into mesh.

Would water admitted into cylinders from the intake manifold, which is then converted into steam, keep the cylinders free from carbon?

Admission of water into the intake manifold and then into the cylinders is utilized frequently to prevent deposit of carbon and to keep carbon deposits soft. Many owners have found that such a method gives very good results.

Will you please explain the proper timing as to opening and closing of both exhaust and intake valves and the relation of spark when full retard? What is the maximum r. p. m. if so timed?

The proper timing depends upon the speed of the motor, the size of the valves, design of the engine, and hence it would be impossible arbitrarily to give you a specific timing without knowing the engine. The maximum r. p. m. would also depend entirely on the design.

SAINTS ARRANGE GAME.

The St. Josephs will play the Westfield A. A. on the Hyde Oval on Saturday. The local team will have Eddie Conshay on the mound with Andy McDonough behind the bat. The Westfield battery has not been announced, but as it is known that the team is out to avenge a defeat administered by the Saints earlier in the season, it is thought that the Westfielders will come to this city considerably "padded" up.

MANVILLE TEAM LOST.

The Plainfield A. C. made a trip to Manville Sunday and defeated the Johns-Manville team, 6 to 0. The home team could not hit Butler, who permitted but five scratch bingles. Morely and Semer were the main hitters for the winners, each getting two hits.

The P. A. C. manager invites any kind of opposition. Managers wishing games should write to Sam Semer, of 902 West Third street, or call 401 any evening.

F. S. LYNN RESIGNS AS BOYS' SECRETARY

Accepts Position With Central Branch of Philadelphia Y. M. C. A.

F. S. Lynn, who for the past year has been the boys' secretary at the Y. M. C. A., has just accepted a call to the Central Branch of the Philadelphia Association, where he will be in charge of the employed boys' department. He will take up the duties of his new position on September 1.

Mr. Lynn came to Plainfield from the Newark Y. M. C. A., and during his residence here has been very successful in building up the employed boys' department. His departure from Plainfield is regretted by the officials of the local association. As yet no decision has been reached as to who will succeed Mr. Lynn here. The fact that he will remain until September 1 will give the association ample opportunity to secure a man for his place so that he will be able to start in with the opening of fall activities.

ANIMALS IN POLITICS, WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

Not always clear is the relation of various animals adopted as party mascots to political factions. Frankly, we are seriously at a loss to determine why the jackass was selected for the designation of the Democratic party and therefore cannot definitely settle the query coming from a Daily Press reader. The observing woman in the country who said that geese were well named based her reasoning on the same philosophy that so readily picked the jackass for the emblematic duty.

It is when we come to the choice of the elephant for the Republican party that uncertainty arises. Why was this creature adopted? One reason is that it is understood to be very long lived. Another is that it carries its trunk always with it, an evidence of prevision and provision. Another is found in its great strength. There are a good many reasons which are too obvious to call for mention.

Now comes the Prohibition party and it selects the camel. This is explainable, too. The camel always has its back up; and, with all respect, we may mention that the average Prohibition leader is somewhat similarly inclined. But that is only a minor claim for the camel. The real adaptibility of this animal to the cause of Phohibition is that it can go longer without a drink than any other creature. That's conclusive.

Y. M. C. A. TENT NOT A NEED, BUT A NECESSITY.

Plainfielders may feel proud of the fine monument they have made possible at Douglas, Arizona, in the form of a Y. M. C. A. building. Voluntary contributions collected from patriotic spirited local residents has resulted in the dedication of a structure on the Arizona desert, recently transformed into a National Guard training headquarters, that will serve many purposes. It has already found its place and found it to be a mighty important one. The soldiers have put it to use as a writing station, lounging quarters, meeting place and time will find it serving a thousand and one purposes. Those responsible should be made to feel that they have performed a highly commendable deed but those not actually on the scene can fully realize the extent of the service it will perform, not alone for our Plainfield boys, but the entire First Brigade. The precedent established by local residents is a good one and should be followed elsewhere.

FRELINGHUYSEN HAS ALL THE EARMARKS.

On the grounds that he is a successful business man—successful in the development of agriculture—Joseph S. Frelinghuysen invites the endorsement of Jerseymen on his candidacy to the United States Senatorship. Well might he, for too much cannot be said for his ability along this particular line in the development of a remarkably successful life insurance business. He is a business man, statesman and leader of marked ability. Fear that he is not familiar with national problems need not for a moment be entertained. He is a student of all that concerns his country and there are absolutely no grounds for hesitancy in placing the stamp of approval on his bid for the senatorship. Mr. Frelinghuysen knows Plainfielders and Plainfield voters know him to be honest, fearless and thoroughly competent to shoulder the burden they may choose to intrust him with.

Although the major portion of Plainfield's seventy miles of roadway is passable, there are at least two important stretches, and maybe more, that are sadly in need of resurfacing or filling in. These are located on West Front street, west of Madison avenue, and East Fifth street, east of Park avenue, two of the most traveled portions in the city. They are two of the main thoroughfares through which autoists coming into the municipality have to pass. Would it not be well to direct a little attention in their direction and sidetrack some of the criticism that is coming our way at the present time? These strips of roadbed are filled with holes and unfit for any sort of vehicular traffic. In wet weather they are nothing more or less than mud ruts and while our local drivers know enough to avoid them, persons unfamiliar with road conditions in Plainfield are forced to plow through mud and water in rainy weather and to bump the bumps in dry weather.

While a man is available for military service up to forty-five, and occasionally a good deal beyond that, physical disabilities and family responsibilities are ample reasons why a few million men between 18 and 45 should not go to the front. Comparatively few enlist after 24, or even 20. But a universal militia service, with training of six months in one's eighteenth year or of two months each in three successive years, would give the country a vast potential army to call upon in case of emergency.

Home, Sweet Home.

My dad is on the warpath,
He says that he is bound
To vote for Woodrow Wilson,
Fer Wilson's safe and sound.
He's mighty touchy on it,
He's ready fer to fight;
A chip is on his shoulder,
Yes, morning, noon and night.

My grandpa, he is eighty,
But full of fire and vim;
He says no pussy-footer
Will get a vote from him.
He is an old-line fighter
On precedent and views.
No new ideas for grandpaw,
He's going to vote fer Hughes.

They start to scrap at breakfast
And yell the whole day through,
And they cuss one another
As no kinsfolk should do.
It ain't no place fer children,
It's time fer me to roam;
I don't hear no fit language,
Just now around our home.

Beware of the feller that comes along with a book under his arm and starts in by sayin', "Now, my dear sir, I am not going to try to sell you anything," for he is either a liar or a fool, and he ain't no fool.

If Job ever had to take his wife to a ball game and explain it to her he would have lost his chief claim to immortal fame.

The fellers that cuss the most and abuse their wives while gettin' ready to go to a party are gen'ally the ones who enjoy it the most after they get there.

Come to think of it, I don't know of any millionaire or railroad president who spent his youth standing around the street corners in the evening smokin' cigarets.

A Pessimist's Story.

In an unguarded moment when my wits were out wool gathering and my guardian angel was asleep at the switch, I confided to a friend the fact that I might, some day, take out some life insurance.

My friend had a friend who was in the life insurance business. That was enough. Life insurance news travels fast and agents gather around a new feeding ground like flies around a sugar bowl. They seem to rally like microbes and to attract more of their kind.

I told my friend about my intention at noon over our lunch. By 3 o'clock seven life insurance agents had called and had killed the afternoon. There were five more waiting outside on the sidewalk and three in the street car which I took for my home.

When I reached home there were nine on the front porch and seven in the parlor entertaining my wife with horrible tales of life insurance or the lack of it, in which there were visions of the orphans in the poorhouse.

At 10 o'clock that night the last agent had spoken his piece and departed, although several had volunteered to stay all night and continue the argument in the morning. After listening to them all the evening I had every sympton of every disease that had ever been invented.

When I awoke in the morning there were six new life insurance agents sitting on the porch and it was only 6 o'clock. They seemed to breed like Parker Butler's guinea pigs although, of course, a life insurance agent is not that kind of a pig.

I escaped by the back gate and took the car for my office. As I drew near I thought the building was on fire. The street was packed with people away out to the car tracks. They were life insurance agents waiting for me to open my office.

I didn't get off the car, but continued on to the railroad station. I am now staying down in the country with my wife's folks for a month or two until the excitement blows over.

There is only one way to get life insurance and that is to say nothing but just go and get it.

CIVILIAN RIFLE CLUBS OF STATE WILL HAVE USE OF SEA GIRT RANGE

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Sea Girt, July 18.—Summit men forming the National Defense Organization Rifle Club of the borough, will be the first to take advantage of the opportunity offered civilian rifle clubs to practice on the State range. General Bird W. Spencer, inspector-general of rifle practice, said this morning that he had a large number of applications from similar clubs, and would assign them the dates as rapidly as possible. The Summit organization will be here on July 21 and 22, August 11, 12, 25 and 26. The Newark and Red Bank clubs will also have the use of the range on Saturday of this week.

This is the first time that civilian clubs in the State of New Jersey have taken advantage of the privilege granted by the army bill, which appropriates money for free use of arms and ammunition by members of any rifle club affiliated with the National Rifle Association. The men are to be given Krag rifles and ammunition. Civilians can also shoot on the range if they secure the written recommendation of an officer of the National Guard, the only expense that any of the riflemen have to bear being a small one for the services of markers and scorers, instruction being free.

General Spencer said today that club competitions, shooting for qualification as members of the National Rifle Association, individual practice or the shooting of the course prescribed for organized militia would be permitted, the 800-yard range being used in all competition except the last. All persons qualifying will receive the qualification button issued by the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Pracice.

Other organizations which have made applications for the use of the range, and will have dates assigned as rapidly as General Spencer can do so, are the Westfield Rifle Club, Kearny Rifle Association, John Wanamaker Commercial Institute and John Wanamaker Rifle Club, who have a camp at Island Heights, Hackensack, and Lodi Rifle Club, Celluloid Club of Newark, Elizabeth National Rifle Club, Englewood Rifle Club, Celtic Rifle Club of Paterson and the Arlington Athletic Association Rifle Club.

The order issued yesterday to bring recruits for the National Guard organizations now at the front a Sea Girt before forwarding them to Arizona, has added to the work of the range also, as all these recruits have to be instructed in the use of the rifle and given an opportunity to practice. General Spencer's plan is to get them together and give them a lecture about the gun itself, and then send them on the range in groups with Colonel William Libby or Colonel David M. Flynn as the firing instructor. The recruit training, which is expected to begin before the week is over, will be in charge of Major Winfield Scott Price, of the Third Regiment, assisted by officers detailed from the Second and Third. It is expected that the first groups of these recruits will be here tomorrow or next day, as they have been held at the recruiting points for instruction. Until yesterday the impression was held here that these men would be sent to the camp at Du Pont Delaware. In view of the chang to Sea Girt, Adjutant-General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr. will bring his office back here, and Captain Stephen H. Barlow, who expected to go to the border as property officer by the end of this week, will remain to take charge of equipping the new men, and transferring the property to the government. A number of the members of the quartermaster's staff will also return to Sea Girt.

- Proctor's Theatre -

will be greatly appreciated by patrons of Proctor's, we believe, not only because of the work of Miss Gish and her fellow players, but also because the Southern atmosphere is excellent, and there are many human touches. Alan Dwan, always a careful and skilled director, worked from a script by Roy Wummeeville, which in turn was based on a story by Granville Warwick. Other attractions today include Gertrude Hornidge, the talented soprano, who created much favorable comment yesterday by her excellent rendition of several of the most popular song hits, in conjunction with their presentation in story form upon the screen. Miss Hornidge will continue to entertain at each performance throughout the rest of the week. In addition to a special Keystone comedy today, the sixth episode of "The Secret of the Submarine" is also shown.

Tomorrow Theda Bara will be presented in her latest vehicle, "East Lynne;" Thursday, William H. Thompson and Charles Ray appear in "The Dividend," and Friday, Norma Talmadge will be starred in "Going Straight," a special Triangle play.

Lillian Gish, the Triangle star, well known for her work in "Daphne and the Pirate," "Sold For Marriage," "The Lily and the Rose," and D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," appears at Proctor's today in her latest picture entitled, "The Innocent Magdalene." Mischief wrought by slanderous tongues in a small town constitutes a large portion of the story. No feature released has had a better cast than in this. The leading man is Sam De Grasse, who played the "Wolf" in "The Good Bad Man," with Douglas Fairbanks; the negro mammy is Jenny Lee, who was the queen of the Paris Apaches in "A Child of the Paris Streets," with Mae Marsh; the father is Spottiswoode Aitken, who played with John Emerson in "The Flying Torpedo," and "the other woman" is Mary Alden, who has been seen in "The Lily and the Rose" and "Acquitted." This romance of heart interest gives Miss Gish opportunity to play one of her typically appealing parts as a Southern girl of today whose father, an unreconstructed Kentuckian, has brought her up in an atmosphere of aristocratic poverty. MONSTROUS SHARK HAD SEAMAN'S WATCH

Just "Eight Bells" When Shark Swallowed Timepiece.

A monstrous man-eating shark, caught off the Jersey coast, weighing 450 pounds, has been carrying with him a seaman's watch.

It was just eight bells when the shark swallowed the watch, as that was the time recorded on the dial, when Captain Louis Sorcho prepared the fish for embalming.

The shark was caught by one of the crew of a United Fruit Steamer, and was purchased by Louis Kay, secretary to the commodore of that fleet, Mr. Kay, being familiar wih Captain Louis Sorcho's submarine exhibitions at Palisades Amusement Park, negotiated with Sorcho, which resulted in the sale of the shark to Sorcho, for exhibition purposes.

It was evident that the shark needed to be preserved immediately, and it was while this operation was in progress that the watch was found. It is an open face seamen's watch, with a brass case, which at one time had been nickle plated, but apparently the acids of the shark's stomach had eaten off most of the nickle and turned it a dark green color.

According to Sorcho the watch is not badly damaged, and can be put in good condition easily. If any sailor of a coastwise vessel lost a watch overboard, Sorcho will be very glad to return it to the rightful owner, on proper identification.

LEHIGH VALLEY WILL IMPROVE ITS SERVICE

An important passenger service improvement will be installed on the Lehigh Valley Railroad Sunday, when a through sleeping car will be placed in operation between Philadelphia and Chicago in connection with the Michigan Central Railroad. The new car, which will leave Philadelphia daily on The Black Diamond, will be turned over to the Michigan Central at Buffalo, reaching Detroit at 12:10 that night and Chicago at 8 o'clock next morning. Eastbound the car will leave Chicago daily on the crack Wolverine at 9:05 a. m., leave Detroit at 3:40 p. m., and arrive in Philadelphia on the New York Philadelphia Express at 9:15 the next morning.

Another improvement announced in connection with this service is the operation of a dining car into Philadelphia.

The new sleeping car service to Chicago in connection with the Michigan Central will be in addition to the present extensive sleeping car service already operated by the Lehigh Valley to Chicago in connection with the Grand Trunk.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Elise At Last Broke The Spell.

"I am innocent!" Elise cried.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

THE children sat down on little stools beside daddy while he told them a story just before they went to bed:

"While Elise, the brave young queen who wove coats for her brothers spent her last night in a dungeon because the people thought her a witch, little mice ran across the floor to bring her nettles to weave with. A thrush sat on the window grating and sang sweetly to keep her company. It was near dawn, and her eleven brothers stood at the palace gate begging to speak with the king before they were changed into swans.

"The answer they got was the king was still asleep and could not be disturbed. They begged so hard that finally the king came. But just then the sun arose and the brothers vanished. Nothing but eleven wild swans were to be seen hovering over the palace.

"All the people streamed about the palace gates waiting to see the witch burned. An old horse drew the cart that brought Elise. They had put on her a green smock, and all her golden hair hung loose about her shoulders. On the way she worked while everybody jeered her. The crowd pressed upon her, threatening to tear her weaving from her hands. Just then eleven white swans flew down and perched upon the cart, flapping their wings. The crowd drew back, and just as a strong man seized her hand she threw the eleven coats over the swans, and immediately they became eleven princes. But the youngest had a swan's wing in place of an arm, for Elise had not been able to finish the sleeve of his coat.

"'Now I may speak! I am innocent!' Elise cried.

"Then all the people saw what had happened—how she had broken her brothers' spell by her work of silence and love. And they bowed down before her as if she had been a saint—as, indeed, she was.

"But Elise, who was worn out from the long strain and distress of her labor, fell lifeless in her brothers' arms. She had borne too much suffering, you see.

"Then the brothers explained all about the spell that had held them and how Elise had so unselfishly saved them, and all the fagots in the cart turned into red roses, with one pure white blossom shining in their midst. This the king picked and laid on Elise's bosom, and at once she woke up with joy and peace in her heart.

"Then without any one ringing them the church bells began to peal, and Elise and her eleven brothers all went back to the palace with her king."

Household Hints

THE TABLE.

Huntington Shrimp—Melt two tablespoons butter and stir constantly till well browned. Add two tablespoons peanut butter and stir till well blended, then add 3½ tablespoons flour. When thoroughly mixed, pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, 1½ cups of stock (chicken is best) and bring to a boiling point. Add one cup hot boiled rice and one cup canned shrimps broken in pieces. Season with half teaspoon of salt and a little pepper. Turn into buttered baking dish, cover with croutons and bake in hot oven until croutons are brown.

Fried Tomatoes with Cheese—Remove skin from firm tomatoes, cut in thick slices, dip in beaten egg, then in crumbs, fry in hot lard, first on one side then on other. Do not turn until tomato is nicely browned. After turning sprinkle with grated cheese.

Fried Green Peppers—Cut open the peppers lengthwise, remove all seeds and white portions, cut in crosswise slices, cover with cold water, adding a little salt; let stand ten minutes. Wipe slices and let cook in two or more tablespoons of butter melted in frying pan. When soft and slightly browned spread over or around a broiled steak or dish of chops.

CANNING AND PRESERVING

English Chowchow — One-half bushel green tomatoes, one-half peck onions, one dozen green peppers, one head cauliflower, one head cabbage, two bunches celery. Chop all up fine, sprinkle with salt and let stand twenty-four hours; drain and add one ounce celery seed, one ounce mustard seed, one-half pound mixed whole spices. Mix thoroughly. Boil one gallon cider vinegar to which one pound brown sugar is added. Mix one-fourth pound mustard with a little cold vinegar to a smooth paste and stir into the boiling vinegar, then add pickles. Let simmer on slow fire one hour, stirring frequently. Put in glass jars and seal. Very appetizing and delicious.

Spanish Pickles—Wash one peck green tomatoes and thinly slice; peel four onions and thinly slice; sprinkle alternate layers with salt, using one cupful. Cover and let stand overnight. In the morning drain thoroughly, put in preserving kettle and add half ounce each of cloves, allspice berries and peppercorns; one-half cup brown mustard seed; one pound brown sugar, and two green peppers, wiped and finely chopped.

Pour over vinegar enough to cover all. Heat gradually to boiling point and let simmer 1½ hours. Store in stone jar.

Celery Pickles—Two quarts small cucumbers after cutting up, one pint small onions sliced thin; put all in salt water over night; in the morning drain dry, cover with vinegar, one cup brown sugar, one teaspoon of celery seed. Boil about twenty minutes and seal while hot.

Canned Peaches—Select medium ripe fruit. Put a layer in a large pan and pour over boiling water. Try them with a sharp knife and as soon as they will peel easily remove them to another pan (keeping them in too long will darken them). Now cut around them and remove seed. The skin will then peel easily. Now put three pints peaches and one cup sugar in saucepan. Cover with water and boil. It does not take long to cook them (try with a fork); remove from fire and seal in mason jars. It is always best to cook but one quart in each vessel. Put them in cans with a fork and they will be lovely.

When making peach and plum preserves put a handful of the seeds in bottom of kettle; will keep fruit from scorching.

Ginger Pears—Four pounds hard winter pears, four pounds sugar, one-fourth pound crystallized ginger, two lemons. Peel and slice pears very fine, add sugar and about a cup of water; stir, mix well and let come to a boil and boil slowly one hour. Boil two lemons twenty minutes and let cool; squeeze and cut up rind very thinly; add juice, rind and water in which lemons were boiled and boil slowly about an hour. When done, should be clear and amber colored. Great care must be taken to prevent burning and it must be stirred often.

Mint Jelly—Make a jelly of either green grapes or crabapples, using one pint juice to one pint sugar. Just before jelly is done, add a handful of mint, let boil until done, then strain and put in glasses. This jelly is elegant served with meats.

"So you are getting along without a maid?" said Margie Folsom as she followed Ethel Gordon out into the kitchen. "Do you like the freedom it gives you?"

"Freedom! Like it!" echoed Ethel, stopping to stare at Margie. "You are joking, of course."

"Indeed, I am not. I never had a maid until my first baby came and I would not have one now if the children were older. I really think it is a great care to watch a maid and keep her from wasting and destroying, even if she is honest."

"Which mine have not been," interrupted Ethel. "What I have suffered from maids would fill a book."

"That is just it. Anyone is fortunate who can get along without one," chimed in Margie.

"But, my dear, you are fortunate in knowing how to do things. I am at the mercy of servants. You will see before you get away from here. Ralph was worried when he learned you were coming for fear you would starve to death while here." Margie laughed. "Really, it is no laughing matter. We live out of tin cans and tinned food grows monotonous. Then I hate housework and I have not been able to get even a girl to wash dishes for more than two weeks at a time. She gets a job in the beet factory and her natural craving for variety makes her go to another place."

"Tell me why you hate housework." Margie took her by the shoulders and turned her around so that she could look into her eyes.

"I do not like anything that has to be done over and over, day after day, the same old thing. Then——"

"But it is not the same old thing. Every day has something different. There are new dishes to try to cook. I never found housework monotonous because I am always planning some new and delightful scheme to work out in the way of decorating or arranging the furniture. Of course, as everything is new you have not come to that delightful work yet."

Ethel looked as if she were listening to a foreign language. "Then it makes the hands so rough and spoils the fingernails." She held out her dainty hands to corroborate her statement.

"You are fishing for a compliment, I see," laughed Margie, turning the hand over and looking at it minutely. "Aside from a burn or two there is nothing the matter with your hands. You have taken good care of this. It is not necessary to have rough hands even if you do housework. You can take care of them and have them look all right. So that argument is answered."

"Well, I do not like housework. It does not interest me," persisted Ethel.

"What does interest you?" queried Margie.

"I had such a good time as a girl that I am spoiled for any dull old town with nothing but drudgery to occupy me. I like the parties and luncheons, picture shows and theatres. I like society and pretty clothes, and——"

"Own up that you want to spend your life being amused; that you are indolent, and unwilling to take your place in the world as a woman of responsibility," broke in Margie.

"Why should a girl renounce all pleasure as soon as she is married?" flamed Ethel. "I am young, and why should life be over for me at my age?"

"Life over! What I am criticising is that life has not begun for you. You have not commenced to taste the joy of real living. You have still the child's attitude of having everything done for you and looking for amusement as an end in itself."

"I do not understand your attitude. I have enjoyed life, and I want to eat my fill of the bread of pleasure." Ethel walked away, leaving Margie to look wistfully after her with a sad shake of the head.

SUDDEN DEATH OF STEPHEN O. STAATS

Suffers Heat Attack While Eating Dinner With Family—Had Active Career.

Stephen O. Staats, a native of this city, died suddenly yesterday noon at his home on West Second street. Mr. Staats was eating his luncheon when the fatal attack came and death ensued shortly after. He was seventy-six years old and was born here on East Front street. With the exception of several years spent in New York, Mr. Staats lived in this city all his life.

Mr. Staats will be remembered by local people for his long association with the firm of Staats & Shotwell, grocers, with a store at Lincoln place and Duer street, the borough, and his connection with James Dunn, of Park avenue, and the firm of J. A. Smith & Brother. After his retirement from the grocery business he became proprietor of the Washington Rock House and ran this for several years. He has led a retired life for many years. Mr. Staats was one of the first men to drive a horse-car in New York city before the days of the electric vehicles.

Beside his widow, a sister of the late Dr. M. B. Long, Mr. Staats is survived by one son, Stephen Monroe Staats, of East Front street, and two grandchildren. The funeral will be held from his late home tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and the service will be in charge of Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

PAUL SYMONS DIES IN HIS 73RD YEAR

Former Well Known Plainfielder Passes Away at Son's Home in New York.

Paul Symons, aged 73 years, who was a well known resident of Plainfield for forty years, residing on East Third street most of that time, died yesterday afternoon at the home of his son, William Symons, 451 East 140th street, New York, where he had been living since leaving this city some time ago. He had been ill for a number of weeks with hardening of the arteries.

Mr. Symons was born in Cornwall, England, coming to this country when eight years old. He first located with his parents at Chittenden, Vermont, then removed to Johnstown, Pa., and later to Belleville, near Newark. It was at the last named place that he became engineer for the DeWitt Wire Works, where he remained for some time. It was about forty years ago that he removed to Plainfield, when he took a position as engineer with the Edison Company, of Pearl street, New York city. He was in the employ of that company for many years, after which he resigned to accept a similar position with the Harry Miner estate, New York, being employed as chief engineer for all the theatre properties.

Mr. Symons retired from business about seven years ago and the greater part of that time he lived with his son in New York city. He was an active member of the First Methodist church, this city, and during his residence here was a faithful attendant at all of the services. He was also a member of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, and Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mr. Symons enjoyed the friendship of a large acquaintance and he was highly esteemed by all who knew him for his admirable qualities. There survives one son, William Symons, and two daughters, Mrs. Edward P. Shearer, of Elizabeth, and Mrs. W. B. Roll, of New York city.

The funeral service will be held at the late home in New York tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, and the interment will be in Evergreen cemetery, this city, Thursday afternoon at an hour to be announced. It is expected that representatives of Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and Plainfield Lodge, I. O. O. F. will be present at the committal services and take some part.

Rutgers College Preparing to Celebrate Its 150th Anniversary

Rutgers College, situated in New Brunswick, N. J., is one hundred and fifty years old. Founded as Queen's College, in 1766, it is the eighth oldest college in the United States. It survived the stormy days of the Revolution, continued to keep its doors open during the war of the Rebellion, and in the past ten years has increased its student enrollment by almost 100 per cent. Now, as the State College of New Jersey, it has an undergraduate body of almost five hundred students.

President W. H. S. Demarest and other members of the administrative board are planning a big celebration next October in commemoration of the completion of Rutgers College's one hundred and fiftieth year. The festivities will embrace three days, during which time it is planned to entertain several thousand guests in New Brunswick. One feature in connection with the celebration which should be of deep interest is the historical pageant which will be given on the College Farm, on the afternoon of Friday, October 13th. This pageant will portray the history of Rutgers from its founding to the present time and will be replete with incidents of historical interest. One of the scenes will portray the reading of the Declaration of Independence and the way in which the news was received at that time; another will depict New Brunswick at the time of the Civil War; and still another will show the social side of city life, represented by a ball at the famous old Buckbush Mansion.

Rutgers is especially fortunate in its store of traditions which has made possible the historical pageant. The college had its origin in the zeal for education and religion shown by the Dutch colonists in New York and New Jersey. The first charter was granted in the name of George the Third, by William Franklin, governor of the Province of New Jersey. No copy of this document is now known to be in existence, but under its provisions the Board of Trustees was created and meetings were called.

A second charter was granted in 1770, and under its provisions, almost unchanged, Rutgers has continued until the present day. It provides for a college to be called Queen's College, in honor of the royal consort, Charlotte, and to be erected for "the education of youth in the learned languages, and useful arts and sciences, and especially in divinity."

The college was located in New Brunswick, although some of the trustees are said to have favored Hackensack. During the Revolutionary War, its activities were at different times removed to neighboring village and the tutors in charge, Colonel Frederick Freilinguysen and Colonel John Taylor, were frequently called away for the civil and military services which are now a matter of history. In 1808, the present campus was acquired and the erection of the first college hall, still called Queen's Building, was begun.

In 1825, in recognition of the donations of Colonel Henry Rutgers, of New York, the name of the college was changed to Rutgers. In 1864 the college was designated by the Legislature of New Jersey as "The State College for the Benefit of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts."

Since that time, Rutgers has grown steadily. A new Neilson Campus was added to the old Queen's Campus, and additional buildings erected. A College Farm, consisting of over three hundred acres, has been purchased and is used by students of the agricultural course.

It is on this farm that the historical pageant will be held. A small lake will be utilized in all of the scenes and will permit the enactment of several incidents which would otherwise have been impossible. It is estimated that over five hundred persons will take part in the pageant, and that approximately five thousand spectators will be present. The historical nature of the production will make it of deep interest.

HARRY STITES' ACHIEVEMENT.

The first no-hit game twirled around these parts this year was unearthed Saturday. All of the credit goes to Harry Stites, who is the pitcher for one of the younger teams in this vicinity. Stites' stunt earns for him the right to a place in the "Hall of Fame." In addition to having perfect control, Harry was invincible with menzon. His ability to serve up "something different" netted him a strikeout list of fourteen. This is the first time that Stites has hurled a "no-hit" game, but it is not the first time that he has distinguished himself for his ability to strikeout the opposing batters. In the last twenty-five innings that he pitched Harry has fanned forty men. All of which goes to show that we have a "Waite Hoyt" in our midst.

TWO SIDES TO THE AFFAIR.

There are always two sides to a story. In an interesting communication received from Daniel Randolph and published in these columns, it is said that we presented only one side of the story of the Hope Chapel postponement. Perhaps, we did do that, but, if it were one, the act was not intentional and we believe that Mr. Randolph's article has summed up the "other side" of the story. There is always a right and a wrong way to do a thing. If one manager took the wrong course, that was his lookout.

• • • • • •

SOMETHING UNUSUAL IN HURLING.

Baseball games in this vicinity on Saturday were marked by exceptionally good pitching. With Harry Stites setting the standard by a "no hit—no run" game, the week-end record took a decidedly stellar aspect. Eddie Conshay exhibited old-time form and permitted only two hits, while Norman Harney, acting as moundsman for the Dunellen team, was kind enough to allow his opponents just three bingles. On Sunday Warry McLaughlin decided that four hits were enough for the St. Peter batters, while Jack Denny and Mickey McFadden felt inclined to hold the Garwood bombardment down to one "shot." The fact that so many high-class exhibitions of mound ability were given in this city over the week-end speaks well for the caliber of baseball that is being served to local fans.

PARKER FIELD BASEBALL.

George W. Wriston, who has charge of the work at Parker Field, is meeting with success this year. It is no easy task to band together almost one hundred youngsters into a league. It's easy enough to organize the circuit, but the task of keeping things going is one worthy of the sharpest steel. But, up to the present time, Mr. Wriston has had no drawbacks and the league is in a flourishing condition. The pennant race is unusually exciting and enthusiasm runs high. The value of such recreation as this is best found in the fact that the boys are kept off the streets where vice and disease are prevalent.

• • • • • •

READY TO GO THE LIMIT.

John McGraw is ready to go to any extremes in order to boost his club. He does not figure the Giants out of the pennant race yet, as an outfit that could win 17 contests in succession and who are only seven and one-half games out of the lead now, can make up lost ground with practically half the season to go. The latest rumor, coming from a fairly reliable source, is that McGraw wants Herzog and is willing to give up Christy Mathewson for the services of Buck. If such a deal was made it is doubtful if Herzog would report to the Giants before the end of the season. McGraw is anxious to get him at once, as, while Bill McKechnie is playing a great third base, McGraw would rather have Buck there. The deal whereby Harry "Slim" Sallee will become a Giant is about closed. The only ray of hope McGraw sees in his pitching staff now is Fred Anderson, former Federal, as Anderson has been consistently improving and is now right along the top of Muggsy's hurlers. There was considerable doubt as to his physical condition up until a couple of weeks ago, when he got into form, and his best showing was on Wednesday against the Reds. Sallee will be a boost to the Giants, no doubt, and if Herzog is landed for this season's club these Polo Grounders might prove a very dangerous proposition.

• • • • • •

DEPEND ON GLOVES.

Modern ball players are absolutely helpless without gloves, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. Players on the coaching lines duck the easiest kinds of grounders, rather than attack them with their bare hands. It is not like it was in the old days, before even catchers were provided with gloves. Even after the glove was invented, only the catcher used one for many years, and his mitt was far from being the protection of the huge affair of today, which a rifle-shot would scarcely penetrate. Silver Flint and many other old-timers would laugh themselves sick if they could see the way the players of today protect themselves before they go out to catch a ball. Of course, the use of big gloves is a good thing for the game. It prevents injuries, gives the players confidence, and makes the play faster, which is to be desired. The catcher and the first baseman are permitted to have gloves of any size, shape or weight. The catcher's mitt is a complete protection for the left hand and aids the backstop greatly in handling fast balls and spitters. The first baseman can wear a catcher's mitt if he wants to, but he does not do so, as a rule, as it is too heavy and clumsy for a man who has to move about his position in a lively manner. The first baseman's mitt is smaller and lighter than that of the catcher. The other players are limited to gloves weighing not over ten ounces and measuring not over 14 inches around the palm. No one who has to field many grounders or handle many throws wants a bigger glove than that, anyway.

FAREWELL TO "MATTY."

"The severest shock that New York baseball fans have had in many a day is the announcement of the passing of Christy Mathewson. For sixteen years the big boxman has been the idol of not only Manhattan enthusiasts, but of baseball fans the country over. His services to the Giants cannot be overestimated. The club used to be a one-man team, and Mathewson was that one man. On his shoulders Manager McGraw rested a great responsibility, and Matty carried it with dignity and honor. No baseball player has ever developed pitching so consummately as Mathewson. When he was in his heyday, he knew the weakness of every batsman in the game, and this knowledge of his opponents made him an invaluable asset to McGraw's club. Without Mathewson the Giants would never have enjoyed the prosperity and success which they have had during the last fifteen years. It was mainly through his efforts that the team won the National League flag five times and the world's series once. In 1905, it was Mathewson who single-handed, defeated the Athletics."—New York Times.

The above is Frank Gilhooley in action. Frank has just met with an accident, having broken his leg in a recent contest. "Rube" Oldring may get "Gil's" job for the remainder of the season.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

One has to "hand it to" Willie Coogan. Willie is the energetic manager, captain and, in this case, publicity agent of the National R. C. In addition to being the proud possessor of all these titles, William is a constar reader of this department. While carefully perusing these columns on Saturday Willie noticed our "appeal" for news. In answer to this request, he has submitted a little data regarding players on his team. For all of which we are thankful.

Charles Madden is a wonderful, little catcher. Charles is still a midget, but his publicity agent assures us that while his "wing is still small, it is growing." It is very evident that Charlie is destined to be anoher Sam Agnew.

"John C. O'Brien is the best little first basemen on the Plainfield A. C." writes one of his admirers. We are still wondering how many first basemen there are on the P. A. C.

Joe Whalen comes in for a note. Joe insists that he has never been mentioned in these columns and is anxious to make his debut. He says that he is a "baseman," but does not state which position he favors.

"Ipp" Witteman is a "one hit" pitcher. He is now the regular hurler for the P. A. C. aind, at times, does duty for the Nationals. We should say that he was in great demand.

Wonder who that fellow "Wells" is? We see by the papers that he performed for Dunellen in New Brunswick the other day.

Anthony Deady has been doing good work, lately. "Goo," as his pals call him, is a pitcher and knows just what to pitchand when to do it.

If the Poling clan continues to win, the manager will have to book only City League attractions. Every junior team in this city has been encountered and defeated by these Pans. If there is any young man, who believes that he can organize a junior team that can wrest the title of "Plainfield Junior Champions" from the grasp of these youthful ballists, now is the chance. Manager Cyril Poling eagerly awaits a call from any lad who is so inclined.

It must be admitted that Joe Morley pitched a fairly good game against Netherwood Saturday. Joe is by no means a star pitcher and does not pretend to be one. His position with the Farmers was that of catcher. When Alec Campbell gave up the management of the club, Morley, who was at that time captain, assumed conrol. He remained as catcher, however, until Eddie Conshay left the team. Then it was that he stepped on the mound. He has been getting "warm receptions" of late, but his stand against Netherwood was not to be laughed at.

That young man, "Jake" Deinzer, persists in doing things to Plainfield batters. He has always been a puzzle hitters from this vicinity. The High School boys could never hit his slants and the box score of Sunday's contest seems to indicate that the Dunellen swatters found him just as puzzling.

We see by the papers, that the Tabs have "farmed out" three or four of their players. They have sent Art Kyle and Jimmy McCarty to the Plainfield A. C., while "Kid" Brennan has been signed up by the Pans. If our readers believe this, we'll tell them some more.

The Giants are climbing. So are the Farmers. The "Seeds" are climbing into the league.

"Chick" Evans is now happy, having annexed the amateur golf championship title.

SOUTHERNERS MAUL HIGHLAND FLINGER

Local Team Booked in Abscence of Royal Giants, Outclassed by Villagers.

Owing to the fact that Pete Simmons, of the Royal Giants, cancelled the game with the South Plainfield team for Sunday, Manager Hamilton had to book the Highlanders of this city.

The Highlanders were no match for the suburban nine, as in the first inning the village sluggers piled up fourteen runs. The spectators then began to leave, so many of the players started to bat left handed. The "Southern" infield put up a great game, and Peterson was the only man guilty of an error. "Kale" Velard pitched a steady game, yielding six hits and fanning eleven batsmen. Billy Ryan made the first home run on the field this season by driving the ball into deep centre. Gleason, who pitched several ga s es in the City League last year, was on hand for the Highlanders and was touched for fourteen hits.

The score:

M'CLELLAN STAATS WEDS MISS MORRIS

First Nuptials Celebrated in the Netherwood Reformed Church.

The marriage of Miss Maude Myrtle Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Morris, of 1250 George street, to McClellan Staats, of Plainfield, was celebrated Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Netherwood Reformed church. This was the first wedding in the new edifice. The artistic interior of the church, decorated for the occasion in green and gold, added materially to the beauty of this, one of the prettiest of the season's weddings.

The bride wore a wedding gown of old lace, which had been her mother's, with a veil en traine. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids were gowned in painted chiffon over white. Miss Ethel Adams, the maid of honor, wore yellow, and carried a bouquet of blue corn flowers. The bridesmaids, Miss Isabel Morris and Miss Elizabeth Morris, sisters of the bride, wore blue and pink. Mrs. William H. Morris, the bride's mother, wore blue voile. The groom was attended by Horace N. Adams, the best man. The ushers were George L. Morrison, of Plainfield, and Walter Morris, the bride's brother. Miss Myrtle Townley, of Netherwood avenue, furnished the music, playing the Lohengrin wedding march as the bridal party entered the church.

The ushers led the way, followed by the bridesmaids, then the maid of honor, and last of all the bride with her father, who gave her away. They were met at the altar by the groom and best man. The Rev. Edward S. Ralston, pastor of the church, officiated.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, which was attended by relatives and friends, including a number from Brooklyn, Dunellen and other places. The bride and groom are spending two weeks at Atlantic City. On their return they will make their home in the Netherwood section of Plainfield.

PART OF DENVILLE WOOD TAKEN BY GERMAN FORCES IN COUNTER ATTACK BY DESPERATE FIGHTING

IMPORTANT POINT LIES ON OUTSKIRTS OF LONGUEVAL BETWEEN ANCRE AND SOMME RIVERS AND IS JUNCTION OF HIGHWAYS.

GERMAN LOSSES AT SOMME REACH 150,000

Last Night's Battle a Hand to Hand Affair and Big Bodies of Men Were Mowed Down—Victory for British Troops Reported in East Africa—New Battle Begins Along Somme Front—French Report Gains in Fighting at Verdun.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press)

London, July 19.—The German troops have recaptured a part of Delville Wood and have also re-established themselves in the outskirts of Longueval. It was admitted in an official report of the British War Office issued at noon today. The German successes were obtained as a result of violent assaults with fresh troops. The fighting last night followed a terrific bombardment. Attack followed attack in waves of men. Longueval lies between the Ancre and Somme Rivers and is a junction point of four important highways. It is on the Bapaumebray of Highway and lies about six miles southwest of Bapaume. Delville Wood is just east of Longueval.

Reports from Paris say that French troops made further progress against the German line northeast of Verdun last night. The German assault was committed with remarkable violence and indications are that the battle continued throughout the night. The battle was preceded by a storm of gas bombs and lachrymose shells. The German loss on the Somme front is estimated at fully 150,000.

The Germans are attacking desperately in the hope of driving the French line back, it being expected that the latter will strike another blow at Peronne soon. The Germans gained some ground in Biaches, a mile from Peronne, but according to French despatches they have been forced out again. The official bulletin of the Germans contains no news of the attacks but reports that French and British charges on both sides of the Somme were repulsed yesterday.

On the British left wing, the methodical advances made on both sides of the Bapaum-Albert highway have menaced the German hold on the village of Pozieres, an important highway junction, and the local objective of the British attack. By pushing their lines forward on both sides of the highway, the British have thrown the town itself in a deep pocket while artillery is steadily reducing the German works to ruins. As the same time British gunners have laid a steady fire across the Pozieres-Thiepval road, one of the two highways over which the Germans in the Thiepval salient draw their supplies, rendering that line useless.

Another victory for Brtish troops in German East Africa was announced by the War Office today in the following statement: "In the East Africa the enemy have been driven down the Pangani River. Wuanza has been occupied."

Paris, July 19.—An attack last night with hand grenades gained ground for the French at Chapelle, St. Fine, on the Verdun front, the French War Office announced today. There was a severe artillery duel on the Verdun front, the bombardment being particularly severe in the region of Fleury. Two surprise raids by the Germans against the Allies' trenches were repulsed. One of the raids was made in the district of Paschendaal in Belgium and the other north of River Aisne.

Rome, July 19.—A despatch of the Messageros from Salonica says that Allied airmen in a bombarding raid set fire to thousands of acres of the Bulgarian harvest.

BAUER BELIEVES HE WILL GET NOMINATION

G. O. P. Candidate for County Clerkship Calls on Friends Here.

Edward Bauer, of Elizabeth, who is conducting an aggressive campaign in the interest of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for county clerk, was in town today and in company with former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman called on a number of friends, to whom he presented briefly his qualifications for the office he seeks. Mr. Bauer feel sanguine over the result, stating that so many people throughout the county have promised him their support that he is not only hopeful of securing the nomination, but of being elected in November.

Mr. Bauer has had considerable experience in clerical work, during his employment in the county registrar's office for sevral years and he promises to give the county efficient service if chosen clerk. Among others who seek this office is Col. William B. Martin, the former captain of Co. K, Second Regiment, this city, and he is also leaving no stone unturned to win support to his candidacy.

Abram P. Morris, the present incumbent, who succeeded the late James C. Calvert, will be a candidate for the nomination on the Democratic ticket, and his friends are predicting success for him.

AUTO AND MOTORCYCLE COLLIDE ON PARK AVENUE

A slight accident occurred at Randolph road and Park avenue at 10:30 this morning, when an automobile occupied by two women, who gave their names as Mrs. Blake, of West Seventh street, this city, and Mrs. Robert Hink, of Bridgeport, Conn., and a motorcycle driven by John Bender, an employee of the U. S. Shoe Repairing Company, came together. The parties reached a settlement between themselves and no arrests were made.

Mrs. Blake, it was said, was driving the car at the time and tried to pass Randolph road on Park avenue the same time Bender was trying to turn into Park avenue. Bender was thrown from his machine but was not badly hurt.

UNIDENTIFIED YOUTH INJURED AT OAK TREE

Hurt Riding Freight on Lehigh Valley, is in Muhlenburg Hospital.

Still unconscious from the injuries he received, an unidentified man, apparently a Norwegian, is lying in Muhlenberg Hospital with slight chances for recovery. A youth of about eighteen years was found alongside the tracks of the Lehigh Valley at Oak Tree early this morning in an unconscious condition and taken to the hospital, where it was found that he had suffered a severe concussion of the brain and lacerations of the scalp.

The boy was seen by several persons in company with a companion riding on a freight, but after he had fallen the latter made his getaway and the police are now on the lookout for him. No one seems to know the injured man and when searched there were no papers that would give a clue as to his identity. All efforts at the hospital to restore him to consciousness have been futile.

WRIT DENIED BY JUSTICE MINTURN

Counsel Not Permitted to Review Proceedings in Madison Ave. Widening.

APPEAL TO BE TAKEN

Court Holds That City's Action Was Regular and Did Not Confer Upon Property Owners Vested Rights to Block Improvement.

The application of G. W. V. Moy, representing former Councilman Fred Endress, on a rule to show cause why he should not be permitted to review all the proceedings in the proposed widening by the city of Madison avenue from West Front street to the railroad bridge, has been denied by Justice Minturn before whom argument was heard recently at Elizabeth, the opinion to that effect being received today by Mr. Moy, as well as Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, who represented the city in the action. Mr. Moy, when interviewed today, said that he would take the matter on a writ of error and this will tend to further hold up the improvement.

Mr. Moy in his argument before Justice Minturn for permission to review the proceedings, claimed that the proceedings on the part of the city were irregular, and that the fact that Mr. Endress was a member of the City Council when the ordinary was passed made the action void. There were other technical points raised by Mr. Moy in his action, but Justice Minturn has decided that the proceedings in the matter were regular. There has been considerable delay ever since steps were taken to widen Madison avenue, the Dreier estate objecting to the improvement on the ground that the benefits allowed by the commissioners were not commensurate with the damages.

Harry Dreier, who for many years occupied the store at the corner of West Front street and Madison avenue, which property will be affected by the widening, has since removed to another store on West Front street, and the dispute between the city and the estate has been adjusted. There were some other minor objections to the improvement, but the action of Mr. Endress served to hold the matter up for a long period.

"In the above case I am satisfied that the writ of certiorari should not issue. The proceedings under the ordinance of 1893 were not final and conclusive upon the council so as to confer upon abutting owners any vested right for its provisions, which could serve as a bar to future municipal action upon similar lines. O'Neill vs. Freeholders, 12 Vr. 172.

"The charter provision (sect. 29) conferred upon the Council the power to begin, de novo, should the public interest require it.

"The remaining objections urged by the prosecutor are in effect, res adjudicata by this court in the former case Endress vs. Plainfield, 95 Atl. 755. Superadded to that is the fact that the application for this writ is barred by laches of the Prosecutor C. S. p. 407. sect. 15. McKevitt vs. Hoboken, 16 Vr. 492.

"The constitutional question urged by the prosecutor in his brief comes too late to appeal to the court as the sole basis for the granting of a discretionary writ; since the prosecutor in the former case who is one of the prosecutors here was presented with an opportunity to urge it and failed to avail himself of it. The writ will be denied."

Suffering from poisoning caused by eating canned vegetable soup, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hendry and their nephew, David Wardrop, all residing at 324 West Fourth street, have been seriously ill for the past four days. Dr. Peter B. Crerar, the attending physician, assigns the ailment solely to the soup, which all three ate, and while he holds out hope for the recovery of all the victims, he stated this morning that they have been very ill.

The two men are now well on the road to recovery but Mrs. Henry is still very sick, and friends said this morning that fear waas entertained lest she had contracted diphtheria. It is not known definitely, however, whether or not she is suffering from this disease.

Mr. Henry is a machinist employed in Pond's shop and Mr. Wardrop is a patternmaker working for the same concern. The former and his wife are middle-aged and the nephew is about 21. All are well known residents of the West End and are members of Hope chapel.

Instances of poisoning from canned fish and meat have been reported here before, but this is believed to be the first in which soup has been assigned as the cause.

CO-OPERATION OF PUBLIC IS URGED

Mayor Calkins Requests Strict Observance of Board of Health Regulations.

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Physicians of the City Heartily Endorse Policy of Health Authorities —Parents Advised to Exercise Care With Children.

Mayor Leighton Calkins in reviewing today what is being done here to safeguard the health of the public against disease and especially infantile paralysis, makes an appeal to the public to strictly observe the regulations of the Board of Health. In an interview with a reporter for the Plainfield Daily Press, Mr. Calkins said:

"While there is absolutely no reason for people to become alarmed merely because a single case of infantile paralysis has appeared in our city, nevertheless the prevalence of the disease in New York and other nearby places does make it important for all of us to observe the greatest possible degree of reasonable caution. To this end, everybody in Plainfield should make an effort to follow very implicitly the regulations and also the suggestions and recommendations of our local Board of Health which has the situation well in hand and is rendering especially effective service at this time. On the part of the public we have a right to expect calmness, common sense, and a very thorough compliance with whatever directions the Board of Health deems it necessary from time to time to issue. If the public will co-operate we shall have no reason to expect any trouble in our city.

"In particular, the residents of Plainfield are very earnestly requested to comply with the emergency order of the Board of Health and report to the Board every day between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. the arrival at their hotels or homes of all persons from out of town. This applies to adults as well as children. The best way to make such reports is by telephoning the Board of Health. If visitors arrive later than 5 p. m. the report may be made the next morning.

"If to some it may seem rather a pity that open air schools, evening schools, children's library department, and other recreation centers are temporarily kept closed, it should be borne in mind that the principle involved upon which the medical profession is substantially unanimous, is that the spread of the disease is best prevented by preventing young children, even in good health, from congregating.

"Therefore, even though it may be difficult for some parents to do so, they are urged to keep their children at home or near by; especially to keep them away from crowded streets and from the shopping districts and public places.

"If parents only realized it, they are themselves in a better position to be of real service in safeguarding the public health in this matter than the Board of Health itself and the physicians. If a young child shows the slightest indications of illness, however slight, the parent is the first to know it. A doctor should be sent for. The Board of Health also stands ready to send a physician or a nurse if called upon to do so.

"Cleanliness also is important, not only personal cleanliness, but in the matter of refuse and garbage. Householders should not wait for complaints to be filed against them by inspectors. They should co-operate by voluntarily making a thorough clean up of their premises.

"Finally, I should like to remind people that neither the Board of Health nor other city officials will take any notice of anonymous complaints regarding any violations of local ordinances or of the sanitary code. But the Board of Health has an invariable rule to regard all complaints as entirely confidential except where the parties complaining are willing to carry their cases into court. Every citizen owes a duty at the present time to assist the Board of Health in its clean-up work and in maintaining public safeguards to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis in Plainfield.

"People who call matters to the attention of the Board of Health in writing should give their names and addresses, but may add, if they desire, that the information is confidential. Everything that the Board of Health is doing at this time has my entire approval and I have been kept fully informed as to the Board's activities.

"At a meeting of the physicians of Plainfield with the Board of Health on Monday night a vote of confidence was unanimously adopted which indicates that the Board has also the backing and approval of the medical profession in its present activities. I am sure that the backing and co-operation of the public may also be counted upon."

NO BOOKS FOR CHILDREN.

Until further notice no books will be circulated from the Juvenile department of the Public Library and no children under 16 years of age will be allowed to congregate in the building. Also the three sub-stations and the summer station at the Irving School are to be closed.

PLAINFIELD BOYS WHO OFFERED SERVICES TO ESSEX TROOP NOW BACK WITH WATCHUNG CAVALRY

RETURN ENTHUSIASTICALLY HAILED BY FORMER COMRADES—TRANSFER PREDICTED SOON AFTER TROOP D MOVED FROM SEA GIRT.

GUARDS DESCRIBE SCENE AT DOUGLAS CAMP

Much Rain Has Made the Going Hard—Plainfielders Satisfied With Their Lot and all Are Hopeful of Surviving the Federal Medical Tests—Impressive Funeral Service for Private Whelan Described by Daily Press Correspondent.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press).

Troop D Headquarters, Douglas, Arizona, July 19—Troopers John T. Caulfield, John Foster Sickler and John Murray, three of the nine Plainfield boys transferred to the Essex Troop prior to leaving Sea Girt, have been returned to Troop D. This trio was sought for as soon as the Plainfielders arrived here and much rejoicing was evident on all sides when the announcement of their return was made. Captain Kyle, of the Essex Troop, expressed his regret at having to part with the Plainfielders and had nothing but words of praise to say in their behalf. Caulfield had previously been appointed "official carpenter" for the Newarkers and was doing considerable work about the camp when he was given orders to report to Captain Albert Borden.

Troop D has gained the reputation of being the best fed outfit in Douglas and the Plainfielders who were with the Newark troop declare that their first square meal was enjoyed after rejoining their old comrades. The troopers are being kept pretty busy, the work of breaking in new horses requiring a lot of time. For this reason many of them have not had an opportunity to write home, but no concern need be entertained as Plainfielders will be kept informed of every move made down here.

(Special Letter to the Press.)

Douglas, Ariz., July 13.—The Watchung Troop is now established in camp here upon a plain over which are scattered mesquite bushes. The tents, pitched Monday in a torrential rain, which did not cease till Wednesday morning, stand as they did at Sea Girt, between those of Battery A and Troop B.

The camp is but half a mile from Douglas, a vast circle of rocky mountains rings both around—a circle that constantly varies in beautiful hues: at noon deep purple, at "retreat" lavender, and pink like coral.

The heat just now is intense, but a relief after the extraordinary phenomenon hereabouts, of a two-days' rain storm. Then the troopers, bringing up from the freight cars logs of fire wood, bales of alfalfa, and heavy equipment, plunged through mud half way to their knees at times, as they loaded and unloaded wagons. In this storm accompanied by wind they pitched their tents. All that saved them from a soaking night were the cots issued to them for the first time. These were a delight, supplemented by an air pillow—every trooper's wife or sweetheart should send him one—no bed is as comfortable.

The horses, experts say, are too far exhausted still for riding. They are not too tired to bite and kick. To clean them you must be wary. And when they were sorted out of the big corral several men had close shaves. Fred Stevenson was grazed more than once; Fred Goddard was pushed into a corner off the fence, and scrambled out just in time. But thanks to the excellent management of Sergeants Ralston and Alberts and Lieutenant Runkle, who knows all the tricks a horse can master, the transfer from the corral to picket line was safely

STABBING AFFAIR CAUSES TWO ARRESTS

Thomas S. Harvey and Martin Cass Are Held for Hearing Tomorrow Morning.

Charged with being disorderly and fighting at Madison avenue and West Front street at 9 o'clock last night, Thomas S. Harvey, of 510 Madison avenue, and Martin Cass, of 15 Somerset street, were released this morning by City Judge William G. De Meza under $100 and $300 bail, respectively, to appear in court tomorrow morning for trial.

The fight started after a friendly argument when Cass, it is said, drew a penknife from his pocket and slashed wildly at Harvey, cutting him in the leg and also cutting Myles Condon, one of the bystanders. Cass, who is only 18, was the first one to lose his temper and Harvey will put up the plea of self-defence.

Patrolman Muir and Special Officers Duffy and Russ broke up the fight after it threatened to become a general one and took Cass to headquarters, while Harvey was brought in this morning.

DEATH COMES TO DUNELLEN RESIDENT

Mrs. Mary McMahon Dies in Her Sixty-sixth Year—Funeral Friday.

Mrs. Mary McMahon, of Railroad avenue, Dunellen, died yesterday in Trenton, following a lingering illness. She was sixty years old and was a native of Ireland. She came to this country when a young girl seventeen years of age, and had resided in Dunellen the greater part of her life.

Six children survive her. These are Mrs. Nellie Stillwell, of Morristown; William, Anna, Mamie, James and John McMahon, all of Dunellen. The funeral will be held from her late home Friday morning at 8:30 and in St. John's church at 9 a. m., where a high requiem mass will be offered. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

BOARD OF HEALTH ISSUES WARNING TO MERCHANTS

The Board of Health, through the secretary, Wilson Frederick, has issued a warning to the merchants of the borough who handle perishable goods, that on account of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in Greater New York and some New Jersey towns, they must take extreme precautions, and that foodstuffs, fruits, vegetables, confections, etc., must not be exposed to contamination of any kind. Householders are also advised to take every care in the use of foodstuffs.

George Vliet, of Jersey City, has been spending a portion of his vacation in the borough visiting his brother, Charles Vliet.

John and Miss Matilda Merschrod are entertaining friends from Jersey City.

Mrs. Charles Bishop, of North avenue, has been entertainiag Miss Frances Whiting, of Brooklyn.

Mrs. A. E. Smith has recovered from an attack of lumbago.

Miss Margarey Vliet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Vliet, of Lincoln avenue, is quite ill at her home with a fever.

Mrs. J. B. Dick, of New York city, who has been visiting in the borough for the past week, has returned home. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Lottie Barton, who will return here in several days.

BOROUGH COUNCIL PAYS LARGE NUMBER OF BILLS

The following borough bills have been ordered paid: Lindabury, Depew & Falks, $254.06, collecting sewer; Harkins, Delafield & Longfellow, $116.31, collecting sewer; New Jersey Central Railroad, $1,109.10, collecting sewer; U. S. Mortgage & Trust Company, $86, collecting sewer; New York Telephone Company, $3.05, finance; William P. Deering, $18.25, finance; B. M. Gannon, $4.20, finance; Nancy Clock Company, $2.08, law and ordinance; E. C. Kepler, $4, law and ordinance; Weimer J. Snyder, $3, law and ordinance; C. Sumner Smith, $18.76, streets; P. Pfeister, $18.75, streets; G. S. Smith, $25.75; Smalley Brothers, $2.81, collecting sewerage.

SCHOOL BOARD AWARDS TRANSPORTATION CONTRACT

Bids for the various transportation routes were opened at the monthly meeting of the Township Board of Education held last evening, the routes being awarded as follows:

Route No. 1, Sidney Williams, at a bid of $60; No. 2, Ziba Osum, $70; No. 3, M. Larson, $65; No. 4, William Thompson, $65.

Action on route No. 5 was held over until the next meeting. Considerable time was taken up in mapping out minor repairs and alterations, etc., for the various schools, and after the payment of bills the meeting adjourned.

MISS ETHEL LINZER GIVES DELIGHTFUL PORCH PARTY

The following were the guests of Miss Ethel Linzer at a porch party Saturday evening: Misses Maude and Dora Whitford, Lydia Haight, Elizabeth Kellogg, Lillian Johnson, Dorothy Brower and Sarah Watson, and Messrs. DeWitt Swackhamer, Harold Seal, Kenter Post, Earl Latham, Paul Carpenter, George Nelson and Raymond Tinsman. The porch was attractively decorated for the occasion with the national colors. The evening's program of entertainment included games, dancing and music.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Holman, who have been visiting relatives at Raritan for the past few weeks, have returned home.

George W. Churchill, of Washington avenue, has been quite ill since Monday.

The members of the Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian church are requested to attend the meeting at the Plainfield Rescue Mission tomorrow night.

Scotch Plains, Fanwood

CONTRACT FOR CULVERTS.

At the last meeting of the Board of Freeholders they authorized the building of two culverts in badly needed places, one on LaGrande avenue and the other on Farley avenue. Amalia Villa, of Westfield, received the contract for the two jobs, the first to cost $273 and the other $349.

EXCURSION WAS POSTPONED.

Yesterday was the date scheduled for the thirty-ninth annual "Big 8" Sunday school excursion from this place and Westfield, but the fear of an epidemic of infantile paralysis caused it to be called off and it is improbable that it will be held at all this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Jespersen, of Martine avenue, are spending several days at Asbury Park.

PLANT IS COMPLETED.

After several months' work the plant of the Pure Oil Company, on South avenue, has been completed and is now being enclosed by a large fence.

INSTALLING A DRAIN.

As the first move in remedying the sewage overflow conditions in the borough the Board of Health has put men to work on Russell avenue installing a drain which it is expected will greatly help matters. As soon as the board can relax its work on preventing the infantile paralysis from getting into Fanwood it is going to go at the sewer question in earnest and a lively time will probably result.

CHANGES ARE EXPECTED

Although the supervising principal of local schools, S. Dana Townsend, is not yet ready to announce the teaching corps of the schools for next year yet, it is known that there will be several changes. Mrs. Dodd, teacher of 3B class, has resigned and one or two others will not return.

MARTY O'LOUGHLIN IN GREAT SHOWING

Local Professional Finishes in Fifth Place After First Day of Play

Each with a score of 136 strokes for the thirty-six holes, Patrick J. Doyle, of South Shore Field, Bayshore, L. I., and James M. Barnes, of Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, near Philadelphia, led the field yesterday in the first half of the open tournament held under the auspices of the New York Newspaper Golf Club on the Van Cortlandt Park public links.

In third place was "Bob" Macdonald, of Buffalo, at 138, and two strokes behind him again was Walter C. Hagen, of Rochester, N. Y., who won the Metropolitan open championship last week at Garden City. Four others finished at 141 and six more at 142, so that with fourteen players within six strokes of the leader the tourney will be resumed this morning in a very open position.

Barnes has been before the public now since he came on from the Pacific coast and finished well up in the National open championship in 1913, when Francis Ouimet defeated Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the English professionals.

Marty O'Loughlin gave a wonderful exhibition of his prowess, finishing fifth in the list. Gil Nicholls has been heralded as a "star," but the local professional had little trouble equalling his score for the day. The tourney will be continued today, Wilfred Reid being paired up with Marty. Lou Martucci, the one-armed golfer, did well, although he did not finish among the first ten. Still, he is far from out of the running and may spring a surprise.

The cards turned in by the various contestants after yesterday's play show that the contest was unusually close and exciting.

THE FORUM

Editor of the Plainfield Daily Press:—I beg to inform you that residents of Plainfield are not allowed in Raritan, N. J. On my way last evening to Raritan when the trolley arrived at the line between Somerville and Raritan, an officer came in the car and asked me where I was from. I told him that I was from Plainfield. He said "No one from Plainfield would be allowed to go to Raritan, that Raritan was quarantined against residents from Plainfield. I was also infomed at Raritan that they were talking of making a borough of Raritan. They said to me, "You are the fire extinguisher man." I told them that I was eighty-one years of age and had no infantile paralysis.

NEW COMMISSION FOR F. W. GODDARD

Plainfield Trooper Appointed Brigade-Sergeant Major at Douglas.

Douglas, Ariz., July 19.—Frederick W. Goddard, of Plainfield, has been appointed brigade sergeant-major. This is the first promotion for a Troop D man announced since we arrived at Douglas.

Six thousand New Jersey National Guardsmen pulled a bankrupt town out of the hole and established prosperity in place of despair. According to prominent merchants in Douglas, nearly every business house was ready to be shut up when the Jerseymen began to arrive. Business was at a standstill. The war scare had caused a cessation of work in the leading industries here, with the exception of the copper smelters.

This was the state of affairs when the New Jersey boys detrained here. With their coming the depleted coffers began again to swell and as the men got more leave of absence from camp things began to get back to normal.

Now that they have come and are spending freely the soldiers are objecting to the extremely high prices. There is some talk of establishing a big exchange, where all of the men can get what they want at a fair price. The only handicap to such a scheme is the uncertainty as to the length of their stay here. Here are some of the prices:

Lead pencils, two for a quarter; beer, 50 cents a bottle; haircut 50 cents; shave, 25 cents.

While the details of the government order facilitating the return of married members of the National Guard are not known here, and the absence of any knowledge has given rise to an eager curiosity, the effect of making the order public in the East already has made itself unmistakably evident here. Hundreds of letters, some even frantic in their tone, have been received by officers from the wives of the guardsmen, begging that their husbands be allowed to return home.

In the absence of definite official information as to the wording of the order, both officers and men have been made extremely unhappy by those letters, patricularly as they are in the dark as to what relief, if any, they can give.

There is much conjecture as to what the new army statement really means and this is increased by the fact that physical examinations in the Fifth regiment, put off several times, begins today. It is believed here that the guard at this point will be thinned down finally to vigorous and, when possible, unmarried men. Furthermore, it is thought that many guardsmen will be offered commissions in the regular service under the reorganization plan of the regular army. We have a total of about 11,000 guard, regular men and officers, whereas 60,000 would be needed were an adequate force called out to meet a big power.

The expected move, it is considered here, would reduce the possibility of a great pension burden. The men here, however, are expecting, for the most part, to serve unless physically disqualified, despite pressure from home. A sentiment, which is generally shared among the guardsmen, was expressed by one married man, whose financial condition is a comfortable one, when he said the possibility of married men getting out under some urging might result in some other husband, or son being forced to do his work, after he had been partially trained at the nation's expense.

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

My motor has been missing on No. 2 cylinder for some time. The spark plug would become soaked with oil, so I put in three genuine nonleakable piston rings. This kept the plug clean, but still it had the same miss. We closely examined the intake manifold for leaks, but found none. We also put in new valves and valve cages and used several different kinds of standard spark plugs. There is a good spark to and through the plugs. We also changed the magneto one-half round, then changed the wires comparatively, and this did no good. The motor will hit on all four cylinders at about twenty miles per hour. The motor has excellent compression. Can you tell me some way to remedy the trouble?

Possibly the piston ring joints are all in line, so that gas can leak past them. Or the valves might not have enough clearance, resulting in a slight holding open when they should be entirely closed. It might be that the ignition is not timed correctly. Possibly it is not advanced enough. These are merely suggestions, for it would be impossible to say definitely where to look for the trouble without knowing more specifically what the symptoms are.

What is the objection to closing the exhaust at top dead center and opening the exhaust about 30 degrees before bottom dead center?

As the desire is to scavenge the cylinders as thoroughly as possible the exhaust should be open for as wide a range as is practicable, and it is better to hold it for a few degrees after top center.

Thirty degrees is all right for some engines, but the majority open the exhaust between 40 and 50 degrees before lower center. That is because the exhaust must open somewhat before the piston reaches the end of the combustion stroke, and the higher the speed of the engine the more desirable an early opening becomes.

If extra air is admitted into the intake is the revolutions per minute speed of a motor increased? If so, to what extent? For example, by the use of a pet cock in the intake?

There is no advantage in admitting extra air, providing the carbureter functions as it should. In other words, the carbureter is supposed to vary the amount of air in proportion to the gasoline to meet the increase of speed. Nearly all carbureters have auxiliary air valves of some kind that admit more air as the engine runs faster.

How much power will be developed in a 4 by 5 four cylinder motor by using aluminum rods and pistons instead of the iron ones usually supplied? And about how much difference in weight?

It may be expected that from 2 to 15 per cent more power may be obtained by using aluminum alloy connecting rods and pistons instead of the iron ones. This is due mostly to the fact that it will permit the engine to be running at somewhat higher speed without undue vibration. How much increase in power may be obtained and how much increase in speed depends upon the design of the motor, particularly the size of the valves and manifold. Aluminum rods and pistons will weigh from 25 to 50 per cent of the iron ones.

How may the gear ratio of a car of given size be found?

In order to determine the gear ratio you would have to know the speed of the engine at any particular speed of the car and also the outside diameter of the tires. For instance, suppose you knew that when the car is traveling at twenty-five miles an hour the engine is running at a speed of 875 revolutions per minute. If the car had thirty-six inch tires you could get the gear ratio. The procedure would be as follows: Reduce the twenty-five miles per hour to feet per minute, which is 2,200 feet per minute. Now, the thirty-six inch tires are three feet in diameter, and we know that for each revolution of the tire a distance equal to the circumference of the tire is covered, or 9.42 feet. Dividing the speed of 2,200 feet per minute by the number of feet per revolution (9.42) we get 234 revolutions per minute of the rear wheels when the car is traveling at twenty-five miles per hour. Now, the engine is turning at 875 revolutions per minute at the same time; hence dividing 234 into 875 we get 3.74 as the rear axle gear ratio.

The rear tires on my car do not give the satisfaction they should. Is this because they are not large enough?

If you have the right sized tires for the weight of your car and if you keep them properly inflated, then you should have no trouble. It is a fact, however, that fully 50 per cent of the cars used are undertired. This is false economy on the part of the car owner. Not knowing the weight of your car, it is impossible to recommend the tires you should use. Perhaps you do not keep them properly inflated. They may appear to be blown up hard, but the use of a tire pressure gauge will tell accurately. The tire gauge should not register less than seventy pounds for the average five passenger car. On heavier cars the pressure should not be less than ninety pounds. Hard tires are not as comfortable, but your tire bill will be less.

The enamel is coming off the sight feed of my car. Can this do any harm to the bearing by the oil going direct from the sight feed to the timing gears?

It will do the bearings no good to allow this foreign matter to be carried to them, if that is what you mean is happening. You had better clean out the sight feed and prevent its circulating through the system, as it might also clog the oil piping. It will not do the sight feed any harm to lose its enamel, but it harms the lubricant.

What causes the gears in the transmission of my 1910 car to be unusually noisy when driving with the intermediate speed? I have examined the transmission and find the gears all in good shape, with no unusual play in any of the bearings. I have been using a medium grade of grease in the gear box. Would it be better to use a heavy grade of castor oil?

It is natural for you to have some noise on intermediate, but the only cause to which we can point without further information is wear in the gears. Possibly the shafting itself is worn or the shaft bearings need adjustment or replacement. Castor oil would not help any. Try some heavy transmission oil—any of the well known brands on the market. The trouble with grease is that it gets thrown off the gears easily.

Is it not possible to get a perfectly round bearing when the lower half of the bearing has to be filed off, especially in case of a badly worn bearing? Should a reamer be used to get a perfect bearing, or can same be secured by means of a scraper?

It is possible to get a round bearing if you scrape it in and fit it properly.

Please explain the operation of a two cycle engine—how the charge is drawn in, compressed and fired. Also explain the working of the valves or portholes, their general location and position during the different strokes of the piston.

In a two cycle engine there is an explosion in each cylinder every revolution of the crank shaft. In usual practice the charge is drawn through cored ports into the compression chamber, which usually is the crank case, as the piston moves toward the top of the cylinder. At the time of the explosion and as the piston starts on its downward motion the charge for the next explosion is put under compression. At a certain point the port into the combustion chamber is uncovered—that is, when the piston is practically all the way down. This allows the compressed charge to rush into the combustion chamber, and a deflector on the head of the piston directs the charge toward the top of the cylinder, which keeps the charge from going out on the opposite side of the cylinder with the exhaust. The port through which the charge is drawn into the compression chamber runs also to a point just a little nearer the head of the cylinder than that at which the piston reaches its lowest point of travel. Thus it will be seen that this port, opening into the combustion chamber, is covered by the piston shortly after it starts on the upward stroke and remains so until after the explosion has forced the piston back almost to its lowest point of travel. The vacuum created in the crank case by the upward stroke of the piston draws the fuel into the crank case to be compressed by the next downward stroke of the piston. The shape of the head of the piston directs the incoming charge toward the top of the cylinder and helps to scavenge the chamber.

The engine of my car runs very unevenly. The engine cannot be throttled down to run slowly. The valves have been dressed down and ground twice in the last two months. The carburetor has been adjusted several times. Can you advise a remedy? When the engine is put through a hard pull it fires back through the carburetor.

Possibly the ignition is not timed correctly, but the main trouble is undoubtedly with the carburetor adjustment, provided you have good compression in all the cylinders. If the compression is poor that would be a reason.

Too lean a mixture caused the back firing. Adjust the carburetor for a slightly richer mixture.

Is the battery type of ignition better than the magneto? If so, why? Is it possible to connect a magneto and switch it on in case the battery should give out?

Battery ignition is not better than magneto, but it generally is considered to give a hotter spark at low engine speeds, which is an advantage at starting. Battery ignition leads itself well to the present day electrified car, for since the storage battery is necessary for the lighting and starting apparatus it can just as well take care of the ignition. However, there is this objection to battery ignition—if the battery fails your car is dead, whereas with a magneto you have ignition current as long as the engine operates.

Dual systems are very common whereby either magneto or battery can be used, but you could not connect a magneto ignition system to your lighting and starting battery.

HEAT WORST ENEMY OF OUR BOYS NOW IN CAMP ON MEXICAN BORDER

Guardsmen Are Being Fed Well; In Fact Some Get Better Food Than They Did at Home—Health of All Is Good.

Little Human Interest Stories About the National Guardsmen—Incidents In Their Daily Life That Interest All.

As Major General Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff, inspects the camps of regulars and militia, comprising close to 25,000 guardsmen and 6,000 regulars, he finds conditions much better than in the concentration camps at the time of the Spanish war.

Food complaints which flooded the east for the first day or two after the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania troops began arriving were little justified, even though the quartermaster's department was almost swamped in putting adequate supplies in the possession of the rapidly arriving contingents at widely separated camps, while at the same time shipping supplies to Columbus and Hachita, N. M., and numerous camps in the district outside El Paso.

The guardsmen are being well fed, many of them better fed than in civilian life. In quantity, quality and assortment their rations are no different from those of the regular army. In fact, the militia messes are very much more diversified than those of the regulars, for the militiamen are supplying themselves with all manner of delicacies, while many a tent is equipped with a private icebox and a supply of cold bottles.

Except for forty members of a Massachusetts company poisoned by eating tinned sardines, medical officers report little sickness.

Many of the complaints sent east undoubtedly are due in large measure to homesickness, from which, however, most of the militia seems to be recovering.

Prizefights Held.

Three prizefights and a vaudeville entertainment were given one evening by the men of the Seventh Illinois regiment. Color Sergeant Joseph J. Gallagher, who was one of the divers who worked on the Eastland wreck, was the promoter. The bouts were between New Swanson and Eddie Deneke, both of Company L; Rube Larson and Merben Frame, both of I company, and Danny Goodman of the First regiment and Pete Zanders of the Seventh.

Wife Sees Him Cooking.

The heat and smell of cooking at the guard camp were oppressive. Squads of recruits drilled with great determination. In every patch of shade weary men and boys lay stretched face downward. There was something in the air, a half realization of the things that had brought them all there, an uncertainty of the things to come, which was so perceptible that it seemed almost tangible.

Even the jokes seemed to serve only as conventional substitutes for the things that were not talked about. But there in the midst of it all a young soldier and his wife stood and laughed.

She had come to the camp expecting to find him marching or shooting, and she had found him cooking, or trying to. Now, he was a particularly young man. They had been married a very few months, but she had learned that he disliked washing dishes, that he could not and would not cook and that he was particularly averse to peeling potatoes. And so she laughed, a jolly, thoroughgoing little laugh that was full of real enjoyment, although there was a tenderness in it that brought a glad smile to his eyes and made it easy for him to laugh with her.

Bids Another Goodby.

With the departure of the Second Indiana regiment, only the First infantry, the field hospital company and ambulance company No. 2, recently recruited, will remain in camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

One officer in the Second and 260 enlisted men were disqualified by physical examination. Second Lieutenant Orval St. Clair of the Spencer company failed to pass the examining board. The board qualified fifty-two officers and 846 enlisted men. One hundred and thirty-four recruits have joined the regiment, which makes the total fifty-two officers and 900 enlisted men.

Colonel Coulter had a bit of patriotic sentiment woven into his camp experiences. An elderly woman, a Mrs. Coleman of Indianapolis, called at his headquarters and expressed a wish to say goodby to him before his departure.

"I bade your three uncles goodby when they started for the Mexican war back in the forties," she said. "It was at Washington, Ind., and I knew them very well. I am seventy-five years old, but I have come out here to say goodby to you before you, too, start for Mexico."

The colonel and Mrs. Coleman sat down for a chat, and their talk drifted to the stirring days when Mexico and the United States last met in battle.

Rumor Factory Active.

The rumor factory is in full blast at Laredo, where St. Louis men are in camp. The regulars are delighted to stuff the militiamen full of alarming reports. Hills are pointed out to the men, and they are told that they are Mexican hills and that French seventy-five centimeter guns are trained from behind them directly on the camp. The camp is worse than Alton for animal stories. A man who spent the night in the guardhouse woke up next to a rattler, the fact that the guard tent was policed by eight guards with bayoneted rifles to the contrary notwithstanding.

There are from 100 to 80,000 Mexicans across the river. Ready believers are found for each story.

The Maine troops at Laredo are equipped with four army type motor trucks. The Second and Third Missouri regiments at Nevada are to be equipped with small motor trucks furnished by their friends. The First Missouri regiment and Battery A, both of St. Louis, are the only troops seen without this modern equipment, and the question is asked, "Why doesn't St. Louis back its soldiers?"

Letter From Illinois Guardsman.

Fifteen minutes is a short time in which to fall in love, but when a troop train pauses in a Texas town and a pretty girl, with the tan of the prairies on her cheeks and a sombrero almost hiding her yellow curls, comes to the car window and—but read what Private Eugene La Pine of Company I, Second Illinois infantry, has to say about it:

10 a. m., Fort Sam Houston, July 7, 1916.

Arrived here last Sunday after a 62 hour ride. Found out this town to be better than Chicago; More places of enjoyment. On our trip girls through bouquet of flowers, flags and all sorts of Soveigners. One young lady from Cameron Texas who struck my facination is to become my wife as soon as my time expires. I have met her on the way to Ft. Sam Houston. Our train stopped at this town for 15 minutes. Have been corresponding with her every day and some times get two letters per day.

Monday went swimming; Uncle Sammy has plenty of showers; In the evening for a pass time we initiated all the rookies such as send him coal for the rifle range and Hanging Clothes on the skirmish line. Most of the boys have not gone to town as the Government have not yet issued all of the clothing. U. S. is particular how he sends his boys to town.

One morning our battalion took a seven mile walk with a full equipment and the boys felt fine on there returnal. Later got lemonade. All the boys are wishing to see real service and send to the border or even in Mexico. They have got accostomed to the climate. In the morning we had inspection of our entire outfit. No boys in our company have made many friends amongst the Civilians. All of the Illinois Infantry are in town. The 8th colored was the last to arrive, who came in one night about 8 o'clock.

On the train coming here our Company yelled a song at each town which was orriginated by myself:

Rickawacher! Fire Quaker! Ziff!
Boom! Bah! "Company I."
"Company I!" Rah! Rah! Rah!
Rough, tough; we don't take a bluff.
Always fighting, and can't get enough.

On the trains were printed in large letters:

GET VILLA OR BUST!
COMPANY I THE GO GETTERS

And a long side of it a picture of Villa's head.

PRIVATE EUGENE LA PINE.

P. S.—Corporal Rud[illegible] has been officially elected washwoman [illegible] our squad. He is braking in the rookie [illegible] o his profision.

Private George Ke[illegible]n captured a wild man while on guard. (A wild insect which was crawling beneath his shirt.)

Want to Be Released.

Captain H. Q. Pickert, Troop B, Michigan cavalry, of Detroit said that a number of men had asked for releases. He said that a percentage of the cases were not in the least deserving.

"Many parents are showing the worst patriotism and judgment imaginable," he said. "They do not interest themselves in the moral or physical well[illegible] of their children as long as neither interfere with their own pursuits, but the minute the children are called to the colors they immediately begin everything imaginable to bring about their releases. It is a fine thing for the boys to get this military experience, both physically and morally. They get exactly the same food as we do."

In preparation for service at the Mexican border a number of Michigan guardsmen and officers have been taking lessons in Spanish. Maxwell N. Rosean of Detroit instructs six classes daily.

Mexicans Are Scared.

A young German came across the border from Magdalena, in the state of Sonora, to the camp of the California troops at Nogales. He said that the Mexicans down there were almost in spasms of alarm over the military activity in Nogales. He said one of the Mexican papers came out with an extra edition in which it was stated that the Americans had 40,000 troops mobilized at Nogales and were about to cross into Mexico.

The German said that General Calles had about 20,000 soldiers scattered around through Sonora. Most of them were in relatively small garrisons. They seemed to have enough to eat, but they were carrying guns of every known variety and seemed to be shy on ammunition.

In Nogales one end of the town is Mexican, the other is American. The chief Mexican business street runs at right angles to the Broadway of the American side.

On one side of the street walk the American sentries, hugging the shade of the store buildings. Sentry duty on the Mexican side seems to be a matter of inspiration. Occasionally you see a fast buck riding on a cow pony with a rifle across his saddle pommel. In the middle of the street on the Mexican side is a funny little guardhouse. The sentry usually sits in the open window with his feet dangling outside smoking lobe cigarettes and looking unutterable things at the American. Once in awhile a stray shot gets on the wrong side of the border. Then the Mexican commander gets excited and blames it on the American custom house officers, and they blame it on him, and finally the Mexican commander compromises by blaming it on the American newspapers.

Heroic Treatment Wins.

The prize winning story of how an Ohio guardsman "got by" federal examining officers was told in camp. Tales of men drinking large quantities of water or eating prodigious amounts of food are comparatively common about camp, a number of men having in this way sufficiently amplified their weight to meet requirements, but one day, according to the latest story, a Cincinnati guardsman was a half inch lacking in height and knew it. He knew others had been rejected for no more serious defects and decided not to take the chances.

Out behind a shower bathhouse, according to the story, a stalwart messmate of the guardsman applied a broom handle. In a half hour, when the man was called for examination, two well developed bumps on the trooper's cranium got him safely by the man with the measuring apparatus.

Battle With Scorpion.

Colonel Edwin Hunt, who is an Oakland (Cal.) business man when he is not commanding the Fifth California infantry, had a successful engagement with a large scorpion, which he declares was yellow, with pink stripes. The colonel's only proof is his word that he fired a volley of shoes and that the enemy retreated.

Major L. M. Farrell of San Jose also boasts of an experience. When he woke up one morning he found a horned toad enjoying half of his pillow. He exhibits the remains of the toad as proof that he was successful in the ensuing engagement.

Army officers place no credence in the story of the California private whose hand was blown off at midnight and who claimed he was assaulted by some person, presumably a Mexican, with a bomb. It is believed he accidentally exploded some dynamite caps and sought to make his injury appear as having been received in the line of duty.

Georgia Men Happy.

Georgia's army taking the field has produced an abundant crop of songs—war songs, comic songs, semi-religious songs, songs that are sweet, songs that are sad. Some are sentimental, some nonsensical. Some are rollicking, others are plaintive. Some are of whole cloth, and some are parodies.

Some you can understand, and some you can't. Some are tuneful, and some resemble chants. Each camp has its refrain, each band its anthem. Troop F, Second squadron cavalry, nightly serenades the auxiliary camp occupied by the cavalry and artillery with a camp meeting aria of mountain origin.

The mountaineers are big, burly specimens of manhood. Their voices are trained to range over hill and vale. It is the possum hunting voice that can be heard over the midnight baying of a group of possum hungry hounds. Troop F gathers each day at sundown in the tent of its comic opera division, Troop X, and sings.

Succumbs From Heat.

The fierce heat has affected several of the Massachusetts men in El Paso, but none of them seriously, except Private Timothy Finn of Company B, Ninth regiment, a former member of the Lynn fire department. He is in the hospital under observation for depressive mania.

Finn was found acting strangely and taken in charge by the medical officers. Later he escaped from the hospital tent and set off for Mexico on the run, pursued by Private Frank J. Green, formerly in Carney hospital, and Sergeant John Murphy of the sanitary troops. The guard was called out to take up the chase. Finn was climbing over the wire fence of the boundary when he was caught. Two Texas rangers rode up at full speed and trained their rifles on the adobe huts in Mexico to guard against snipers while Finn was being subdued.

Troopers Honor Colonel.

Colonel Foreman of an Illinois regiment was the recipient of a mark of appreciation from his troopers. The first sergeants of the troop presented him with a testimonial signed by every soldier of the first section. It read:

"Realizing that we have been given exceptional accommodations on our journey and knowing that it is to you chiefly that we owe the comforts of this trip, we, the enlisted men of the first section of the First Illinois cavalry, desire to express to you, our colonel, our most sincere appreciation of your efforts in our behalf."

Didn't Eat the Chocolate.

Josephus Jackson, the porter in charge of the line officers' car on a New York train, has a powerful respect for "army chocolate." The kind they have been eating day after day, his passengers have told him, is treated to make them fight.

Lieutenant George B. Hall of Company B offered a piece of the chocolate to Josephus. The porter reached out his hand, then thought of the terrible possibilities should he yield to the influence of the fighting drug and join in the impending engagement at Brownsville.

"No, sah; no, sah!" he cried. "Ah don' want to get mean jes' now."

DEATH SUMMONS CHAS. A. HAZELTINE

Well Known Plainfielder Succumbs to Long Illness—Funeral on Friday.

Charles A. Hazeltine, aged 67 years, for more than twenty-six years a resident of this city, died this morning following an illness of several months' duration. He was a native of New York State, being born near Jamestown. His early boyhood was spent in Morristown and later he moved to this city. During the last few years he has resided in Westfield.

Mr. Hazeltine was one of the oldest commuters of the Central Railroad, having gone back and forth to New York for over forty years, where he conducted a stationery business. He conducted his business until his illness began. He is survived by three sons and two daughters. These are Arthur N. Hazeltine, of Park Lane, this city; Charles E. Hazeltine, of New York; Frank R. Hazeltine, of Westfield, and the Misses Gertrude F. and Maude B. Hazeltine, of New York. Two brothers and three sisters also survive him. The latter are Louis P. Hazeltine, of California; Addison H. Hazeltine, of Florida, and the Misses Ella W., Caroline M. and Harriet Mary Hazeltine, of Morristown.

Mr. Hazeltine was a member of the Presbyterian church of Westfield. The funeral will be held from the residence of his son, Arthur N. Hazeltine, at 1135 Park Lane, Friday afternoon at four o'clock and the interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF STEPHEN O. STAATS HELD

The funeral of Stephen O. Staats, whose death occurred suddenly Monday noon, was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from his late home, 130 West Second street. The service was in charge of Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and was attended by a large number of friends of the diseased. During the service Mrs. Elizabeth Crouch, of Elizabeth, sang several selections.

There were many beautiful floral tributes, several set pieces being numbered in the collection. The interment was in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as pallbearers: Walter Long, Monroe Long, Simeon Gradrix, M. W. King, Rubin Coddington and Jacob Long.

SCHANG HURT IN GAME.

Walter H. Schang, left fielder of the Philadelphia Athletics, was seriously injured in the seventh inning of the first game with Chicago yesterday. In going after a foul fly Schang stumbled over the low concrete coping in front of the left field seats and fell on his head. He was carried off the field unconscious and taken to a hospital.

An X-ray examination of Schang's injuries showed that his jaw had been fractured and his shoulder badly bruised. He will be out of the game indefinitely as a result of the accident. "Connie" Mack announced that he feared it would be at least a month before Schang would be able to play ball again.

CUBS GET WORTMAN.

William Wortamn, Kansas City's star shortstop, has been purchased by the Chicago Nationals, it was announced today, at a price said to be higher than the $22,500 value given by the Pittsburgh Nationals some years ago for "Marty" O'Toole. The amount of cash, however, and the names of the three players involved in the deal were not announced.

Wortman is hitting about .300 and has played three years without missing a single inning.

Edward Zwilling, of the Chicago Nationals, wil go to Indianapolis tomorrow as part payment for "Joe" Kelly, who was purchased from the Indianapolis club.

JEAN COLESWORTHY.

Jean Colesworthy, the daughter of Daniel C. and Ella C. Colesworthy, of 1107 East Front street, died this morning. She was one month and five days old. The funeral service will be held Friday afternoon from the parents' home at 3 o'clock, and will be in charge of Rev. C. M. Anderson, pastor of First M. E. church. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

LEAGUE OF REPUBLICAN CLUBS IS ORGANIZED

Wm. Newcorn Among Representatives at G. O. P. Gathering in Trenton.

William Newcorn, of this city, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, was among the fifteen representatives from sixteen of the twenty-one counties of the State which met in Trenton yesterday to organize a league of Republican clubs for the campaign in New Jersey this fall. Newton A. K. Bugbee, State chairman, presided, and at the outset he made it clear that the clubs as an allied body would not take any part in furthering the interests of any single candidate for any nomination prior to the primaries in September.

Mr. Bugbee said that the entire effort of the organization would be devoted to the interests of the Presidential ticket and the slogan adopted was "Do it now." The State chairman named the following as a committee to confer at once and report to the meeting a scheme for organization:

Samuel A. Dobbins, of Camden; Harry L. Knight, of Burlington; Alfred S. March, of New Brunswick; James H. Mulhearn, of Trenton; William Newcorn, of Plainfield; Frederick W. Van Blarcom, of Paterson; John B. Smith, of West Hudson; J. William Huegel, of Newark; Edward C. Brennan, of West New York, and Charles V. Finch, of Bayonne.

Immediate organization of the State League of Clubs was recommended by this committee after a brief session, with additional recommendations that Edward C. Brennan be made its president; Marvin Reilly, of Trenton, secretary, and Samuel A. Dobbins, of Camden, treasurer, and that there be a vice-president selected later from each county. The report was concurred in and the several officers were unanimously elected.

It was subsequently voted to waive the detail of naming a vice-president from each county and to permit the president of the league to select such assistants as he may deem necessary. This was done after the representatives of several colored delegates had asked that their organizations receive representation among the lists of vice-presidents. Their request was granted by the adoption of a motion that the colored Republican clubs of the State be allowed three vice-presidents in the league. They were immediately named by Mr. Brennan as follows: John H. P. Young, of Newark; E. L. De Pau, of Trenton, and Issac H. Nutter, of Atlantic City.

There are now about one hundred and eighty Republican clubs in New Jersey, and it is proposed to begin at once the formation of others, the object being to have not less than five hundred active clubs at work by the middle of September.

Giving Character for Fame

Here is a little thing from Bayard Taylor which fits our own business splendidly:

"Fame is what you have taken,
Character's what you give;
When to this truth you 'waken,
Then you begin to live."

We awakened to this truth many years ago—we adhered to it as closely as any artist ever held to his principles, or philosopher to his opinions.

And so our Fame, or "that which we have taken," is based on our Character, or "that which we have given."

It's a matter of cause and effect—of sowing and reaping; and no store ever sowed dishonesty and reaped success.

OUR MILITARY ACADEMY.

West Point, Where Uncle Sam's Army Officers Are Made.

It was in 1802 that congress established the United States Military academy, the training school for officers, at West Point, on the banks of the Hudson, fifty-two miles north of New York city.

Although the school for educating and training young men in the theory and practice of military science, to fit them for duty as officers of the United States army, was not established until after Washington's death, he was in a way the real founder. In 1793 and again in 1796 he urged upon congress the necessity of such an institution. The Continental congress as early as 1776 had also suggested the desirability of "a military school for the army."

Authorized in 1802, the Military academy was opened on the Fourth of July with a class of ten cadets. Prior to that time a number of students had been enrolled at the forts at West Point, where a corps of artillerymen and engineers was stationed and informal instruction had been given in the arts of war.

The first decade of the academy's existence was marked by many vicissitudes. Although congress had created the institution, the lawmakers apparently soon forgot all about it, and, lacking sufficient funds for its proper conduct, the academy authorities were hard pressed to keep it alive. At one time the school was without a single instructor. In its first ten years only seventy-five students graduated.

In 1812 President Madison brought about a reorganization of West Point. Soon 260 students were enrolled, and the institution began to assume something of its present form. It was not until 1817, however, that West Point began to receive serious consideration in the military world. Colonel Sylvanus Thayer, who has been called "the Father of West Point," was appointed to command, and it was he who introduced the uniform, the organization and rules of study. Under his control the academy gained prestige and renown. In 1833, when he resigned the command, West Point had won the respect of the military men of Europe and was counted among the world's most famous institutions of its kind.—Exchange.

TALKS ON POWER—No. 10

Cheaper to Buy Power

Public Service Electric Co.,
Camden, N. J.

Gentlemen:

In reply to your communication, asking whether we are getting satisfactory results from buying electric power from your company, rather than maintaining an engine.

We would relate the following: At the time we started using your power, rather than generate our own, we had under consideration the advisability of building a new powerhouse; we had had advices from competent engineers and it was very hard for us to decide whether to install a new engine and boiler and generate our own current, or buy from your company.

This was in 1910, and during these six years' experience I am very pleased to report to you that we have had entire satisfaction and we no longer contemplate installing our own power plant, and further than that, we believe we have saved considerable money by buying our current, rather than generating it ourselves.

Assuring you of our entire satisfaction, we are,

Yours truly,
THOMAS MADDOCK'S SONS' COMPANY.
(Sgd.) A. M. MADDOCK,
President.

There is no "guesswork" in determining the present cost of power in a factory.

—Nor in estimating the future cost of operating a factory with Public Service Power.

Nearly all of our power salesmen are graduate engineers who are devoting all their time to the study of factory drive and power costs.

These engineers determine the present cost of power with the aid of a steam engine indicator, a steam flow meter, a tachometer or speed indicator, a graphic recording watt meter, and other necessary instruments.

With these instruments the friction load, the minimum, maximum and average loads, and the amount of steam used for any special purpose is determined with a high degree of accuracy.

With this information —And judgment guided by a large fund of data obtained from carefully made tests in similar factories

—Our engineers are able to closely estimate the cost of operating a factory with Public Service power.

The accuracy with which our engineers estimate the future cost of Public Service power is illustrated by a case in which the estimated monthly cost was within 3 per cent. of the actual monthly cost.

We shall be glad to submit proof that this was not an exceptional case.

The care with which our engineers estimate the cost of power is another reason why we supply power to more than 10,000 power users from our great system of 22 generating stations and 61 sub-stations.

Let us make tests in your factory. We may be able to reduce your power costs.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF CAPT. BENJAMIN DOANE

Many Mourners Attend Obsequies of Widely Known Shipmaster.

The funeral of Captain Benjamin Doane, father of Mrs. J. Hervey Doane of this city, was held this afternoon at 1:30, at the home of his son, Francis H. Doane, 55 Center street, Bayonne. Relatives and friends from this city as well as life long associates with whom he sailed the sea, attended the service. The floral offerings were numerous, showing the great esteem which the deceased had been held. The interment was in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Captain Doane was born in Barrington, Nova Scotia, in 1823 and began following the sea in 1837. In the early '40s he made a whaling voyage to the Pacific, visiting Australia years before the discovery of gold, and the Japan Islands before they were opened to the world by Captain Perry. He began sailing out of New York in 1852, at first in the Mediterranean fruit trade, later in the employ of Maitland Phelps and Company to South America. During the Civil War he was commissioned a captain in the volunteer navy, but was never called into service. For about ten years he commanded ships of the Lorrilard Steamship Company until its merger with the Clyde Line in 1876, when he continued with the latter until his retirement from the sea in 1890. Since that date he has resided in Plainfield. His wife was Maria Knowles, of Barrington, N. S. The latter died in 1864.

Experiences with mutineers, whom he cowed at the point of his pistol, the saving of lives of other adventurers in early seafaring life, are detailed in old book, "The Brave Deeds of Captain Doane."

BOROUGH POLICE CASES.

In the borough court this morning Harry De Meza, of Westervelt avenue; Michale Dellarto, of Harrison avenue; Edward Korman, of Walnut street; J. Lewis, of Linden avenue; Herman Pasch, of Harrison avenue; Isaac Runyon, of Washington avenue; Mr. Chrysafides, of Park place, and Viggo Mortemen, of Harrison avenue, were arraigned for having dogs without a license. All agreed to have their pets licensed and with this understanding they were allowed to go.

Nicholas Soupar was arrested yesterday for keeping his store on Somerset street open on Sunday. The case against him was dismissed in court.

CHIE KIELY RETURNS.

Chief of Police Patrick S. Kiely returned last night from Albany, where he went to secure extradition papers for Albert Walpole, the Scotch Plains youth mixed up in the Netherwood station "holdup" last month. Walpole is now held by the Brooklyn authorities and will remain there for thirty days, when he will be brought to this city for arraignment before Judge William G. De Meza.

FRANKLIN MURPHY FOR SENATOR

A Manufacturer to Represent a Manufacturing State in the United States Senate

To the Manufacturers and Other Business Men:---

To the Great Army of Workmen Engaged in the Various Crafts:---

To All the Voters of New Jersey:---

NEW JERSEY is a Manufacturing State.

NEW JERSEY'S shops and mills, her factories and foundries, provide a means of livelihood for hundreds of thousands of her population and represent a large share of the wealth of the State.

NEW JERSEY cannot be prosperous unless her people are prosperous, for the people are the State.

NEW JERSEY'S great army of workers, whether in factory, field or office, cannot be considered prosperous unless they are regularly employed, under favorable conditions, at fair wages.

NEW JERSEY'S manufacturers, her merchants her business men generally, cannot provide profitable employment for the great army of workers unless business is reasonably safeguarded against unfair world-wide competition.

MUCH IS BEING SAID about PREPAREDNESS these days—and rightly so.

PREPAREDNESS, in a military sense, may well command the best thought of the country. But there is another form of PREPAREDNESS which also demands the attention of thinking men, and that is Industrial and Commercial PREPAREDNESS.

THIS COUNTRY must be prepared to protect its citizens not only against an invasion of armed foes, but also against the industrial and commercial invasion that is sure to follow the close of the war which now has practically all of Europe in its grasp.

WHEN THE MEN now in the trenches go back to industrial pursuits there will be a veritable flood of products turned into the channel of trade. The natural course of this channel will be toward the markets of this country, and New Jersey workmen, along with their fellows in other States, must be prepared to check this flow and preserve to themselves the proper fruits of their own labors.

PREPAREDNESS in this sense means the selection of well-qualified, practical, hard-headed business men as representatives in the National Congress where legislation covering questions of the most vital importance to workmen and business men alike will have to be considered and enacted.

SUCH A MAN is FRANKLIN MURPHY, whose candidacy for the United States Senate was announced last week.

MR. MURPHY has had many years' actual experience as a manufacturer. He is the head of the Murphy Varnish Company, which he started and built to a business of national repute.

HE HAS THE EXPERIENCE necessary to enable him to deal with great business questions.

HAVING COME UP from the ranks himself, his consideration for, and treatment of, other workers has been such that there has been no labor trouble between his company and its employes during all the years of their relations.

BECAUSE FRANKLIN MURPHY is so splendidly equipped by nature and by practical experience to know the legislative needs of a manufacturing State, a number of manufacturers and other business men have agreed among themselves to further his candidacy for th United States Senate.

AT A MEETING held in the Robert Treat Hotel, Newark, July 13th, which was presided over by Mr. Peter Campbell, president of the Nairn Linoleum Company, and attended by some forty representative manufacturers and other business men, it was resolved to urge the voters of New Jersey to support MR. MURPHY at the primaries Tuesday, September 26 next, because his selection as a candidate is a necessary step toward the election of a sound, patriotic, experienced business man to represent New Jersey in the Upper House of Congress.

THE MANUFACTURERS and business men who are urging MR. MURPHY'S election freely admit that they have an interest at stake. The interest is inseparable from the best interests of the great army of workers in this State, for whatever affects the one affects the other, and each is dependent upon the other for mutual prosperity.

A vote for FRANKLIN MURPHY at the Republican Primaries, Tuesday, Sept. 26, Means a Vote for

A MANUFACTURER TO REPRESENT A MANUFACTURING STATE IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE

PLAN CIVIC-RELIGIOUS BETTERMENT OF CITY

Church Co-operative Ass'n Organizes and Elects Joseph W. Gavett as President.

An enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the Church Co-operative Association of Plainfield was held at the Y. M. C. A. last night, there being fifty representatives from the different churches of the city and vicinity present to perfect the organization which was recently formed. The purpose of the association is for the spiritual, social and civic advancement of the life of the city and the conservation of the results of the Biederwolf evangelistic campaign early in the spring.

To carry on the work which seems to be imperative, a special committee was formed, comprising the officers and such other men as they may want to call in for conference. This committee was decided upon because it was evident that the vacation season would make it impossible for the executive committee to commence work before fall, when it is expected that vigorous activities will be undertaken along various lines, which it is believed will be of great benefit to the city and entire vicinity.

The association will not confine its efforts to any one particular line of work, the plan being broad enough to take in all departments of civic-religious activity for the general moral uplift of the community which is thought to be a necessity.

It was agreed to request the Plainfield Ministers' Association to arrange for a "go-to-church Sunday" on September 24, this date being chosen because it is the one set apart by the State Sunday School Association for the fall rally.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph acted as the temporary chairman at last night's meeting, and during the business session a permanent organization was formed with the following officers: President, Joseph W. Gavett; vice-president, Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson; treasurer, John H. Doane; secretary, J. H. Manning. The executive committee will be composed of the officers and one representative from each church identified with the association.

CHALLENGE TROPHY FOR KENNEL EVENTS

Local Club Offers Valuable Prizes at Hudson County Show.

That the members of the Plainfield Kennel Club take an interest in all dog shows, whether they are or are not under their own auspices and in this city, is evinced by the fact that among the many valuable prizes to be offered contestants in the Hudson Kennel Club show to be held in Union Hill on July 26, are two awards offered by the local organization. The local club offers a medal for the best "Scottish Terrier." This competition is open to all and has already attracted considerable attenttion. The club also offers its Challenge Trophy, to be awarded at the 1917 Westminster Kennel Club show to the member securing the most points in A. K. C. shows in the Eastern circuit.

Many of the dogs entered in the Hudson county event, will be entered in the local competition. These include many different breeds, among them being Bloodhounds, Mastiffs, Great Danes, Newfoundlands, Russian Wolfhounds, Irish Wolfhounds, Greyhounds, Eskimos, English Setters, Sporting Spaniels, Sheephounds, Beagles, Dachshunds and Collies. Other breeds of dog will be well represented.

ELMER N. ANDERSON WEDS MISS ANNA PEARL DREW

Miss Anna Pearl Drew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Drew, of 920 West Third street, and Elmer Nathaniel Anderson, son of Ander Anderson, of 911 West Third street, were married at eight o'clock this morning by Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. The ceremony took place at the home of the officiating clergyman. Miss Carrie Pennoyer, of Elizabeth, and Henry Anderson, of this city, were the witnesses.

The bride graduated from the Plainfield High School this year in the commercial department. Mr. Anderson is a machinist employed in Plainfield. The couple will continue to live here.

TEACH THEM TO RESPECT OUR NATIONAL GUARDSMEN.

What are we going to do with the curbstone gangster who masquerades as an American citizen and finds delight in slurring and sneering the khaki garbed National Guard member as he passes on his way to drill in the Company K armory? Those patriots whose blood was stirred up to the boiling point by these loathesome demonstrations Monday night in the business section would have been justified in "beating the daylights" out of the offenders and sending them to the hospital as examples of sidewalk citizenship. Some of the more conservative may say: "There isn't such animal in existence," but ample proof that the soldiers have been putting up with just this sought of thing for weeks past may be gleaned by a visit to the business section on any night the guardsmen are summoned to the armory for drill. Their ears burn from the taunts they hear as they pass along the street and to their credit it may be said that they have displayed wonderful self-control in not taking the law into their own hands.

Only the half-witted, booze soaked, irresponsible could be credited with the frequently heard: "Villa ain't never done nothing to me. Why should I go to war?" This is the type of citizen who refers to the Company K guardsmen as "tin-soldiers" and "dressed up targets." And Plainfield isn't the worst place. Guardsmen are suffering similar experiences in all parts of the country. There is a certain class that has never learned the law of respect and doesn't know what it means to be qualified for military service. The United States Government doesn't want to enlist them as soldiers and they would be turned down even if they did summon enough courage together to apply for enlistment. Soldiering is too good for their type; turn them loose in a stoneyard and compel them to do the kind of work other States have found for their moral degenerates.

WHY NOT REGULATE THE PRICE OF MILK?

Milk selling in Plainfield today at nine cents a quart yields a seventy-six per cent. profit to the middleman. According to statistics filed by the joint legislative committtee of New York, now inquiring into farming conditions in that State, the Bordens in that zone are paying a July price of $1.09 per 100 pounds of milk, delivered at their shipping stations. The price paid the farmer is less than two and one-quarter cents a quart. Witnesses appearing before the committee at a recent session held in Binghamton testified that the Bordens controlled the price of milk in that section, as they do in many other parts of New York, and that the profit of the firm was from fifty to seventy-five per cent.

RIGHT MAN TO HANDLE STATE'S FINANCIAL PROBLEM.

Last year the State of New Jersey had a deficit in the treasury of about $1,500,000. An additional burden to the taxpayers was escaped by the business-like and economic handling of the finances of the State. The appropriation committee which accomplished this feat did so by placing a competent man with financial training in charge. This individual was the Hon. William de La Roche Anderson. Somerset county elects an assemblyman this fall and the voters will confer a benefit on their State if they send as their representative to Trenton this man who has a proven ability in the particularly important branch of State work.

Although little has been heard recently concerning the top-notch figure to which the cost of building operations will probably soar in Plainfield during 1916 it is safe to conclude that the mark will approach, if not pass, the record. Tradesmen report plenty of work and fair contract figures and claim that present conditions are decidedly better than those under which they were working this time last year. Several notable structures are being erected and present plans indicate that they will all be completed before January, 1917. For the most part the big contracts have been given out to local firms and local labor has been given an opportunity to figure in the work.

According to reports South Jersey farmers are counting on bigger prices to force a smaller potato crop than that harvested last year to bring a normal price. Some figuring. Rural districts are watching this year's crop with interest because of experiments made on substitutes for potash, the importation of which was cut off by the war. Various substitutes have been tried out, but how efficacious they will prove cannot be determined until the average is struck after they have been unearthed.

And like the hero in the play,
He struts with air dramatic.

In manner most emphatic.

They all have compliments to burn;
His state of health they fain would learn,
As though 'twere of deep concern
To city, state and nation.
Though he's been single all his life,
They ask politely: "How's your wife?"
The time for courtesies is rife—
He's made to feel his station.

He's welcomed all along the line.
They say, "Old man, you're looking fine;
Come in, we'll open up some wine
And lubricate your motor."
They fill him full of torrid breeze,
They tell him he's the entire cheese,
The best is none too good for he's Tonight.

Bend low, O dusky night,
And give my spirit rest.
Hold me to your deep breast,
And put old cares to flight.
Give back the lost delight
That once my soul possessed,
When peace was loveliest,
Bend low, O dusky Night.

And promise, dusky Night,
The folk across the way
Will no piano play
And put all sleep to flight,
Their racket is a fright;
That there will not hold sway
Some amateur Calve
To warble all the night.

LOST, STRAYED OR STOLEN

BACK WITH TROOP D

made yesterday. Other troopers have had fairly bad accidents.

The great desire of a Watchung trooper is to reach Douglas for a shower bath and a dinner at the hotel. This Sergeant Cox, Bugler Williams, Corporals Buttfield and Perkins managed to do yesterday, and they made the most of it. In future nine passes will be issued a night. They require return to camp by nine o'clock.

(Special to Daily Press.)

Douglas, Ariz., July 14.—Six thousand New Jersey Guardsmen today do honor to Private William Whelan, the New Jersey boy who was a member of Company K, of the Fifth regiment, whose death occurred yesterday afternoon at the Calumet Hospital, in the city of Douglas, after a few days' illness with pneumonia, which he contracted soon after his arrival here. The entire company of which he was a member acted as an escort when the body was carried from the Ferguson morgue in Douglas to the railroad station for shipment home. The citizens of the city joined in showing their respect for the first of the New Jersey boys to die while on border duty.

Company K, which is a Montclair organization under command of Captain Roscoe Johnson, marched during the afternoon to the city of Douglas, where they formed at the morgue while brief military services were held. Captain Charles W. Gulick, chaplain of the Fifth regiment, conducted the services and his sermon was a glowing eulogy to the bravery and manliness of the Bloomfield boy.

The casket was beautifully draped with a huge American flag and floral contributions from his own company, the Fifth regiment and private individuals covered the casket in profusion. Whelan's best friends in the company were selected as pall-bearers and eleven of the men were visibly affected as the remains were carried from the morgue and escorted with military honors to the railroad station. Efforts had been made to secure the permission of the War Department to have the body sent home under accompaniment of one or more soldiers, but the department refused the permission, and it was shipped by express over the El Paso & Southwestern Railroad.

Every indication points to a long stay here for the New Jerseymen. A statement made by General Davis, commanding the Arizona District, has created the impression that the men will be here until winter if not later. In discussing the possibility of joint maneuvres between the regular army men and the National Guardsmen, General Davis expressed himself as being greatly in favor of such joint work, but his reply is taken to indicate that he believes it will take that long to whip the men into shape for combined work.

Up to the present time the troops have had no opportunity to work out any maneuvres. As a matter of fact the preparation of camp, the excessive rainfall and other handicaps have made it impossible to do much more to date than simply work out the details of the camp in the first stages of its making. An inspection of the tented city of the New Jerseymen is necessary to get a comprehensive idea of the vast amount of work that was required to make conditions liveable here in the desert. Thousands of feet of ditches had to be dug and water pipes laid; wooden substructures for kitchens and mess halls had to be built and other work involving a great deal of time was required. In truth the work has little more than commenced, but the men are comfortable and well situated, all things taken into consideration.

If the guardsmen are taken into maneuvre work in conjuction with the regular army forces here it will be the making of a soldierly home military organization. Systematic training with the regulars is considered a valuable experience for the State troops, and if this drilling is extended over any considerable period of time it will work inestimable good from a military viewpoint.

Owing to the probabilities of a speedy settlement of the international situation, Major General J. Franklin Bell, whom, it was announced a few weeks ago, would come here to assume charge of the Western border division, is not likely to establish a headquarters here, it was learned today. General Bell was named to this division, Brigadier-General Pershing to the El Paso district, and Major-General Frederick Funston to the Texas division and a commander for the three districts was to have been named by the War Department. Major-General Leonard A. Wood, commanding the Department of the East, was mentioned as the most likely man for the place, but the appointment was not made because of the sudden clarifying of the situation between the two countries.

With the view to making up for the time lost in the preparation of camp and the bad weather of the early part of this week, the men are being put through strenuous drill periods. The work is confined almost exclusively to the early morning hours between 7 and 10:30, when officers and enlisted men get all possible good from a stated course of study. The non-commissioned officers are formed into companies and given an hour's drilling each day, and the officers, at the close of the field work, go into conference and discuss tactical problems.

Parades have not been held in the afternoons up to the preesnt time, but are to be resumed in the near future. The cavalry outfits were the first to get down to the drilling work. Their horses showed great improvement with the changing of the positions of the corrals and the advent of the rainy season with its cooling effect. Up to date the work has been confined to troop movements only, but as soon as the new horses have been trained better in the cavalry evolutions, the entire squadron, of which Major William B. Pryant is the commander, will take the field for work.

A closer co-operation between the regular army men and the New Jersey organizations is forthcoming, as the officers commanding the various units become better acquainted. Brigadier-General Edwin V. Hine and his staff made a tour of the regular army camp today and visited the quarters of the commanding officers. They were warmly received.

Complimentary things are being said by the regular army men about the performance and equipment of the New Jersey troops. All branches have been praised since their arrival here. The expeditious manner in which the camp wac made and the willingness with which the men have gone into the various duties since their arrival here has been a source of little short of wonderment to the regulars, who see in the morale of the troops here a big advantage for profitable military work.

Captain Lawrence C. Dean, who is acting as ordnance officer for the Fifth regiment, is busy distributing new equipment to the men in the Fifth regiment. His regiment is the first to receive the new supplies and there may be some significance in the fact that the work is being rushed with all speed. There is some talk that the Fifth will be the first from New Jersey to be ordered out for active duty in the event the need of the New Jerseyen is felt. This is not thought likely at the present time, however. Among the supplies being issued are rifles, canteens, cartridge belts, haversacks, axes, shovels, first aid packets, meat cans, bacon cans and knives and forks. There are 1,020 of each. Fifty new rifles have been transferred to the First regiment for the use of the recruits who have come down to Colonel John L. Fraser.

The old equipment is to be gathered together and put in a pile. A surveying officer from the regular army will inspect and make credit to the regiment for the discarded equipment.

The new Fifth regiment exchange, where the men will be able to secure tobacco, candy, cakes, and other such things at a fair price, with the profits turned back to the betterment of the enlisted men, was opened this morning. Lieutenant Lewis D. Walker, of Company K, was detailed to manage the canteen and the two color sergeants, Chester A. Bogert and John P. Hartley were named as assistants.

One vacancy in the officers' roster of Company M, of Rutherford, which has been the storm center since Lieutenant Hild was declared unfit for service at Sea Girt, has been filled. Former Battalion Sergeant Major Douglas O. Meade has been named second lieutenant and the return of Lieutenant Hild will leave oply the captaincy to be filled. It is almost certain that Hild will not be placed in command and other men are said to be under advisement for the captaincy.

The new showers of the Fifth regiment have been completed and the men now have the privilege of daily baths which cleanse them of the dust of the desert country and at the same time invigorates them.

PEACE AMONG NATIONS URGED BY FRIENDS

Text of Declaration Adopted at General Conference Held at Cape May.

The local peace committee from the Religious Society of Friends has requested the publication of the following "Declaration for Constructive Peace" which was adopted at the general conference of Friends held at Cape May, July 6-12:

"The Religious Society of Friends, from the beginning of its history more than two and a half centuries ago, has interpreted Christianity as having a direct and practical bearing upon the relations of nations with each other. It has accepted the teachings of Christ to mean an uncompromising condemnation of war, and a faithful devotion to that divine spirit in man which does away with the causes and fear of war and with the need of all preparations for it.

"In accordance with this interpretation of Christianity, the General Conference of Friends in the United States and Canada, assembled in Cape May, New Jersey, from the 6th to the 13th of July, 1916, issues this solemn warning and fervent appeal to men everywhere, and especially to those who bear the name of Christiains, to renounce now and henceforth all reliance whatsoever upon war as a means of settling disputes or of obtaining so-called justice between nations.

"The Society believes that Christianity asserts the invioability of the conscience of the individual in the sight of God as against the slightest exercise of military despotism. The conference therefore appeals to the citizens of every State in our Union and in the Dominion of Canada to refrain from constraining the consciences and conscripting the bodies and minds of men or children by imposing upon them compulsory military training. That the danger of this aspect of militarism is a real and imminent one in our own Republic is proved by the fact that compulsory military training in the schools has been enacted in the State of New York and is urgently advocated in several other American Commonwealths.

"The Society believes that Christianity inculcates the right and duty of citizens in a democracy to do their utmost to banish public ills and prevent public wrongs. The conference therefore appeals to all citizens of our Republic to prevent the enactment of any censorship of the press or any limitation upon freedom of speech in the interests of alleged military efficiency.

"The Society believes that Christianity proclams the duty of men in all nations to obey the divine injunction to establish, by peaceful and righteous means alone, the kingdom of peace and brotherhood, which is the true kingdom of God, on earth. The Conference therefore appeals to men everywhere to strive whole-heartedly for the establishment of genuine international peace and justice by means of that international judicial system which was outlined in 1693 by William Penn, which has been resorted to repeatedly and successfully since the Hague Conferences adopted it, and which is justified by reason, by successful practice, by the life and teachings of the Prince of Peace and by the voice of God in every human heart.

"Finally, as a practical means of realizing the above principles, the Conference solemnly appeals to all legislators to endeavor, in singleness of purpose and in purity of heart, to learn and to obey the will of God in their action on military proposals and on the constructive peace program of our time; and it fervently appeals to all voters to seek and to follow the Divine guidance in casting their ballots for candidates into whose hands will be committed the decision for pagan militarism or for Christian democracy, within the nations, and for suspicion and hatred, war and anarchy, or for friendship and brotherhood, peace and justice among the nations."

Today William Fox presents his most famous star, Theda Bara, in a modernized American version of "East Lynne," and he has given the old favorite in book form and the speaking stage a picturization worthy of its reputation. The story is developed with great wealth of picture detail, so that those who have not read the book—not many, to be sure—will get a comprehensive idea of "East Lynne." Miss Bara takes advantage of her opportunities in an emotional role that might afford a temptation to overact, and gives a dignified conception of a woman whose misstep is due less to an inherent tendency to wrongdoing than an outraged feeling of neglect. Miss Bara gains sympathy for the misguided Lady Isabel in the scenes where the jealous wife tries ao maintain her faith in her husband regardless of the insinuations of Captain Levison, in the tender leavetaking of her children the night of the flight with Levison, and the maternal yearnings that prompt the repentant woman to disguise herself and enter the household as a nurse to be near her little ones. In addition today Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, two of the cleverest comedians appearing on the screen, are seen in a laugh provoking comedy entitled "Some College Career," the latest Animated Weekly is shown, and Dorothy Phillips is starred in a dramatic offering entitled "Any Youth."

On Thursday, Thomas H. Ince offers his latest Triangle play, entitled "The Dividend," co-starring William H. Thompson, the veteran Broadway star and Charles Ray, the youthful Triangle favorite. "The Dividend" is a picture that will appeal to most parents and shows with telling effect and truthful logic, how some boys go wrong on account of neglect by their mothers and fathers. Beside other features the latest Keystone comedy will be shown tomorrow, while on Friday, by special arrangement, Norma Talmadge will be seen in "Going Straight," a thrilling Triangle Crook drama, with a new twist and a startling climax.

His Wife Made a Great Fuss Over Him.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Old Sultan Saved The Baby.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

SOON as daddy sat down in his big chair the children asked for their story. "Once upon a time," he began, "a shepherd had a faithful dog called Sultan. The dog was so old he had lost his teeth, and the shepherd decided to get rid of him because he was no longer any help. 'He has served us faithfully,' said the shepherd's wife; 'let him live out his life here on the farm.' 'Thieves no longer fear him, and he no longer earns his living. Tomorrow shall be his last day,' answered the shepherd.

"Now, poor Sultan heard what they said. He was frightened to think tomorrow was his last, so he went to his friend, a wolf that lived in the woods near by, and asked how he might escape a hard fate on the next day.

"'Take my advice,' said the wolf. 'Daily your master and his wife go to work in the fields. They take their baby with them and lay it down in the shade behind the hedge while they work. Now, you lie close beside the child and pretend to be watching it. I will come out of the woods and run off with it. As fast as you can you must run after me. I will drop the baby, and you must carry it back. Then they will say that you saved their child's life and will take good care of you as long as you live.'

"Old Sultan liked this plan. The wolf ran away with the baby, the parents screamed, and Sultan carried the child back to his master and mistress. Then the shepherd patted him on the head, and his wife made a great fuss over the dog."

"What a clever wolf!" said Evelyn.

"'See!' they cried. 'We thought old Sultan was all played out and no longer able to be of any help to us. But while we worked in the field a wolf ran off with our dear baby, and if it had not been for our faithful dog we should now be childless. It is God's mercy that he was in the field with us.'

"'Wife,' said the shepherd, 'old Sultan has done us the greatest service. Therefore he shall live. You were right yesterday. We will always take good care of him and give him all he wants to eat as long as he lives. Wife, go home with him and the baby and give him a good dinner. Let him have my old cushion to sleep on and see that no one does him any harm.'

"So with her baby in her arms the shepherd's wife went home, and from that time on old Sultan had everything he could wish for," daddy finished the bedtime story.

"Thank you, daddy!" cried the children.

And daddy waved good night.

Household Hints..

GRAPES.

To Keep Grapes Over Winter—Gather the grapes on a dry day, when not dead ripe, put them in glass jars and sprinkle round each cluster dry bran, so that they will not touch each other. Have a thick layer of bran on top and seal tightly to exclude the air perfectly. Keep the jar in a box of dry sand, in a cool place.

Spiced Grapes—For ten pounds of grapes take six pounds light brown sugar, one quart vinegar, two tablespoons each allspice, cinnamon and pepper, and one tablespoon each cloves and salt. Boil skins thirty minutes, then add pulp and boil half an hour.

Grape Dessert—Put grape pulp, prepared as for grape pie, into sherbet glases. Chill through. Pile whipped cream, likewise chilled through, on top and serve.

Grape Conserve—Two and one-half pounds grapes, one and one-half pounds white sugar, one pound seeded raisins, one-quarter pound English walnut meats, cut fine. Separate pulp from skins, cook pulp and run through grape sieve to remove seeds. Then add pulp to skins. Add sugar and boil slowly for twenty minutes, stirring often, then add raisins and one orange, sliced fine, rind and all. Cook fifteen minutes longer, then add nut meats.

Grape Parfait—Boil one cup granulated sugar with one-third cup water until it threads. Beat the whites of two eggs and pour the syrup on them slowly, beating all the time, until cold. In the meantime, have ready a cupful of cream, whipped, and whipped with half a cupful of grape pulp, well sweetened, and the juice of a lemon. Fold the two mixtures together and freeze.

Grape Juice—This retains so much of the flavor of the grape, and can be made into many delicious beverages and desserts for winter. It is well made by the following recipe: Heat very ripe grapes in a crock in the oven or in a double boiler or fireless cooker. When the skins are tender drain in a jelly bag. Heat the resulting juice, add sugar, bring to the boiling point and pour into sterilized jars or bottles. If you use bottles, sterilize the corks and after they are in the bottles cover with sealing wax. Use either half as much or a quarter as much sugar as grape juice. The amount added must depend on your taste, but remember that it is an easy matter to add more sugar to the grape juice, but it is impossible to take away from it later on. If you desire a clear grape juice, let the bag drip without squeezing. A more economical method is to squeeze the bag. The resulting grape juice will be a little cloudy, but its flavor will be quite as good.

CANNING AND PRESERVING

Plum Butter—To every six pounds plums allow four pounds granulated sugar and one pint water. Cook until stones rise to top, then skim off stones. Add two tablespoons each of cloves and cinnamon and cook down to a thick jam-like consistency. Put in jars. Be careful it does not burn while cooking down.

Grape Conserve—Three pints ripe grape pulp, heated and put through colander. Add one pound seeded raisins, one pound walnut meats, three pounds sugar and cook until thick. Put in jelly glasses.

THE TABLE

Creole Steak—One flank steak, 1½ cups chili sauce, one cup rice. Cut steak in medium pieces, brown in butter, season well. Wash and cook rice in five cups boiling, salted water until tender. Place steak in casserole, cover with chili sauce, then the layer of rice. Cover with boiling water and bake in medium oven thirty minutes. This, with baked potatoes, makes a fine meal.

Salads From Leftovers—One cold fried egg, a few cold potatoes chopped fine, one Spanish onion, a few lettuce leaves, vinegar, salt, pepper to taste.

A piece of cold steak, a few cold potatoes, two onions chopped fine, salt, pepper and vinegar. Use gravy left from dinner made after the steak for dressing.

Baked mackerel—Put salt mackerel in bakedish, "after being soaked;" sprinkle with pepper and chopped parsley, cover with fried bread crumbs and moisten with cream. Bake until brown on top. Serve hot with creamed potatoes.

Lemon Sponge Pie—One lemon (rind and juice), one cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, two eggs (whites beaten and added last), two tablespoons flour, one cup milk. Bake with rich under crust.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Was There a Hint for Ethel in Margie's Story?

"I've such a joke on Jack," said Margie Folsom, as they sat around the Gordon's blazing hearth. "It is too good to keep."

"Let's have it," sang out Ralph.

"If this is to be an experience meeting I will have my inning," challenged Jack.

"No interruptions, my man; Mrs. Folsom has the floor." Ralph grinned at his guest.

"I have always done Jack's packing," began Margie, "but it was getting to be a burden, as Jack has so many business trips to take, so I added a codicil to the New Year resolutions, announcing that Jack was to do his own packing in the future."

"The thing was not in the nature passed by the advisory board," interpolated Jack.

"Mrs. Folsom has the floor," Ralph put in, acting as moderator.

"As I was saying when I was so rudely interrupted," Margie smiled mischievously at her husband, "I had resigned sine die from the supervision of packing. When Jack was called to New York he valiantly attacked the job of getting ready for departure. 'Don't forget your dress suit; there may be a banquet that you cannot dodge,' I thoughtfully suggested.

"'Who's doing this packing, I should like to know,' was the ungrateful answer. So I naturally retired into my shell and left the young man to his fate. Things gradually got in or near the suit case. His train was to go at eight o'clock, and we had our supper promptly at half-past six. After supper a friend dropped in to talk business and offered to go to the train with him. It takes three-quarters of an hour to get to the station from our house, and about that time Jack began to realize that he was not ready to go. He excused himself to do the last necessary things and then the fun began."

"Well, you see——" began Jack in extenuation of his shortcomings, but Ralph raised his hand for silence and Margie continued.

"'I left my brush and comb on the dresser while I went to the door when Thompson called. Who has taken it away?' he called in great excitement. Like a dutiful wife I went to fill in the breach. We looked everywhere for the things that he insisted he had together. He clawed everything out of his suit case to make sure he had not packed them. I kept finding scattered belongings that I knew he would need and put them in the yawning suit case, but the comb and brush were not to be found. Mr. Thompson began to call in great excitement that he would miss his train if Jack did not come at once. I flew to the rescue with my comb and brush and he snapped the suit case shut; gave me a peck of a good-by kiss and tore down the stairs. I gave a sigh of relief and sat down to get my breath when I saw his pumps on the floor by the dresser. Of course, a dress suit was useless without those. So I grabbed the pumps to wrap them up, and in one of them was the missing comb and brush; in the other his pipe and a wad of handkerchiefs. I tore down the stairs and wrapped the things as I ran and managed to catch the men where they were waiting for a car."

"The evidence proves that Jack is a howling success as a packer," laughed Jack's sister. "He must take after father. Mother tells of a time when he was left alone to pack his trunk. She came home and found him in the trunk walking around in his stocking feet trying to compress the mass of shoes, collars, ties and articles of clothing so he could get the lid shut. Just then the expressman came and the thing was carried out as it was. He was not out of sight when father found he had packed every coat he owned and he had to chase the express wagon down the street in his shirt-sleeves; open the trunk and fish out a coat from the jumble. He was quite indignant that mother was in convulsions of laughter over his predicament."

"Oh, men are helpless creatures when deprived of the help of their women folks," said Jack, joining in the laugh at his own expense.

"I do not mean to make my husband dependent upon me," remarked Ethel. Margie and her sister-in-law exchange glances.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

"There is no physician who will speak a friendly word for alcoholic liquor, either to be used as a medical substance or as a beverage, and scientific men now are unanimous in the opinion that it is harmful to the human body," asserted Dr. Frederick R. Green, secretary of the Council on Health and Public Instruction of the American Medical Association, at its recent convention at Detroit, Michigan. A portion of Dr. Green's address as reported in the Detroit Times, is as follows:

"At one time, within the past ten or twelve years, there was a belief that alcoholic liquor, taken in small quantities, was remedial in some cases, or at least was not harmful. This opinion has been changed, and, today booze is recognized generally throughout the medical profession, not only as not being a remedy, but as being a poisoner of the system, a cell destroyer, and a deterent to efficiency.

"This realization that 'the flowing bowl' and its cheery effects produce results not so cheerful in the long run has done much to advance the prohibition idea. Also it has given impetus to the widespread 'efficiency' efforts of great corporations, railroads, manufacturers and other employers who have come to a realization of the fact that liquor interferes with the action of the brain, nerve and muscle.

"It is largely because of this new prevalent knowledge of the evil of liquor that great railroads refuse to accept drinkers, even those who imbibe moderately, as responsible men in whose charge they may place the lives of passengers and the handling of their valuable freight and rolling stock."

The Toronto Academy of Medicine in a recent meeting scored alcohol as a deadly drug. "The public should learn from us that there is mighty little, if any, place for alcohol in medicine," said Lieutenant-Colonel J. W. S. McCullough, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health. "They should learn that alcohol is a poison in the same class with opium, cocaine and other deadly drugs, and that the drunkard is no more a criminal than the morphine user."

At the same meeting Dr. A. McPhedran made the statement that alcohol is now rarely used by physicians as a medicine and that its moderate use as a beverage should be discouraged. Dr. J. T. Gilmore, superintendent of the Ontario Reformatory, names alcohol as the most potent factor in the production of crime, declaring that he had never known of a case of wife-murder not committed under the influence of liquor.

Statistics prepared by either the "wets" or the "drys" are apt to be viewed with suspicion because both sides are biased, says Arthur Hunter, of the New York Life Insurance Company. But statistics put out by life insurance companies are known to be absolutely without bias and the public has confidence in them. Mr. Hunter cites the experience of seven American companies and one Canadian company to show that mortality is from ten to fifty per cent. lower among abstainers than among non-abstainers. He shows further that mortality among total abstainers is markedly lower than among "temperate" drinkers, and very much lower than among "moderate" drinkers. The mortality among those who at the date of application for insurance took two glasses of whisky a day, but did not drink to excess, is eighty per cent. in excess of the normal. There is an extra mortality of forty per cent. among the policy-holders who drank to excess at least five years prior to date of application for insurance, but had been very temperate for five years before acceptance.

Federal officers who have been quietly investigating in West Virginia say that there is in that State a marked reduction in the use of habit-forming drugs—cocaine, opium, heroin and the like. They declare that West Virginia—a prohibition State—is living up to the anti-drug law more rigidly than any other State in the Union. How is that for a reply to the contention of the "wets" that State-wide prohibition invariably increases the use of habit-forming drugs?

Sixty ministers of the gospel, delegates to the State Sunday school convention recently had the unique experience of being entertained in the Ramsey county jail at Devils Lake, North Dakota. So well enforced is the prohibition law in North Dakota, that it is no uncommon thing to find the jails unoccupied. It occurred to the Commercial Club of that city when trying vainly to find enough rooms for the visiting delegates that it might utilize the empty jail for that purpose, and according to the Minnewaukon Siftings of June 15, "the corridors, cages, dungeon and all other available space of the county jail was turned over to men of the cloth." "We wanted to impress these visitors that Devils Lake is about the best place they ever struck," declared the secretary of the Commercial Club. "Few cities in the Northwest have an elegant $60,000 county jail, without a person in it."

The sending to or use of liquor in the army camps of the National Guard will be absolutely forbidden, according to a statement by Adjutant-General McCain. This will apply to all officers and men who may be called into service in Mexico at this time.

When General McCain was asked about this matter, he said, "No, I cannot at this instant cite to you the particular section of the regulations under which the use of liquors in army camps is forbidden, but I assure you that members of the National Guard who may be sworn into the Federal service will not be permitted to use liquors, neither will liquors be permitted to be sent into army camps."

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

ROYALS AND ABSTAINERS.

If Pete Simmons' plan works out, there will be a series of baseball games between the Tabs and the Royals. If Jim Scott, manager of the Fourth street team, is at all anxious to book some capable opposition he will listen attentively to the request that Pete has made. A set of games between the colored players and the Teetotalers would attract considerable attention and would insure the managers of both teams large and enthusiastic crowds. There is every reason why the Royals should be permitted to meet the Tabs and we firmly believe that Manager Jim Scott will see to it that Pete Simmons' challenge receives attention. It is said that Pete is anxious to book the Dunellen team for a Sunday set. Tommy Apgar's boys and the Royal men should be permitted to get together. If the Royals fail to trim the two teams with which they are now angling for games—and trim them by means of an entirely local team—what's the use of allowing them to meet the Netherwood club? That they will earn the right to encounter the Elm End clan seems to be the belief of the average fan. At any rate, let us see a battle between the Royals and either the Tabs or Dunellen.

JIMMY MONTROSS IN THE RANKS.

It was with surprise and astonishment that we learned of Jimmy Montross' resignation from the ranks of umpires in the City League. And it was with more than surprise that we learned of his intention to return to active service as a member of the Hope Chapel team. Jimmy will be of great service to the Hopes, as he is not only an experienced player but is one who has seen service on the mound. Whether he will be used in that capacity by the manager of the Hopes we do not know. But it is safe to say that Jimmy, who has played baseball for many a year, will be just as successful with his new boss as he was with the many others that he has had.

MARTY O'LOUGHLIN'S SHOWING.

Marty O'Loughlin made a fine showing in the golf tourney held under the auspices of the Newspaper Club at Garden City, Long Island, yesterday. He, coupled with a golfer named Haines, covered the course in almost as few strokes as did the winners, Roger Taft and Louis Vellier. Marty is "there" when it comes to wandering over the links. Golf enthusiasts and players of other cities realize that the local golfer is one of the best there is. We read a lot of Jack Jolly, Pat Doyle and the rest of the "well-known" professionals, but the newspapers make no mention of the prowess or even existence of the local men until he shows them what he can do. Then they shower the praise upon him, hailing him as a "find," failing, all the while, to realize that the ability to do well is just an every day occurrence with him. The more matches Marty wins, the more publicity for Plainfield. If the Plainfield Country Club professional continues his good work, perhaps some of the New York sport writers and golf enthusiasts will come to the conclusion that we Plainfielders have a reason for calling this the Queen City.

PLAINFIELD KENNEL CLUB SHOW.

In a few months the Kennel Club will hold an open show of the best dogs in this country. The show will be held at the Horse Show Grounds and will be equal to any ever given in the East. Coming, as it does, in the wake of several other shows in this section of the United States, the local exhibition should succeed in obtaining the entries of the best dogs in the country. The Hudson Kennel Club holds its show at Union Hill next week and it is expected that many of the dogs on exhibition at that event will be entered in the one to be held here. The fact that this city is to have a Kennel Club Show demonstrates once more that we have "everything in Plainfield."

THAT ATHLETIC MEET.

Now that we have arrived at a discussion of what there is of merit in Plainfield, we ought to stop for a moment and discuss what local sport promoters lack. They lack either funds or ambition enough to hold a monster athletic carnival at Parker Field either on Labor Day or on some Saturday in August. Before we had Parker Field we were continually making excuses. Now that we have the best athletic field in the State, we should make use of it. Of what benefit a meet of this nature would be to Plainfield can be gleaned from the fact that New Brunswick holds athletic carnivals whenever the opportunity offers. As far as we can judge, the holding of such events has not ruined that city financially. In fact, we think that the contrary is the case.

"MET" MEET CHANGED.

New York's somewhat cool reception of the award of the metropolitan championships to that city August 26 resulted last night in the transfer of the meet to Brooklyn on that same date. A New York newspaper is to conduct the meet and admit the public free of charge. This is a victory straightening out of the situation.

PLENTY OF HOPE.

There is plenty of hope for the Yankees when they can split both sections of a double-header from Detroit without Oldring, Baker and Gilhooley. Baumann played right field. Mullen substituted for Pipp at first in the first game and then played for Gedeon at second in the second game. Boone was at third for Baker. The Yanks won, 2—0 and 3—2. As we remarked before, there is hope.

Above is a picture of the three "Rays." They are the mainstays of the Yankee pitching staff, although up until very recently they have done nothing startling.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Sam Semer, the only member of the Plainfield A. C. who has not seen service in the City League, swatted out two hits in a contest between his team and that of the Johns-Manville plant at Manville, Sunday. Sam also contributed to the local victory by playing a careful game in the field. He took good care of the keystone sack and allowed nothing that resembled a batted ball to pass him. Just at present Samuel has been elevated to the dignity of manager of the Plainfield team. He is the right man for the job and wi[illegible]

We were glad to [illegible] McLaughlin uncor[illegible] traction, while Ne[illegible] papers credit "Ja[illegible] with winning over the "[illegible] derful pitching duel." We are inclined to believe that honors were about even. Warry opened up rather poorly and allowed the Knights of St. Peter to ensnare four runs. But after the initial frame the former Pittsburgh hurler was invincible, allowing no scoring and permitting but three hits. Deinzer allowed six hits, all told, but evidently permitted no bunching of bingles.

[illegible] is gradually becoming well known and popular in local baseball circles. Cliff has been a pitcher of note for some time and has always been popular, not only with the fans, but also with the managers of the many teams with which he has performed. Now comes another Randolph. We do not think that he is related to Cliff, although he, too, has hurling aspirations. This young man has been released by the Farmers and has been signed up by the Dunellen aggregation. His batting ability has, of late, been noticeably valuable.

Tommy Apgar, it is reported, has arranged two more games with the Knights of St. Peter.

Herr Wahl, one of the prominent citizens of Bound Brook, has been lending a helping hand to the Tabs of late. The reason why Wahl is a member of the Fourth street aggregation is this. The heads of the Tab baseball machine decided that the club needed a little hitting strength. Wahl had signified his intention of joining the Tabs some time before the realization that the club needed a heavy hitter came to the Abstainer moguls. He was, accordingly, signed up and has proved time and again that those who signed him used their discretion.

Speaking of scorers, always saddens our heart. Some of the young men who attempt to keep score these days make a terrible mistake. There are several good scorers in this vicinity at the present time. We could name four, right now, but what's the use of making a good thing public property. We suppose there will be good scorers as long as the world goes 'round.

Smith or Teeling—be he either or both—is "some" catcher. Aggressive as the best major leaguer, he can handle the slants of any pitcher. Fearing none, he has successfully caught them all. With the stick he is no wonder, but he can be depended upon to help out in time of need. Smith is the name he assumes while playing in the City League, but, we understand, that his correct name is Teeling and that he hails from Dunellen.

John Newell, it appears, is following in his brother's footsteps. If John continues to hurl one and two-hit games, he'll crowd the war news off the front page. Likewise, if "Barney" Sacher keeps seeking publicity, we'll have to cease publishing advertisements and convert the entire "classified ad" page into a publicity department.

BASEBALL

Struggling along with a tail-end outfit, Jacobson, the Rochester gardener, is showing the way in International League batting.

The difference between a German submarine and the Athletics is that the submarine comes up from the bottom occasonally.

Manager Jones, of the Browns, tells us that the Red Sox will not repeat this year, but fails to state in which direction the Browns are headed.

Last in team batting and without a sigle pastimer on speaking terms a single pastimer on speaking terms certainly makes a grand fight for the National League flag.

Being shifted by the Yankees from the infield to the outfield seems to have put kinks in Paddy Bauman's batting average.

Lee Fohl caught a few games for the Pirates in 1902, and for the Reds in 1903. Perhaps this accounts for the reference to the Indians' pilot as a "minor league" manager.

Christy Mathewson's "fadeaway" may be less effective than of yore, but the Giants' fadeaway percentage is still on the job.

Making a home run before the King of England was an easy trick in comparison with delivering the wallop before a yardful of bugs. Ask Tom Daly. He knows.

The veteran heaver Stony McGlynn is still in the game and is now pitching for the Manitowoc (Wis.) team. Stoney denies that Coopelstown was the birthplace of baseball. He says he invented the pastime himself, in Pennsylvania.

According to a published box score the line-up of the New London Eastern League team contains such names as M'rhe'd. R'drig'z and Wh'ek'se. Send as many answers as you like.

In Pitcher Carter the Indianapolis American Association team owns something choice in the way of flingers. Still, it should be an easy matter for Carter to handle the pill.

Among the galaxy of stars pastiming with the White Sox none is performing more brilliantly that Mr. "Happy" Felsch, formerly of Milwaukee, but now of Chicago.

Manager McGraw of the Giants now admits that the Robins are a dangerous flock of birds, but adds that the admission is made up in the hope that it may prove a jinx to the Brooklyn speeders.

All that Ray Caldwell has to do to win is to pitch airtight ball and then bat out a victory himself. The Yanks can't hit for him.

Outfielder Jimmy Kelly, who started the season with Indianapolis and later was sold to Memphis, has now been shipped to the Galveston club. As Mexico is in no mood for pastiming, Jimmy figures he has been sent the limit.

SHAMROCKS DEFEAT HEBREW CONTINGENT

John O'Keefe Permits "Green Boys" But Four Clouts Throughout Game.

The Shamrocks continued their winning streak yesterday at the expense of the Hebrews, who were forced to taste the dregs of a 4 to 1 defeat. The Jewish lads recruited a new pitcher in the person of Cahill, whose name alone would indicate that he should have been playing with his "fellow countrymen."

The battle was exciting up until the fifth frame, when the Green boys annexed two runs. John O'Keefe, who took care of the twirling for the winning aggregation, had the Hebrews at his mercy throughout the entire game and allowed them only four hits. Cahill was almost as effective as his rival and allowed only five clouts. Each team was guilty of six mistakes, Friedman slipping up three times. Bob Clarkson made two errors.

Yesterday's victory brings the total of Shamrock wins up to six, with but one defeat charged up against the outfit.

GARWOOD BATTLES WITH TEETOTALERS

Y. M. C. A. Team Booked to Meet Abstainers on Avon Oval Saturday.

The Tabs will entertain the Garwood Y. M. C. A. at Avon Oval on Sunday. This team is not the same as the one that represented Garwood on Avon Oval last Sunday. According to the press agent of the Tabs, the team carded to meet the Abstainers in the weekly bill this Sunday is one that is much stronger than any Sunday team that has appeared here this season. The club numbers among its players Johnny Gray, the former Scotch Plains baseball player; Fay Washburn, at one time a Central New Jersey leaguer; Mason, and the renowned Brown brothers.

Mickey McFadden, the Bound Brook flinger, will most likely hurl the pill over the pan for the Teetotallers, although Jack Denny may get a chance at the job. Mickey has been doing good work of late and is anxious to get a chance to add to his laurels by defeating the Garwoods.

From unofficial sources it was learned that the Tabs would take on the Royal Giants in the immediate future. The manager of the Royals is Pete Simmons, and he is more than anxious to arrange the game. Of course, if the Royals are to make this match a purely local affair, they must see to it that only players from this vicinity are employed. If the colored fellows and the Tabs get together on the diamond, great excitement will prevail. An attraction of this sort should fill the coffers of the Fourth street organization.

HETTY PHILLIPS IS FOUND DEAD

Life Long Resident Succumbs to Heart Disease While Alone.

LONG IN ILL HEALTH

Had Been Employed as Domestic Recently in Family of Amos Stites—Body Found in Sitting Position, Indicating Sudden Demise.

Hettie Phillips, sixty-two, a life-long resident of this city, was found dead this afternoon by A. S. Stites, in whose home she was employed as a domestic. Mrs. Phillips had been ill for some time, but when Mr. Stites left this morning with his family for an automobile trip, she seemed to be in fair health. The coroner viewed the body this afternoon and attributed death to heart's disease.

She had made her home for the past three and a half years with the Stites family, and this morning when Mr. Stites took his family out she said she preferred to stay at home and prepare dinner. Mr. Stites arrived home shortly before twelve o'clock and went to his apartment for dinner. No one answered his ring and after searching the rooms he found her in the kitchen with a pan of potatoes in her lap. One potato and the peeling knife had fallen to the floor, and Mr. Stites at first thought she was asleep, but as soon as he touched her he found she was dead.

Mrs. Stites immediately called Dr. C. W. Gesswen, the family physician, who said she had not been dead long. When seen this afternoon, Mr. Stites said he thought she passed away shortly before 11:30, as she always peeled potatoes at that time so as to have dinner ready at the noon hour.

At one time Mrs. Phillips was well known and reputed to be wealthy, but in recent years ill health had caused her to live in retirement. At one time she was proprietor of a confectionery store on Front street.

She is survived by several distant relatives living in Plainfield and Woodbridge. The nearest surviving relative is Edward T. Van Winkle, of this city.

H. A. LELAND DIES AT HADDONFIELD

Former Well Known Plainfielder Passes Away After Long Illness.

Henry A. Leland, aged 62 years, a former well known resident of Plainfield, and during the early days a star player on the old Central baseball team, died today at Haddonfield, where he had been for the past month on account of his health.

Mr. Leland was born in Brooklyn, removing here with his parents when a boy. Later he went to Chicago, where for many years he was engaged in the commission business, and about a year ago made his home in Newark, from which place he went to Haddonfield.

There survives a wife, two sisters, Mrs. J. C. Manning, of this city, and Mrs. G. O. Carman, of Brooklyn, and one brother, Elwin R. Leland, of 65 Sandford avenue. The funeral will probably be held at the home of the brother on Saturday or Sunday, the time to be announced later.

WORK STOPPED ON SCHOOL BUILDING

State Commissioner Instructs County Superintendent to Suspend Operations.

Work, for the time being, has stopped on the building of any addition to School No. 1, Scotch Plains, by word received by County Superintendent of Schools A. L. Johnson, from the State Commissioner, and until Commissioner Kendall authorizes the superintendent to go ahead the local Board of Education will be unable to make any bond issue so that work can be started.

Because the question has arisen as to whether or not the recent election at which the money for the addition was voted legal or not, a resident of the township has made a comp[illegible] to the Commissioner and he ha[illegible]opped all work on the new build[illegible] until he has a hearing, when [illegible]vill be definitely decided as to th[illegible]rality of the election. INFANTILE PARALYSIS CASE NEAR STELTON

Health Officer Discovers One-year-old Child Ill at Ferrari Colony.

P. F. Kaine, of South Plainfield, health officer for Piscataway township, reported today that a case of infantile paralysis had been found at the Ferrari Colony, located near Stelton, on the road to New Brunswick. The case is that of a oneyear old child, who, it was learned had been visiting in Brooklyn with its parents and had just returned to the colony. There is every reason to believe that the child contracted the disease in Brooklyn where the disease has been epidemic for several weeks.

Just as soon as the case was discovered the health authorities established a strict quarantine, and the child was completely isolated from everybody else except the immediate members of the family, who will have the care of the victim.

The Ferrarii colony, which has been established near Stelton for several years, is composed of Socialists; the colony is conducted according to their own ideas of government. The settlement in itself is sufficiently isolated to preclude the danger of spreading the dread disease, but the health authorities are not taking any chances and every possible precaution has and will be taken to prevent the development of other cases in the township.

How the child, who is now ill with the disease, and its parents were able to leave Brooklyn, is unexplained, and in some unaccountable way the victim was carried by officials on the lookout at railroad stations and taken to the coloney near Stelton. But so far as known the child has not come in contact with other children.

Y. M. H. A. DISCUSS PLANS FOR BUILDING

Structure to Be Used Solely as Community Centre--Officers Elected for Year.

At the monthly meeting of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, held in the organization's hall, last night, the following officers were re-elected for the coming twelve months President, Samuel Schwartz; vice-president, Morris Abrams; recording secretary, Irving Kuntzman; financial secretary, Abram Schwartz; treasurer, Samuel Krathamer; sergeant-at-arms, Charles Kurtzman.

During the session the building committee made a report and showed that there are a still a number of persons to see in regard to subscriptions for the new Y. M. H. A. building. It is not likely that the structure will be begun before several months as yet.

Although there seemed to be a feeling that this building might be used to foster another synagogue, which would prove a rival to the present religious organizations, President Schwartz stated last night that he gave the deed to the property on which the building is to be erected for the sole purpose that the structure be utilized as a community center for the social and cultural activites of the Hebrews. He also expressed a provision that the Hebrew school, which is a distinct institution, be provided with adequate accommodations for its classes. After a discussion it was finally decided that in order to clear away any misunderstanding, a conference of all the organizations will be held on August 2, at which time a platform will be adopted mutual to all. The campaign committee reported pledges to the amount of $6,000.

A. Schwartz and Irving Kuntzman were appointed delegates to the State convention.

TURNING BARREN LAND INTO VEGETABLE PRODUCING SOIL

Guided by a competent instructor, the hundred and twenty-five or more young people who have plots of ground at the Kenyon Gardens, have turned barren land into luxuriant vegetable producing soil. Each morning the youthful "farmers" go out to their 8x12 lots, water and weed their plants and otherwise superintend the growth of their own vegetables, such as radishes, lettuce, string beans, beets and parsnips.

Miss Knutzen, of Philadelphia, is the instructress in charge of the gardens and the future citizens of Plainfield, under her direction, are gaining valuable ideas in producing as much as possible from a smadd sized plot of ground. The children take care of their gardens in groups of twenty-five each day. Mothers are also admitted to the grounds, where they can watch their boys and girls at their work.

SMITH EXECUTOR OF RUNKLE WILL

Court Ends Long Litigation Over An Estate Valued at $2,000,000.

ACCOUNTING AUG. 16

Contest Was Over Erasure of Name and Executor of the Codicil—Estate Will Now Be Distributed Among Heirs.

Pursuant to a decree of the Court of Errors and Appeals made June 19, holding that William E. R. Smith, of East Orange, should be named as executor of the will of William Runkle, of Orange, brother of H. G. Runkle, of this city, in place of Randoph Rodman, of Orange, whose name was written in the testament and erased, Smith's being penned over it, Judge William P. Martin, of Newark, has signed a formal order in favor of Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith was granted executive powers by Deputy Surrogate Charles F. Kocher.

This action will enable the $2,000,000 estate, which has been undistributed since the death of Mr. Runkle, January 31, 1914, to be disposed of according to the will, the details of which already have been published.

Pending a settlement of the controversy as to whom should be named as executor, the Fidelity Trust Company, of Newark, was appointed by the court to look after the estate. That company will file an accounting August 16, and the case then will be near an end and the beneficiaries, of whom there are several, will receive their legacies.

The Runkle will, which has been before the courts since it was offered for probate early last year, presented for solution several nice legal problems. When the document was brought to the surrogate's office it was noted at once that the first two pages were not written on the same kind of paper as was the remained of the will. Places where the first original two pages had been showed clearly where they had been torn from the brass holding clips.

The most important point, however aside from a change in a number of bequests, was the very evident erasure of the name of Mr. Rodman as executor and the substitution of Mr. Smith's.

Judge Martin held that Mr. Rodman should be confirmed as executor because, as there was a codicil to the will, no proof was adduced to show that Mr. Smith's name was written in before the execution of the latter instrument, which is, in effect, an addition to the will, made after the execution of the original document.

To this Justice Black, writing the opinion for the Court of Errors, did not agree, holding that it was the evident intent of Mr. Runkle to have Mr. Smith as executor, even though the erasure of Mr. Rodman's name was very evident and though there was a question as to the kind of pen and ink used in the latter writing as compared to the older penmanship in the main body of the instrument, which covered twelve pages.

The point on which the case depended was execution of the codicil, and it is well established in law that if the codicil is held to have been properly executed, that republishes, or makes good, the main will, even though changes and erasures have been made in it, provided that it is proved that the codicil was executed after such changes were made.

COURT FINDS FIGHTERS GUILTY, SENTENCE TOMORROW

After the Court had heard all the facts in the case of Jacob Glaser against Isidor Steinman, both of West Third street, City Judge W. G. DeMeza reserved decision this morning until tomorrow. The judge held that both men were guilty of disorderly conduct for engaging in a fight.

The case grew out of an argument last Tuesday when Steinman went to Glaser's home and demanded money he said was due him. Glaser said he was unable to give it to him that day, and words followed that ended in blows being exchanged by both, during which Steinman alleged that Glaser struck him with an iron bar.

CO, L ARRIVES AT STATE CAMP

Princeton Men Will Get Two Days Preliminary Work.

REVIEWED BY THE GOV.

National Guardsmen go to Sea Girt This Year Under Regular Army Controls—Captain Barlow Going to Arizona.

(By Telegraph to the Daily Press.)

Sea Girt, July 20.—Although the official orders for the opening of the encampment of the Second Regiment call for the presence of the men here next Monday, with the privilege of coming in on Saturday without pay, the blast of the bugle was heard here today. Recruited to full peace strength, sixtyfive men, Company D of Princeton, arrived here for two days' work preliminary to the regular encampment. Carrying their full regular army equipment, the men marched from the station this morning, swung past the Governor's cottage, where the Executive unofficially reviewed them, and were soon at work erecting a camp.

The company, which is one of the best in the regiment, is under the command of Captain Charles F. Silvester, of the college town, and his lieutenants are Kenneth I. Hickman, First and David S. Lloyd, Second. The men have come here voluntarily at their own expense for two days' extra training in the 'school of the soldier," and the officers immediately started routine military duty for them.

National guardsmen come into camp under different conditions this year than ever before. The passing of the guard under the provisions of the Chamberlain bill, which went into effect July first, makes the encampment absolutely under regular army control. The only things supplied to the men by the State are their tents, all other equipment being issued by the regular army officials. Captain Stephen H. Barlow, who has been acting as the State property officer at Sea Girt, relinquished his duties to Captain Packer of the regular army, and will leave tomorrow night from Sea Girt. On Monday he will start for Douglas, Arizona, to complete the transfer of New Jersey property to the Federal authorities. He has been continuously at work here since the last troops left for the border, getting all records checked up and in shape, so that there will be little delay when he reaches the front.

HEARING OF WORKMEN'S AID BUREAU IN ELIZABETH

The next hearing of the Workmen's Compensation Aid Bureau will be held in Elizabeth tomorrow, between 10 and 3 o'clock, in the Court House. The establishment of a workmen's compensation aid bureau as an adjunct of the State Department of Labor became a reality June 5. The underlying purpose of the bureau it to aid in the settlement of claims arising under the compensation law, eliminating, so far as possible, the necessity for intervention by the courts and relieving injured workmen from expenditures for counsel fees. It is also the purpose of the bureau to see that proper compensation is paid as provided by law. The work of the bureau is entirely gratuitous.

"It will be the purpose of this bureau to secure as equitable and prompt adjustments of compensation for injury as can possibly be effected, and also to secure these adjustments without taking the matter to court, thus avoiding the inconvenience, expense and delay incident to such actions.

"All the services connected with this bureau will be absolutely without cost to any one concerned, and any information desired will be furnished upon application, either by mail to the office of the State House, Trenton, or upon visiting any of the branch offices upon the days indicated."

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town. Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

ORGANIZE LOCAL OPTION LEAGUE

Citizens of North Plainfield Township Hold An Enthusiastic Meeting.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Dr. Richard Moldenke, In a Letter to Meeting, Advocates Early Settlement of Question—Township is Apportioned Into Districts.

The North Plainfield Township Local Option League was launched last night at a citizens' meeting held in the Watchung Improvement Society's Hall. The township's general interest in the league was manifested by the large attendance of residents. C. C. Wheeler was elected chairman, and John Herman and William Morey, secretary and corresponding secretary, respectively. During the session the township was apportioned into districts under individual workers, and there will be an effort to make every citizen a member of the league.

A committee consisting of C. C. Wheeler, Rev. Mebane Ramsay and William DeLaroche Anderson was appointed to represent the township league in the coming organization meeting of a county league. A meeting of the county representatives will be held in the near future, the date and place to be announced later, and three reperesentatives from every local league will be in attendance as delegates of their respective districts.

In a letter addressed to Mr. Wheeler, Dr. Richard Moldenke, a member of the Somerset County Republican Executive Committee, explained his attitude on the subject of local option. The letter, which was read at the meeting last night, was as follows:

"I regret very much that a visit to Rochester prevents me from attending the meeting tonight as the subject is one of serious moral as well as political importance, and as for the moment I represent the Republican party in the township officiall, I would ask you to kindly place my views before the meeting.

"In the last few years the question of local option has become very prominent. The people as a whole are beginning to take sides very acutely, and as ours is a Republican form of government, in which the will of the majority rules, it would seem just and advisable that the people be given an opportunity to vote on the matter at as early an election as possible.

"I am, therefore, heartily in favor of settling the question of local option at the polls quickly and effectively.

"Whatever my personal belief may be on the subject, this has nothing to do with the public aspect of the matter. The people have the right to settle such matters at the polls, and I will do all I can to help getting a fair election.

"Whether the Republicans of the township will entrust me with membership in the county Republican executive committee this fall or not, the township as assembled tonight may rest assured that I believe in a legal, fair and effective settlement of the question at the polls."

TRAIN VICTIM'S IDENTITY NOT YET ESTABLISHED

Although still in a semi-conscious condition, the youth that was brought to the Muhlenburg Hospital yesterday morning, following an accident on the Lehigh Valley, is showing signs of slight improvement. It was said at the hospital this morning. By his incoherent talking it was gathered that his name was Oscar Olson, of Elizabeth, but when the police of that city were notified last night they were unable to locate such a person.

No trace has yet been found of the boy's companion, who deserted him when he fell from a freight train. The boy received a severe concussion of the brain and numerous lacerations in his fall and was picked up unconscious by trainmen.

DECISION RESERVED.

At the afternoon session of the District court yesterday, Judge Walter L. Hetfield reserved decision in the case of the Plainfield Ice & Supply Company against Frank Stone until August 9. The ice company was suing for the amount of a bill on a contract made on a house that belonged to Andrew Olson, which is located on Park place, but which later became the property of Stone.

GUESTS OF CHIEF DAVIS.

Chief T. O. Doane and Thad. Doane, Jr., were guests of Chief Albert Davis, of the Bayonne Fire Department yesterday afternoon. The latter took his visitors on a tour of the city and showed them many new buildings in the process of construction. He also told them of the commission form of government adopted in Bayonne which is proving so successful.

GERMANS ENGAGE IN TERRIFIC BATTLE WITH BRITISH FORCES BUT ARE STUBBORNLY RESISTED

HAIG'S MEN DISPLAY ABILITY TO RECUPERATE QUICKLY AND ENEMY EXPERIENCE TROUBLE IN HOLDING GAINS FOR SHORT PERIODS.

ATTACKS DIRECTED AT POINTS ALONG FRONT

Germans Heavily Reinforced for Counter Charges—Estimated That 10,000,000 Shells Have Been Fired by Allied Forces Since July 1—Foch's Army Storms Trenches and Constant Shifting of Enemy's Troops is Noted—German Officers Being Concentrated.

London, July 20.—Heavily reinforced the Germans are today facing a British foe in one of the most terrific battles of the war north of the Somme in western France. Success which marked the German's attack driving the British out of Longueval and Delville Woods spurred them on to greater efforts but the British rallied and regained considerable of the lost territory. The German counter attack is their strongest since the allied offensive began July 1. It is estimated that during this time the allied forces have hurled at the German defenses along a 20-mile main front fully 10,000,000 shells.

GERMAN FORCES ATTACKING ON FRONT.

German regiments are attacking on several parts of the narrow front while the British, at other points, are hurling troops, rank on rank, in a melee the like of which desperate combat has not been seen in the west.

According to Sir Douglas Haig his troops have rallied and have succeeded in retaking much of the coveted ground lost yesterday. The German official report claims the recapture of the whole of Delville Wood and of the village of Longueval, but the report was filed earlier than General Haig's latest bulletin.

BRITISH POUNDED HARD BUT COME BACK.

The tide sways in favor of the British along the two miles from Bazentin to Longueval but the fury of the battle goes on unabated. Pounding hard after their preparatory attack with thousands of asphyxiating and tear producing shells, the German left wing forced the British to yield some ground in the Delville Wood and in the northern outskirts of Longueval. Haig's troops, however, struck back and succeeded in wresting from the enemy much of this territory.

The German system of defense requires heavy counter attacks. Driven back from their first and second lines and with their backs to the third line defending the approaches to the Albert Plateau the time has come to make the greatest effort to block the road to Bapaume. Heavy artillery duels continue before Verdun and it is believed the Crown Prince is ready for another desperate drive there to brace the German army and placate the German people.

Storm German Trenches.

Several German trenches have been stormed by Foch's troops south of the Somme, but bad weather still prevents much activity on the French front. It appears that there is a constant shifting of the German troops between the western and eastern fronts. German officers are being recalled from Bulgaria and Turkey to serve on these fronts.

French Resume Offensive.

Paris, July 20.—Having successfully withstood a number of powerful German attacks, the French resumed the offensive late yesterday and the communique issued by the French War Office today stated that they had been very successful. North of Peronne, Somme river front, the French captured a trench and 460 German prisoners.

The captured position was between Combles and Clery. First line positions on the front of Barleux and Soyecourt were also taken. Combles is about 6½ miles north of Peronne and is scarcely less important than Peronne itself.

Attacks Reported Checked.

Vienna, July 20.—(Via Berlin Wireless).—The repulse of both Russian and Italian attacks was announced by the Austrian War Office today.

Mail Confiscated.

Berlin, July 20.—(Wireless).—Despatches from Amsterdam state that the British sea forces confiscated all the first-class mail of the Dutch liner Noordam, while en route to New York.

REDUCED TELEGRAPH RATE FOR SOLDIERS' BENEFIT

The Western Union Telegraph Company today furnished the following instructions to its office in this city:

"The Western Union Telegraph Company announces that until further notice it will take telegraphic transfers of money to members of the National Guard who have been mustered into he Federal service on the Mexican border, at one-half the usual charges for such service.

"It is understood that in their hurried departure many of the guardsmen failed to reckon on the high cost at the border of some of the conveniences and comforts which are not included in the provision 'Uncle Sam' makes for his soldiers, and their relatives and friends will be interested to hear of this arrangement whereby much appreciated funds can be transferred by telegraph at low cost. The plan is more attractive from the fact that messages of affection, cheer, etc., may be incorporated in the transfers at a small added charge for the extra words involved."

DAY NURSERY CLOSED FOR INDEFINITE PERIOD

The City Union of King's Daughters announce that the Day Nursery will be closed for an indefinite period, owing to the infantile paralysis epidemic. Although there has been but one case in this city, the Board of Health has issued orders to prac-children to close up.

Last month the Day Nursery registered 877 children and because of this order the board of trustees and the president of the King's Daughters greatly regret the sudden added burden to the working mothers who left their children at the institution. The Nursery will be opened as soon as the present ban is lifted.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY AS RESULT OF CUTTING AFFRAY

Martin Cass, of 25 Somerset street, when arraigned before City Judge William G. DeMeza in City Court this morning on a charge of assault, was held under $300 bail to await the action of the grand jury. The case against Thomas Harvey, of 510 Madison avenue, was dismissed.

Cass was arrested Tuesday night on Madison avenue, near Front street, by Patrolman Muir, and Special Officers Russ and Duffy, after a fight in which Cass had used a penknife and cut Harvey, and Myles Condon and Robert Laing. The whole affair was the result of an argument, when Laing asked Cass if he was going to "do him." The two were on their way to the Madison avenue bridge, when a number of others came up and a general fight started.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FOR DUNELLEN AUTO PARTY

While attempting to cut across in front of a trolley car on the Raritan river road between Bound Brook and New Brunswick, Sunday night, Albert Ritterbusch and Miss Mabel Bennett, of Dunellen, who were out for an automobile ride, had a miraculous escape from serious if not fatal injury. The wheels of the auto caught in the fender of the trolley and the machine was carried a considerable distance before the motorman stopped his car. Several times the machine almost upset threatening to throw the occupants out.

The only injury was that sustained by Mr. Ritterbusch, who was driving the car. This was a slight cut just above the eye. The couple was able to return in the automobile. An examination showed that it was but slightly damaged.

KEEPING TABS ON THE LOCAL SOLDIER BOYS ALONG THE BORDER AND ELSEWHERE

Four local young men, Frank Osmun, George Howell, Frederick Bowe and James B. Gordon, will leave Saturday with Company K for the ten days' annual encampment at Sea Girt. Osmun will go as bugler and Howell as sergeant. The camping trip will probably be the best the boys will get, as it does not seem probable that they will be called to the border.

The last word received from Frank Carter, of North avenue, who is with the New York Signal Corps on the Texas border, says he is doing well. When the train carrying the boys went past the local station Carter leaned so far out the window to wave that his hat blew off and in his last letter he asked that it be sent to him.

Maurice Hall writes home that the boys in the Seventh regiment, N. Y. N. G., are getting along fine, even if they do have to get up at 5 o'clock. New York's "silk stocking" regiment seems to be buckling down in great shape and Hall is right in with the rest digging ditches or doing whatever else comes his way.

The Fourth regiment, according to letters received here from the Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, but now chaplain of the Fourth, is adapting itself to the Mexican climate admirably. Mr. Hare is kept pretty busy, for he has to look after the religious welfare of about 1,000 men. In a recent letter he says that the services, which are held in the open, are frequently broken up by severe storms, but the men are so eager for them as being a break in the camp monotony, that they are held on the following day. There does not appear to be, according to Mr. Hare, a great deal of likelihood of the guardsmen going over the border, although he expects they will be in camp several months.

BOROUGH COLLECTOR ADDS ONE MORE YEAR TO HIS RECORD

With the publishing today of the 1915 delinquent tax report, Borough Collector Charles Sheelen makes himself practically sure of adding another year to his clean record of seventeen years. There are only four pieces of property advertised this year, and if they are not sold at the coming sale they will be added in by the borough.

Mr. Sheelen last May completed his seventeenth year as borough collector and for every one of these years has a clean record. The fact has now become so widely known over the State that he daily receives letters from various collectors asking how he managed to keep his record.

SCOUTS ALL WELL.

The local Boy Scouts, who are on their annual camping trip for two weeks near Lake Hopatcong, are in excellent health and having a great time, according to postals and letters written home. Fishing, swimming and hikes fill up the time and there are also three meals a day to be eaten. All the boys who did not know how to swim before are now learning. The youngsters complete their first week tomorrow and intend to stay until the following Friday.

LOCAL ITALIAN PLANNING FOR LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

The local Italian societies are already starting to make plans for the observance of one of their festivals that falls on Labor Day. Committees are now working on arrangements for the day's programs, including sports during the day and fireworks at night. A site has not yet been chosen, but it will probably be in the center of the town.

OLD FANWOOD CLUBHOUSE MAY BE RESTORED BY OWNER

If the present plans of Peter Ritter, of South avenue, materialize Fanwood may again have a club such as it had a decade ago. Some eight years ago Mr. Ritter purchased the building on South avenue that housed the Fanwood Social Club and remodeled it into a dwelling. Now he is seriously thinking of restoring the structure to its original condition.

At the time the club was flourishing it included as members nearly every local man. An auditorium seating three or four hundred people, bowling alleys, pool tables and other features tended to make it a center of activity. It was on the bowling alleys that Augustus Sheelen bowled 298, a freat that gained notice from the Newark and New York papers.

"NIB" HAND, LOCAL FANS' IDOL, NOW A MANAGER

Frank Hand, the pride of the local baseball fans, is now a full-fledged manager. Several days ago he took hold of the Washington team of the Schwab Steel League and has already started the outfit on a winning streak. The league plays only week-end ball, and besides managing the team, Hand also does the catching.

There is no doubt but that "Nib" will make good. He played with the New York team of the defunct United States League when a mere youngster, was the mainstay of the Perth Amboy Pacers in the old Atlantic League and has had tempting offers from Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Americans. Frank, however, preferred week-end ball to major league playing.

SPRINGFIELD ROAD ONE OF BEST IN STATE WHEN DONE

When the Peekskill contractors complete the rebuilding of Springfield road from Springfield to Scotch Plains in another month it will be one of the best in the State, barring none. The contractors have now seemed to overcome labor and transportation difficulties and are progressing at a rapid rate, on an average of a carload of cement being used daily.

The cement is being laid on top of a foundation of stone and dirt from six to eight inches deep and is eighteen feet wide. Stone will be put on either side of the cement, making the road passable from gutter to gutter. Turns and grades have been eliminated in numerous cases and the road will be a straight-away for between four and five miles when completed. Although it is finished as far as the Ackerman estate, the road is closed to traffic.

TOWN TOPICS

And still there is no action in connection with the "community picnic." Last year it was held on August 11, and this year it was to be held on the same date, but here it is only three weeks away from that time and nothing has been done toward making plans for it. There seems to be no chance of the Rev. J. Madison Hare being home in time to take charge and as no one else seems willing to start things it looks as if there were to be no picnic this year.

Although the school election for the voting on an eight-room addition was held and a number of weeks have elapsed, the two local school factions do not seem to be any nearer a solution of the question than they were when they started. If the thing is not settled definitely very soon it means that the State authorities will not allow the schools to reopen because there will not be adequate means of handling the children.

The local Italians are already starting plans for their annual religious observance on Labor Day, and as in other years are asking local merchants and the people to contribute toward the money expended for fireworks. The display is usually one of the best ever seen in this section and attracts large numbers, not only Italians, but others, and if they would help the affair along by contributing they would be able to see a better celebration.

It now looks as if all danger of infantile paralysis getting in the borough or township is over. The local Boards of Health are to be commended for their prompt measures that practically prevented all possibility of the disease getting here.

Although the "Big 8" excursion was postponed from its original date, July 18, there is no reason why it should not be held later in the season. If it is not it will be the first time in thirty-two years, and besides the large majority of the people that go on it will not see the seashore this summer if it is not held, because they are unable to go down and spend several days or weeks. It would be an excellent move if the local Sunday school officials got together and arranged another date for some time in August.

H. W. Winters, formerly of this place, called on friends here yesterday.

Watching.

A surprise party was tendered to John Hermann last evening by a number of his friends, in honor of his nineteenth birthday anniversary. The evening was spent in playing games, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were the Misses Helen Hughes, Elsie Schmidt, Dorothy Hermann, Carol Hughes, Agnes Mantz, Helen Schmidt, Lucy Hughes and Adele Hermann and the Messrs. Douglas N. Demler, Robert Young Frank Fetherston, Mebane Ramsay and J. LeRoy Hermann.

What might have been a serious accident occurred yesterday when a horse belonging to a local hackman shied at a stone-cart standing near the Wilson stone-crusher. The horse jumped and crashed into John Mobus' wood-wagon, breaking loose from the carriage and running away. The two other occupants of the carriage, beside the driver, were women, and luckily escaped being injured.

Miss Agnes W. Mantz has been visiting in New York.

Miss Winnifred Eaton, who has been spending several weeks at Natick, Mass., has returned.

YACHT AGROUND.

New London, Conn., July 20.—The steam yacht Warrior, owned by Alexander Cochrane, of New York, went ashore on the rocks at the north end of Fisher's Island early yesterday in the dense fog. The owner and party were on board at the time.

A wireless call was sent to the T. C. Scott Company in this city, and several boats were sent to the stranded yacht, which was reported as leaking, but in no particular danger.

Mr. Cochrane and his party were landed at Eastern Point.

"EARLY MINISTRY OF CHRIST."

The Rev. Dr. D. W. Skellinger gave a very interesting illustrated lecture on "The Early Ministry of Christ" on the Hope chapel lawn last night to about one hundred and fifty people. It was one of his series of bi-weekly lectures that will continue all through the summer. The next one will be Sunday night and besides the lecture there will be a cornetist and violinist present. Thus far the lectures have attracted large numbers of people and have been a success.

GARRETSON'S EXCITING EXPERIENCE ON BORDER

What He Thought Was An Approaching Bandit Proved to Be Troop Officer.

Russell Garretson, one of the local members of Troop D, which is stationed at Fort Douglas, Arizona, has been tested and not found wanting, according to a letter received by a friend from one of Mr. Garretson's fellow troopers. Garretson was on sentinel duty one night last week when a dark form advanced out of the night from the direction of the Rio Grande. "Halt! who goes there?" was the trooper's challenge, but there was no reply. Instead of retreating toward camp as he probably had a strong impulse to do, Garretson advanced towards the suspicious person with raised rifle and asked for the countersign with firmness of tone. The stranger, who was no other than one of the ranking officers, gave the required password with the sharp reply: "You'll do."

All of the local troopers are in good health and rapidly becoming acclimated, according to the letters and postal received by relatives and friends.

A box to be forwarded to the local boys is being prepared by Elwood Cary and Herbert E. Nelson. All donations of tobacco and other things as the boys need will be appreciated and thankfully received at Mr. Nelson's office.

Legend of the Echo.

An echo is a sound reflected from a distant surface. Sound is produced by waves or pulses of the air, and when those waves come in contact with a cliff or wall or other opposing surface they are reflected like light or heat and the returning waves cause a repetition of the sound. The word echo is of Greek origin. According to ancient mythology, it was the name of a mountain nymph, daughter of the air and the earth. Echo was one of Juno's attendants, but her loquacity displeased Jupiter, so she was deprived of the power of speech by Juno and permitted to answer only when she was spoken to. Afterward Echo fell in love with a beautiful youth named Narcissus and was changed into a stone, which still retained the power of voice. Milton personifies her thus:

Sweet Echo, sweetest nymph that liv'st unseen
Within the airy shell,
By slow Meander's margent green,
Canst thou not tell me of a gentle pair
That likest thy Narcissus are?

—Philadelphia Press.

Mammoth Oysters.

Pliny mentions that, according to the historians of Alexander's expedition, oysters a foot in diameter were found in the Indian seas. And Sir James Tennant was unexpectedly enabled to corroborate the correctness of this statement, for near Trincomali enormous specimens of edible oysters were brought before him. One of these was found to measure more than eleven inches in length by half as many in width.

But this extraordinary measurement is beaten by the oysters of Port Lincoln, South Australia, which are the largest edible ones in the world. They are as large as a dinner plate and of much the same shape. They are sometimes more than a foot across the shell, and the oyster fits its habitation so well that it does not leave much if any margin. The delicacy of flavor of the Port Lincoln mammoth is famous, even in that land of luxuries, and one is ample even for a hearty appetite.

The Right Road.

Young man, you are a locomotive; you are a thing that goes by power inside of you; you are made to go. In fact, considered as a machine, you are very far superior to a locomotive. The maker of a locomotive is a man; your maker is man's Maker. You are as different from a horse or an ox or a camel as a locomotive is different from a wheelbarrow or a cart or a coach. Now, do you suppose that the being who made you—manufactured your machine and put into it the motive power—did not make a special road for you to run upon? My idea of religion is that it is a railroad for a human locomotive and that just as sure as it undertakes to run upon a road adapted only to animal power it will bury its wheels in the sand, dash itself among rocks and come to inevitable wreck.—J. G. Holland.

Gravitation.

Both Dante and Shakespeare preceded Newton in knowledge of the principle if not the law of gravitation. Shakespeare says in "Trolius and Cressida:"

But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very center of the earth,
Drawing all things to it.

Three centuries before Shakespeare Dante said in the "Inferno:"

Thou dost imagine we are still
On the other side the celestial point, where I
Clasped the earth piercing worm, fell cause of ill,
So far I continued to descend,
That side we kept, but when I turned then we Had passed the point to which all bodies tend.

The Charivari.

The "shivaree" was introduced into America by the French of Louisiana and Canada. Of course "shivaree" is a corrupt, contracted form of charivari, the French word, but its meaning is the same. The charivari began as a regular wedding serenade, but came to be reserved only for unpopular marriages.

The council of Tours, at the beginning of the seventeenth century, forbade this form of serenade, the penalty being excommunication from the church, but this did not put an end to the practice.—Exchange.

Should Say Not.

"A millionaire bought the house he was born in and had it razed to the ground."

"That's singular. Why didn't he preserve it?"

"Oh, the house happened to be a log cabin. That sort of thing will do very well for the man with political aspirations, but not for a plutocrat whose wife is socially ambitious."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Cinnamon.

Cinnamon is so extraordinarily sensitive that great care has to be taken with regard to its surroundings on board ship, as a bale of very fine cinnamon will lose much of its delicate aroma if packed among bales of coarser bark.

ISOLATION NEEDED TO CURB SPREAD OF PARALYSIS, SAYS NOTED DOCTOR

No Reason For Panic, Dr. Simon Flexner of Rockefeller Institute Asserts.

"Susceptibility to Plague Lower Than in Measles and Scarlet Fever."

THE address of Dr. Simon Flexner, director of laboratories of the Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research, on "The Nature, Manner of Conveyance and Means of Prevention of Infantile Paralysis," before the New York Academy of Medicine follows in part:

"The Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research has been appealed to by so many physicians and laymen for information and advice on the subject of infantile paralysis that it has seemed desirable to relate the facts of present knowledge concerning certain highly pertinent aspects of the disease, together with deductions of practical importance derived from them.

"Infantile paralysis is an infectious and communicable disease which is caused by the invasion of the central nervous organs—the spinal cord and brain—of a minute, filterable micro-organism which has now been secured in an artificial culture and as such is distinctly visible under the higher powers of the microscope.

"The virus of infantile paralysis, as the micro-organism causing it is termed, exists constantly in the central nervous organs and upon the mucous membrane of the nose and throat and of the intestines in persons suffering from the disease; it occurs less frequently in the other internal organs, and it has not been detected in the general circulating blood of patients.

"Although the micro-organism of infantile paralysis is now known, the difficulties attending its artificial cultivation and identification under the microscope are such as to make futile the employment of ordinary bacteriological tests for its detection. Nevertheless the virus can be detected by inoculation tests upon monkeys, which animals develop a disease corresponding to infantile paralysis in human beings."

Dr. Flexner concluded with these practical deductions and applications:

"First.—The chief mode of demonstrated conveyance of the virus is through the agency of human beings. Whether still other modes of dissemination exist is unknown. According to our present knowledge, the virus leaves the body in the secretions of the nose and throat and in the discharge from the intestines. The conveyers of the virus include persons ill of infantile paralysis in any of its several forms and irrespective of whether they are paralyzed or not and such healthy persons who may have become contaminated by attendance on or association with the ill. How numerous the latter class may be is unknown.

"Second.—The chief means by which the secretions of the nose and throat are disseminated is through the act of kissing, coughing or sneezing; hence during the prevalence of an epidemic of infantile paralysis care should be exercised to restrict the distribution as far as possible through these common means. Habits of self denial, care and cleanliness and consideration for the public welfare can be made to go very far in limiting the dangers from these sources.

Fingers Soon Contaminated.

"Moreover, since the disease attacks by preference young children and infants, in whom the secretions from the nose and mouth are wiped away by mother or nurse, the fingers of these persons readily become contaminated. Through attentions on other children or the preparation of food which may be contaminated, the virus may thus be conveyed from the sick to the healthy.

"Third.—Flies also often collect about nose and mouth of patients ill of infantile paralysis and feed on the secretions, and they even gain access to the discharges from the intestines in homes unprotected by screens. This fact relates to the domestic fly, which, becoming grossly contaminated with the virus, may deposit it on the nose and mouth of healthy persons or upon food or eating utensils. To what extent the biting stable fly is to be incriminated as a carrier of infection is doubtful, but we already know enough to wish to exclude from the sick, and hence from menacing the well, all objectionable household insects.

Must Not Expose Food.

"Food exposed to sale may become contaminated by flies or from fingers which have been in contact with secretions containing the virus; hence food should not be exposed in shops and no person in attendance upon a case of infantile paralysis should be permitted to handle food for sale to the general public.

"Fourth.—Protection to the public can be best secured through the discovery and isolation of those ill of the disease and the sanitary control of those persons who have associated with the sick and whose business calls them away from home. Both these conditions can be secured without too great interference with the comforts and the rights of individuals.

"In the first place, where homes are not suited to the care of the ill so that other children in the same or adjacent families are exposed the parent should consent to removal to hospital in the interest of the sick child itself as well as in the interest of other children. But this removal or care must include not only the frankly paralyzed cases, but also the other forms of the disease.

"In the event of doubtful diagnosis the aid of the laboratory is to be sought, since even in the mildest cases changes will be detected in the cerebrospinal fluid removed by lumbar puncture. If the effort is to be made to control the disease by isolation and segregation of the ill, then these means must be made as inclusive as possible. It is obvious that in certain homes isolation can be carried out as effectively as in hospitals.

"In the end the early detection and isolation of the cases of infantile paralysis in all of its forms, with the attendant control of the households from which they come, will have to be relied upon as the chief measure of staying the progress of the epidemic.

"Fifth.—The degree of susceptibility of children and other members of the community to infantile paralysis is relatively small and is definitely lower than to such communicable diseases as measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria. This fact in itself constitutes a measure of control, and while it does not justify the abatement of any practicable means which may be employed to limit and suppress the epidemic, it should tend to prevent a state of over-anxiety and panic from taking hold of the community.

Death Percentage Varies.

"Sixth.—A percentage of persons, children particularly, die during the acute stage of the disease. This percentage varies from five in certain severe epidemics to twenty in others. The average death rate of many epidemics has been below 10 per cent. A reported high death rate may not be actual, but only apparent, since in every instance the death will be recorded, while many cases which recover may not be reported at all to the authorities. In the present instance it is too early in the course of the epidemic to calculate the death rate, which may prove to be considerably lower than it now seems to be.

"Seventh.—Of those who survive a part make complete recoveries, in which no crippling whatever remains. This number is greater than is usually supposed, because it includes not only the relatively large number of slight or abortive cases, but also a considerable number of cases in which more or less of paralysis was present at one time. The disappearance of the paralysis may be rapid or gradual—may be complete in a few days or may require several weeks or months.

"The remainder, and unfortunately not a small number, suffer some degree of permanent crippling. But even in this class the extent to which recovery from the paralysis may occur is very great. In many instances the residue of paralysis may be so small as not seriously to hamper the life activities of the individual; in others in whom it is greater it may be relieved or minimized by suitable orthopedic treatment.

No Ground For Early Despair.

"But what it is imperative to keep in mind is that the recovery of paralyzed parts and the restoration of lost muscular power and function is a process which extends over a long period of time—that is, over months and even years. So that even a severely paralyzed child who has made little recovery of function by the time the acute stage of the disease is over may go on gaining for weeks, months and even years until in the end he has regained a large part of his losses.

"Fortunately only a very small number of the attacked are left severely and helplessly crippled. There exists at present no safe method of preventive inoculation or vaccination and no practicable method of specific treatment. The prevention of the disease must be accomplished through general sanitary means. Recovery from the disease is a spontaneous process which can be greatly assisted by proper medical and surgical care. Infantile paralysis is an infectious disease, due to a definite and specific micro-organism or virus. Recovery is accomplished by a process of immunization which takes place during the acute period of the disease.

"The tendency of the disease is toward recovery, and it is chiefly or only because the paralysis in some instances involves those portions of the brain and spinal cord which control respiration or breathing and the heart's action that death results."

Hint of a probable cure for paralysis was given by Dr. S. J. Meltzer of the Rockefeller Institute. Experiments made upon monkeys, he stated, had shown encouraging results when intra-spinal injections of adrenaline were given.

"On the basis of experiments made by Dr. Loori and myself," said Dr. Meltzer, "the treatment of all cases of infantile paralysis by intra-spinal injections of adrenalin is advocated.

"Clinical experiments at Rockefeller institute, made by Dr. Clark and myself upon monkeys artificially infected with infantile paralysis, have yielded encouraging results. At this time, however, that is as much as can be stated."

AUTHOR OF "ONCE TO EVERY MAN"

SYNOPSIS. — Stephen O'Mara, a homeless and friendless boy, starting from the wilderness to see the city, is welcomed to the home of Caleb Hunter and his sister Sarah. Stephen meets Barbara Allison, young and rich, and Caleb gives him a home. Barbara ridicules Stephen, who runs away, declaring that he'll come back when worthy of her. Caleb learns that Stephen was well born. Ten years later Stephen returns, still loving Barbara, and learns she is to wed Archibald Wickersham. She tells Stephen his love is hopeless.

Her father and Wickersham plan to block the railroad's completion and discredit O'Mara, who has charge of its construction. Harrigan, a malcontent, is driven away by O'Mara and threatens revenge. Garry Devereau, an inebriate, whom Stephen reforms, learns through Stephen that Miriam Burrell, Barbara's closest friend, is in love with him. Stephen sets himself to win Barbara from Wickersham. Wickersham and Steve clash at a new railroad bridge, built by the latter, whose right of way Wickersham disputes.

Steve is shot from ambush by Harrigan and badly wounded after giving Harrigan a beating. Barbara finds and nurses him.

CHAPTER XXI.

And Tomorrow, and Tomorrow.

THEY carried him into the house and bore him upstairs and laid him, quiet now and almost pulseless, upon the bed. They stood there dumfounded at the bedside until Miss Sarah, re-entering the room, coolly ordered them from underfoot and sent them back downstairs. And at that their unprotesting obedience was of greater assistance than their hands could have been. But when, after one glance at the girl's stricken face, she tried the next instant to dismiss Barbara for once Miss Sarah's will alone proved insufficient. The girl refused, point blank, to go.

"He half undressed me and put me to bed," Barbara flung back in reply to the spinster's final objection, "and if that did not shock you, surely my staying now need not!"

The refusal itself brought a glint to the older woman's eyes and the phrasing thereof a flush to her cheeks, but she wasted no more words in what she knew to be useless argument. And though the girl grew sick and sicker still while Miss Sarah cut away the sodden shirt and started, with competent skill, to cleanse the wound, the latter let her remain and hold a basin of antiseptic and replenish it when necessary.

Miss Sarah knew what to do, and she worked with unhurried thoroughness. They had sent for the doctor, and after ages had passed for the girl, maddeningly cool and unruffled, he arrived. But his first words, too, were an order that she leave the room, and unable to combat his professional bleakness, meekly she had to obey. Little and wholly hopeless she stole downstairs.

Caleb and her father were confronting each other before the fireplace when she reached the lower floor, but the queer note of restraint in their voices meant nothing to her, until she heard her father cry out in sudden anguish.

"Cal," he cried, "Cal, you don't think I was a party to this attempt at murder?"

Then, at Caleb's reply, which went hurtling back at him, the girl was crouching, white and still, and clutching at the stair rail.

"Party! Attempt! Because you did not pull the trigger are you any the less guilty?"

"Do you believe that I would murder the man my girl loves?" Dexter Allison moaned now.

Barbara gasped at the deadly anger which crossed Caleb Hunter's face. Caleb had lifted a hand in righteous accusation.

"You have dealt in crookedness," he thundered. "You have thrived on cunning. And, being a law unto yourself in this country, you have gone unpunished until now. You aided and abetted a vicious and unscrupulous scoundrel in his villainy, and now you have looked upon the result of your works. Law has never touched you, sir—retribution has passed you by. But, by God, sir, I warn you that if that boy dies—if he dies—I shall see that you meet me at thirty paces the next morning. And I shall not miss—I shall be your law!"

They had been friends for close to forty years, yet they were worse than strangers now. Dexter Allison could not answer. He could not speak aloud. Caleb's finger had swung toward the door in a gesture unmistakable. Allison turned, and, ghastly of face, met the eyes of his daughter.

"Barbara," he appealed to her frantically. "Baby"—

But she shrank, a huddled heap of misery, away from him.

"You—too?" she whispered. "You!" And then, dully: "And you're my father!"

The shoulders beneath the garish plaid rose and fell pitifully. This, then, was the moment which he feared. He gulped aloud and hung his head and turned his feet toward home. Barbara rose after he had gone and crept into a chair.

One after another they tried to persuade the girl to rest. Miriam came and talked to her, and Caleb, and even Miss Sarah passing through the room stopped to urge her again to go to bed. But she met them all with the same wordless refusal. She was waiting for him when the doctor, descending in the morning, tried to combine, diplomatically, praise for what she had done with disapproval of her obstinacy.

"My dear child, this insubordination will help no one," he said, "and it may end in your collapse at just the moment when you are needed most."

"Will he live?" was all she would say. "Will he live?"

And before such hopelessness the doctor could not lie.

"He is hard hit and very, very weak," he had to admit. "The shock is great and the tissue damage—unpromising. It is far worse than I expected, but he is still alive, and most men would have been already dead. And his vitality is a marvel, even to me."

He might have comforted her, but with no other statement could he have told the truth. He failed also in his effort to persuade her to go to bed; he had breakfast with Caleb, and she refused to eat. And she was still there in her chair, asking only to be let alone, when Garry Devereau and Fat Joe arrived. She rose and ran to meet the latter, but the doctor who knew how many such situations the pudgy riverman had weathered, summoned him immediately, and Barbara had to wait an hour before Joe came back downstairs. By the lapels of his coat she clung to him then.

"He's mighty sick," reluctantly Joe, too, told the truth.

"The doctor said that it was worse than he expected," she droned. "They sent me away, but if he isn't going to live I won't let them keep me from him!"

Joe's sympathy was unspoiled by professionalism.

"Sick is one thing"—his confidence was almost convincing—"and dyin' is another. And— Shucks! I ain't going to let no book taught medico worry me yet! Men get well because they are bound to get well, or they die because it's their time to die—and he's got too much to live for now!"

Her hopeless face made deception impossible, but Joe comforted her, just the same. He persuaded her to eat with him, and when he found that his conversation made the waiting easier for her, he waxed quite garrulous.

"Why, he's been hurt almost as bad as this, once before," he rambled on, "but he's still alive, ain't he?"

The girl's eyes livened at that.

"Once, down on the island, he mixed in an affair he might not have meddled. And he got it from behind that time, too, only it was with a knife."

"He never told me," murmured the girl.

"It ain't likely he would," the other stated with finality. "It was over a woman, and not a particularly pretty story, any way you look at it."

Her dark eyes widened. She bit her lip. It came to her how little of his life she had shared.

"Oh!" she barely breathed. And again, falteringly, "Oh!"

From that halting monosyllable Joe judged that something was amiss. Observation had never been a slow or painful process of concentration with him.

"He didn't even know who she was. He'd never seen her before," quickly he put her right. "She was just a public dancer, that was all. But a man—mistreated her, and Steve, he just interfered"—

Indeed, Joe had found the way to comfort her and still tell the truth, even though he found it foolishly difficult to swallow food and watch at the same time the warmth which his words kindled. So for an hour he lingered at table and told her many things concerning the man she loved which she would never have learned from his own lips. And it was Joe's jocularity which in the end subdued her rebel spirit. She yielded at last and promised to go home and rest, but only after he had promised first, in a fashion which could leave no doubt in her heart, that he would come for her if things grew worse.

"SAY THAT I'M STILL—HALF BOY—TO YOU!"

Before she left him that morning she told Joe of Big Louie, whom she had had to leave in the road, but he interrupted her before she could finish. They had already found Big Louie. Then she gave him the note which she had discovered crushed under Steve's body. This Joe scanned ferociously; he flashed a strange glance at her from bleached blue eyes.

"Some one traced your name," he put into words the first thought that had been hers. "Some one who had your signature to copy."

She nodded, whitely, in horror. Joe folded the paper and tucked it into a pocket.

"We can touch nobody," he averred regretfully, "unless we catch Harrigan."

Caleb himself took Barbara home, and on the way across the lawn she giggled suddenly at the funny way in which the distance seemed to increase and then lessen between her eyes and her feet. The ground persisted in rising to meet her, she said, until she had to cling to Caleb's arm. And the outer steps proved difficult to negotiate. But at the sight of her father sunk in silence upon his desk in the ground floor "office" she drew her hand from the crook of Caleb's arm and went swiftly across to him.

"Barbara," he besought her brokenly the moment her cheek touched his, "you [illegible] that I"—

She hushed him with gentle fingers laid upon his lips.

"I have been a very foolish and hysterical child," she said. "I'll try to behave more like a woman now. And you and Uncle Cal have been only—absurd!"

She had to laugh again at the behavior of her feet as she climbed upstairs, but her head seemed steady enough. It was only after she had reached her own room that she complained querulously of the failing lights. Miriam had to help Cecile undress and put her to bed.

On the floor below her father had turned again to his desk, his head bowed under his arms. And total breakdown was imminent for Dexter Allison when a hand touched awkwardly his shoulder. He looked up heavily to meet this time the eyes of Caleb Hunter. Caleb stuttered furiously at first, for sentimentality shamed him. Then a happy thought showed the way.

"Dexter, I secured a few sprigs of very superior mint yesterday." He made of it a ceremonial. "Do you think you would—care to join me, sir?"

They had been friends for close to forty years not because of common tastes, but in spite of innate dissimilarity. Dexter came to his feet. He reached out and crushed the other man's hand within his soft, white fingers. Nor was his reply quite according to formula.

"I don't mind if I do, Cal," he accepted fervidly. "Thank God, I don't mind if I do!"

Arm in arm they recrossed to the white columned house. And they kept close, each to the other, throughout the hours of suspense that followed, finding a potent though unconfessed reassurance in such companionship.

Delirium came again upon the sick man who lay in the room which Miss Sarah had always kept waiting for him. Fever strode upon him, while the girl who had brought him home slept in complete exhaustion. At times Steve lay quiescent, only muttering fitfully; the next moment he called crisply for Fat Joe—he feared for his bridge—and Joe had to exert every iron muscle to hold him down. And always he spoke Barbara's name, with a poignant gentleness that left Miss Sarah on the verge of collapse. But he continued to live, through that day and the next night, even when the doctor shook his head and Fat Joe rose to go for the girl, as he had promised he would, in the last extremity. He continued to live, and with the coming of the second dawn suddenly he was no longer delirious. Stephen O'Mara opened his eyes and gazed feebly but very understandingly into the eyes of Fat Joe, who was watching at that moment.

Joe tried to hush him, but he would talk a little.

"I know," he pronounced each word with calculated effort. "I have been very sick, and I must not waste my strength. But I have to be clear, first, on one point. Have I dreamed it, Joe, or—or did she bring me home?"

With his voice alone, when all else seemed failing, Joe had kept his friend alive. The doctor believed it; Miss Sarah knew it to be so. And first of all Joe had to voice his thankfulness, for it was an explosive thing.

"Didn't I tell her so?" he demanded in his whining tenor. "Didn't I say so, all along? And I let that doctor worry me, just because he's got a diploma in a frame, hanging on his wall!"

Then he answered Steve's question.

"She found you," he said. "She brought you home."

A long time the sick man lay and pondered. And finally he found it possible to smile.

"I have not cared whether I lived or died," he said in little more than a whisper. "All along I have seemed to know how near I was—to going across, and I have been near to quitting—at times. For I was happier than I'd ever dared let myself be, before—and then, with the first shot that dropped Big Louie, I knew"— He shook his head, still smiling vaguely. "I have not wanted to live, but I am looking at things—more like a man now. You need not worry any longer, Joe. I'll sleep a little while, I think, and then I'll put my mind hard on getting well, when I awake."

That marked the end of delirium, and with sleep which came almost while he was talking the fever began to abate. He "put his mind on getting well," when he awoke twelve hours later. Strength was flowing in a steady tide back into his body long before Barbara's knees would again bear her weight. For she had squandered her endurance without counting the cost, and she paid the full penalty. She lay three days and three nights railing at her weakness before she could get up at all, and even then Cecile, her little maid, clucked discreetly at the dark circles beneath her eyes.

Joe was several days absent on that errand which had all but emptied the seething town of men. He returned the same day Barbara was about again, forced to admit that Harrigan and Fallon and Shayne had won clear. And there was nothing left to the disgruntled groups which straggled in behind him, save tall and heated conjecture. Some said that they must have managed to cross the border, others maintained that they had found sanctuary in the lumber camps of the lake country to the west, but no matter which guess was right the net result stood unchanged. For it is upon the one who runs away that the blame is always laid, and Archibald Wickersham knew fully as well as did Caleb and Allison and Fat Joe that, without Harrigan, they could not hope to touch him. Harrigan had disapepared from the ken of men, and Wickersham delayed only until his departure could no longer be construed as flight. Then one evening modestly he boarded a train.

After she had rested Barbara proved almost humbly amenable to reason, until it was best for her to go to him she would wait as patiently as she was able.

Miss Sarah ordered a week of unbroken quiet and rest for her patient, and Steve, and not Barbara, proved the difficult one to manage during that period. For with returning strength there came to him recollection of many things which required his attention. He fretted over his work; he swore humorously at Fat Joe, who, coming to make daily reports as soon as Miss Sarah realized that the good in such visits far exceeded the benefits of sleep and solitude, assured his chief that they had accomplished much, unhampered as they were by carping authority.

But he lay and brooded, no humor in his eye, when he was left alone. Fat Joe had assured him that she had brought him home, but Fat Joe, who was ever averse to anti-climax, had told him no more than that. His efforts at entertainment were only the more spontaneous those days because of the soberness of his friend's face. And then the same day that Joe raised him against the pillows so that he might watch a string of flat cars, high piled with logs, roll into the yards, they let her go to him.

Steve was listening to the shrill salute of the whistle which he knew was McLean's pean of victory; he was smiling a little wistfully over the memory which, with McLean, always recurred to him, when he turned and saw her standing on the threshold. She had come on diffident, mouselike feet. She was watching him. And before he believed it really was she, Barbara faltered his name.

"Steve!"

It was only a wisp of a sound—an aching, throbbing bit of tenderness lighter even than the breath that bore it.

"Steve!" she breathed again.

But thereupon, with a headlong little rush that scattered spools of bandages and rolls of lint and set the bottles upon his table jingling dangerously, she flew to him and came, somehow, into his arms.

They had not told him—at first he could not speak. Dumbly he sat, his face bowed upon that brown head pillowed in his arms. She had told herself that she was a woman now—yet her first words were all girl.

"Tell me just once that I'm pretty," she quavered. "Say that I am still—half boy—to you!"

His tongue unsteadied with joy, he told her again, as he had told her on that other day, and, watching the old, old wonder of her grow in his eyes, she listened as though she were taking the words, one by one, from his lips. But there was nothing boyish in the crooked little arch of her mouth—nothing boyish in the depths of her dark and brimming eyes. She remembered his wincing shoulder then. Her arms crept higher about his neck. And now her face was uplifted, and there was no more need for words.

Afterward when they spoke of Big Louie she loved him more for the sorrow which he did not try to hide. From Fat Joe he had already learned of Big Louie's last dereliction. Out of a deeper silence Steve spoke gravely—an epitaph for the man to whom he had been unfailingly kind.

"Most any kind of a failure can live," he said, "but it takes a man—to smile and die."

CHAPTER XXII.

In Real Life Too.

THERE was no longer any objection raised by Miss Sarah, and Barbara spent every hour of her days with him. It grew warmer with aging spring, and almost immediately he was able to sit with her and watch the stream of logs coming in over the line from Thirty Mile and beyond.

Miriam and Garry were married in that week which followed directly Steve's first days of convalescence.

Steve and Barbara were at the window together, Steve outwardly still a little pale and haggard, but for the rest his old serene self again. He managed not to smile at her small and serious face.

"It certainly has not strengthened my vanity a little bit, either," said he, "to learn how smoothly things can move along without me."

Day by day the girl was finding her way deeper into that innermost heart of him which he had never shared with other woman or man. Hour by hour she was learning to know him better, and yet his whimsical gravity still could deceive her—she was sometimes thoughts behind his thoughts. Hard upon his reply her eyes flashed with indignation.

"Pooh!" she scoffed. "Pooh! Most any old clock will run after somebody's wound it up!"

It was a trick of speech that she had learned from him, but his employment of parallel, lazily amiable for the most part, had never been so hotly partisan as was hers at that moment. And suddenly self conscious, suddenly confused and warmly disconcerted at the quality of his gaze, she had to hide her head. But she hid it upon a shoulder most conveniently at hand.

Spring gave way to early summer, and now Steve was able to be on his feet again, so absurdly uncertain of balance at first, however, that she ridiculed him unmercifully one moment, only to rush to him in a panic of solicitude the next. There came long walks and longer trips in the saddle, came hours of silence that were the more wonderful for want of words—hours in which, in a hushed voice, she gave him shyly of her plans. But always, too, the interruptions grew more and more frequent and insistent. Fat Joe and McLean and even Hardwick Elliott made more and more pressing demands upon his time, until finally he insisted that he could no longer play shamelessly the invalid. He must look in upon the works up river if only for the moral effect which it would have upon the men. She assented grudgingly. It would be but a day or two, and then—then he would come back to her.

The next morning, at the moment when Barbara and Steve were mounting their horses, for she wanted to ride with him a little way, Dexter Allison chose to disclose something which had been but lately in the process of preparation. He joined them at the edge of the lawn before the white columned house on the hill.

"Easing back into harness, I understand," he began, not quite comfortably, however, for he was aware of a gleam of disapproval in his daughter's eyes at this interruption. "Well, there's no great rush, but it's wise no doubt to see that things don't lag." He hesitated and shifted heavily to the other foot. "We'll want to start through to the border by fall, I suppose."

"We'll be ready." Steve had to laugh at his lack of ease.

"No doubt—no doubt." Again Dexter hesitated momentarily. And then there came to the surface that proneness to accept men for what they were in a man's world which had long before convinced Caleb Hunter of Allison's inherent bigness.

"Elliott resigned the presidency of the East Coast company last night." The statement was brief to actual crispness. "I merely tell you this so that you can begin to lay tentative plans accordingly, because in view of the immediate need of filling that vacancy I feel sure that there will be too many demands upon your time here at the Morrison office for you to plan on much field work for yourself in the future."

To Barbara at the beginning the speech seemed merely another of her father's rather involved, entirely laboured attempts at the facetious. But when she saw the blood steal up and stain Stephen O'Mara's face she realized that it was the very sort of suggestion from which on her lips he had turned roughly away. Coming from the lips of her father, Steve accepted gravely, with a matching briefness that could not hide a surge of triumph. A month before Barbara would have been unable to understand why there was any difference simply because the suggestion came from another. Now, when it could no longer make or mar her happiness, she understood very well indeed.

She rode with him that day until he told her that it was time for her to turn back. With Ragtime standing quiet, she laid her face against his and complained that he had promised her she should never be allowed to go more than arm's length away from him once she was his.

"This is the last time," he told her in a voice vibrant and low. "This is the last time—for you and me."

He held her closer for a moment.

"You will be ready when I come back?"

She bobbed her head.

"Ready and waiting," she said.

She sat and put up a hand to him, wistfully disconsolate, before he disappeared beyond a twist in the trail.

* * * * * * *

The next night, in the cabin up river, after Miriam had left them alone to what she termed their complacent silence, Garry Devereau and Steve sat a long while before the former raised a face alight with his rare mirth.

"Well, here we are," chuckled Garry "I, poor, but honest, already in the toils of matrimony, and you, a plutocrat in sudden danger of a government investigation, I'm told, and hovering on the brink!"

"Here we are!" echoed Steve.

And that was as close as either of them came to outspoken emotion. With a lightness somewhat self conscious, Garry had alluded to the property which Caleb Hunter had turned over to Steve. There was a trace of like humor in the latter's reply.

"I certainly am oppressed with the cares of sudden wealth," said he.

* * * * * * *

She was waiting for him at the twist in the road. She was ready two days later, as she had promised to be.

Only her father and Miss Sarah and Caleb were present when they were married. And then, and not alone because she knew he wished it, but because it was the dearest wish of her own heart, they turned their faces toward the cabin on the balsam knoll. He dismounted and lifted her to the ground, for suddenly she wanted to go the rest of the way on foot.

She let her weight lie against him, the top of her head scarce higher than his chin, and sighed a little.

"Tired?" he asked with that gentleness he saved for her alone.

The bright head shook.

"Happy?" he asked again as gently.

She swung around and clung to him then.

"I'm so happy!" she whispered. "Do you suppose that any one will ever be as happy again?"

"Maybe," he said, "maybe some time—in books!"

She lifted her face then. He had the dusky glory of her eyes.

"Maybe," she echoed, her voice tremulous—"some time—but this time in real life too."

THE END.

ROUND UP DISEASE BEARING CATS.

How many more years are going to elapse before our City Fathers wake up to the fact that stray cats are disease bearers of the worst character? How long are we going to allow these germ carriers to roam the streets, be fondled by our children, and mingle with our house pets? Authorities tell us the vagabond feline is a menace to public health and even the champions of the specie will not rise to deny it. But even when the nation is at fever heat over an infantile epidemic that has broken over our country with startling effect those entrusted with the preservation of health conditions in Plainfield either have refused or neglected to take advantage of a State law giving them authority to stamp out one of the pests known to be a spreader of the malady.

What was the State law passed for? Records show that but one municipality in New Jersey has thus far taken advantage of it. Montclair has enforced an ordinance compelling owners of cats to take out licenses and providing for the slaughter of the homeless class of feline. The results have been gratifying, diseases most common to children have been greatly decreased, and those prominent in the study of sanitation and health declare that such an ordinance should be rigidly observed throughout not only New Jersey, but every State in the Union where the cat thrives.

Wipe out the feline "rounder" that feeds in refuse and garbage cans and carries with it a swarm of disease laden flies and germs of the most deadly character. By so doing you will aid in keeping public health up to a high standard of excellence and eliminate the possibility of contagious sicknesses assuming the epidemic form in Plainfield. The adoption of an ordinance licensing cats and calling for the collection and execution of the homeless feline is needed in Plainfield today. What has been tried and proven satisfactory in Montclair is suitable for introduction in Plainfield and even though the law might have been untried our local Common Council could pass no better ordinance than one governing the keeping of disease spreading animals. Dogs are licensed in Plainfield and the dog has been declared by physicians to be far more respectiful of the laws of cleanliness than the fur bearing cat.

THIS YEAR' SELECTION WILL SET A PRECEDENT.

For the first time since the State of New Jersey came into existence the people will vote for a president, United States senator and governor at one election next fall. The selection of a president and governor have frequently come together but never before has the direct election of a United States senator been a part of the combination. The naming of a president and governor coincide in this State in every twelve years, the term of the president being four years and that of the governor three. The last time they came together was in 1904, when Theodore Roosevelt and Edward C. Stokes were chosen president and governor respectively. The election of a United States senator this year will be the first one by a direct vote under the new amendment to the Federal constitution. Senators Hughes and Martine were elected under the State law permitting the people to express thir preference for this office, but the Legislature, which really did the choosing, was not actually compelled to abide by the verdict at the polls. Candidates this year will be chosen at the primary election in September, the election to follow in November.

A "STUPID TRAGEDY."

There may have been a Shakespeare or a Newton, a Kant or a Goethe, a Moliere or a Pasteur, a Copernicus, a Rubens, a Tolstoy, among those hundreds of thousands of young Englishmen, Germans, Frenchmen, Poles, Belgians, Russians who fell.—George Brandes.

Possibly. At all events, there are hundreds of thousands of good sons, husbands, fathers, brothers among those who fell.

And what wrong has the individual slayer had at the hands of the man he slew? None whatever. Strangers to each other all, but brothers "under the skin."

Who set them on? Every government eagerly denies responsibility for what Mr. Brandes calls the "stupid tragedy" of a world war. No government, strong in a sense of righteous public purpose, is willing to say, as Danton said of the September massacres, "I did it!"

Five thousand Jerseymen are doing border duty in the West. Many of them have given up good positions and every one of them has sacrificed home interests. Are we going to ask them to make an additional sacrifice by depriving them of their vote next fall? The privilege to vote is guaranteed them by the constitution of the State but the Legislature has failed to enact a proper law and Congress has neglected to declare war on Mexico, hence they cannot cast a ballot. Whatever may be the opinion of the Governor, the Attorney General and Secretary of State, the Legislature can show its good intentions—that is, if the Governor will give it a chance by calling a special session.

Various newspapers have seen fit to exploit the name of Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, as a possible candidate for United States senator. Mr. Ackerman is non-committal on the question but is known to be a decided admirer of Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, and for that reason, if for no other, it is not likely that his name will be placed before the people next September.

Guardsmen at the border have established a court for the trial of regimental cases dealing out sentences in the form of fines to be deducted from the monthly pay of militiamen. That $15 per will be dented pretty badly in most cases if the soldiers are made to adhere strictly to the regulations laid down by the U. S. Army officers.

The Kicker.

He kicks about the weather and
He kicks about the shows;
He kicks about the service and
The food where'er he goes.
He kicks about the street cars and
He kicks about the gas;
He kicks about the baseball games
When he goes on a pass.
He kicks about the president,
He kicks about the king;
He kicks about the house of lords,
And almost everything.
He kicks about his neighbors and
He kicks about his wife;
He kicks when there is too much peace,
He kicks when there is strife.
When he gets to the promised land
It's going to make him sick;
It won't be heaven there for him
Without a chance to kick.

Miss Pansy Tibbitts, our charming musical teacher of voice, gave a pupils' recital at the opry house last Wednesday evening and there were so many numbers on the program and the parents applauded so much that the program lasted until 4 o'clock next morning. Uncle Ezra Purdy says he ain't heard so much hollering in this town since Cleveland was elected the fust time.

There is a splendid vaudeville program at the Elite moving pitcher theater this week, including the Onion Brothers in feats of strength, Miss Birdie Jones with musical class and aluminum chimes, Professor Dexter, mesmerist, magician and taxidermist, and the Passe Sisters, eccentric dancers and paper tearing. Space forbids an extended criticism this week, but suffice to say it is one of the best oprys that has been here since "East Lynne."

Prof. Hank Simms, conductor of the Silver Cornet Band, says he would about as soon be a conductor on a freight train or street car, where a feller kin have some peace once in awhile. There is so much jealousy in the band that every time they give a concert every feller has to have a solo number excepting the bass and snare drum, and thus far he has been able to get them to agree on a duet, but they are both gitting ambitious, and it won't be long before he will have to give each of 'em a solo. The last concert the band gave lasted all night; they wouldn't have stopped then excepting that the slide trombone player had to go to work in the sawmill and the B flat was called away by the death of his grandfather from old age.

A traveling man visited a small town in the central part of the State last week and as he walked up the main street from the train early in the morning he met an old man coming out of a building. The old man had the unmistakable air of a person who had been sitting up all night toying with the fickle pasteboards, and losing.

"How'd they come, judge?" asked the traveling man.

"They come punk," replied the old man seriously. "I lost $18,500 last night."

"Great guns!"

"Yes," continued the old man, "and the worst part of the thing was that $7.50 of it was spot cash."

- Proctor's Theatre -

"What Are You Doing For Your Boy?" That is the big question many a father will ask himself after he has seen the new Triangle feature "The Dividend," at Proctor's today, in which Wm. H. Thompso and Charles Ray are co-starred. The picture shows a son just passing from boyhood to manhood—at the age when every boy needs the companionship of his father, not just a word and a pat on the back now and then, but good long talks, a warm interest in the plans and desires of the boy, and association which is more like that of two good chums than anything else. "The Dividend" shows, in the course of its powerful and tragic story, just what this fatherly interest in a boy would have meant, if it had been given, and the deplorable results that may follow when a father is too much engrossed with his own affairs to give his son the right sort of companionship. A laugh-provoking Keystone comedy is also provided today in addition to several interesting educational and comedy subjects.

Miss Gertrude Hornidge continues to be one of the popular attractions at Proctor's, and her sweet voice and charming personality have won for her friends and admirers.

On Friday, by special arrangement with the Triangle Company, Norma Talmadge, the young actress, appears in "Going Straight," a crook play, in which she sounds the very depths of emotion both as wife and mother, and in which she is certain to add greatly to her already notable popularity among the followers of the film. "Going Straight" is powerful, well constructed and has a unique plot and is filled with surprises and sensations. The latest Keystone comedy is also shown tomorrow and an interesting Mutual Weekly is also on the program.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Anna Pavlowa, the incomparable dancer, will be seen in "The Dumb Gird of Portici," a weird-wild-wonderful spectacle in eight massive parts and staged at a cost of a quarter of a million of dollars. This production was produced by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley, the renowned directors of "Where Are My Children?" "Hypocrites," and scores of others.

RECREATION NOTE.

The summer term of piano lessons, given under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee, will begin tomorrow morning at the Stillman School. All lessons are individual and one-half hour in length. A nominal charge of 25 cents will be made. LOCAL TROOP MAY ESCAPE NEW TESTS

Claim They All Passed Federal Examinations at Sea Girt Camp.

Douglas, Arizona, July 20.—Claiming that all their men were examined by the Federal authorities and passed at Sea Girt, the officers of Troop D, of Plainfield, and Troop B, of Red Bank, are making efforts to have their men excluded from the Federal tests now being conducted here. If this is brought about it will mean that none of the Plainfielders will be sent back home. All of them are anxious to remain here and are optimistic of their chances to pass even the rigid tests being given here now.

The examining was started Tuesday, the First Regiment being the first to take the tests. It is being conducted by the regular army officers, aided by our medical staff, and it is estimated that it will take about one week to complete the work.

Whatever the habitual climate of Arizona may be, the State is not dry now, in this portion, at least. A drizzling rain is falling and the humidity is said to be the highest in years.

There is little excitement here as a result of the shooting of a Mexican by a sentry Monday night. Investigation shows that the man was eighty-three yards over the boundary line in Mexico. There will be an exhaustive examination, starting today.

The War Department order regarding the return of enlisted men who have families dependent on them was considered ambiguous. Misunderstandings are expected unless the department clarifies it. Many of tthe men interpret it to include all married men. The words "if warranted by circumstances," as applied to the consideration of applications for release, constitute one of the stumbling blocks.

The cavalry troops now manoeuvre and train new horses by 6 o'clock in the morning; the artillery commands take the field without their guns and exercise, mounted and on foot, and the infantry, the biggest part of the command, is getting-up exercises, drill, a little hiking and plenty of camp work, the sum total of which is that the new materal is being pounded into shape, and some of the men do not really care for the process.

Mosquito nets are becoming popular and some of the wags have organized an officers' school for the "mosquito corps." The purpise is to teach them to lead the rosts of their fellows and then, of they are really Jersey descendants—and they sound and feel as though they are—we will have a valuable ally against any foe. Every day we are perking up more and every day the men are getting in better condition physically.

If there are no new international developments the 100,000 or more guardsmen with the bulk of the regular army will participate in a great field manoeuvre through the West here. This will be the welding together process of the reorganized regular army and the nationalized National Guard, and would really be the first great actual field exercises in this country since the time the veterans laid down their arms in 1865.

Douglas and its surroundings, natives say, is the place where the best of everything was planted and has since flourished. As for El Paso, Tex.—what if it is bigger? Douglas has better water, better light, etc. The East could learn a whole lot from this town in home boosting in words.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" WILL BE SHOWN HERE

Motion Picture Spectacle Will Open the Plainfield Theatre on July 27.

With a corps of painters and decorators at work on the interior of the playhouse, the management of the Plainfield Theatre is straining every effort to add a touch of fresh color to the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," for which the house will be opened on Thursday, July 27. The big Griffith spectacle is to be presented twice daily for three days, beginning on that date, and it is expected that the crowds will be limited only by the capacity of the theatre—as they are wherever this monarch of the film world is presented.

Seats for the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" will be placed on sale at the box office tomorrow morning and patrons are urged to make their reservations early. When the spectacle was presented in Planfield last season hundreds were unable to gain admission to the final performance.

The spectacle is to be presented by D. W. Griffith's touring organization, with a symphony orchestra of 25 and the same realistic effects which are still remembered by those who saw the production last season. A scale of popular prices will prevail.

"The Birth of a Nation" is vastly more than a motion picture. It is a majestic combination of film and music, depicting in swift panorama the salient events of the Civil War and Reconstruction periods. Among the scenes are President Lincoln signing his first call for volunteers, Sherman's march through Georgia, the battle of Petersburg, Lee and Grant at Appomatox and the assassination of President Lincoln. The cost of producing the spectacle was $500,000, and in its great battle scenes 18,000 people and 3,000 horses are shown.

Open the Eyes Under Water.

Practice opening the eyes under water in swimming, for with favorable conditions there is much to be seen and enjoyed in the queer, ghostly light below. The ability to see when below the surface may some time prove of priceless value. It is one of the attributes of swimming, and it may be readily mastered. But do not open the eyes until well below. The closed lid is an ample protection when one is plunging from any height, and it should remain closed until the first swift downward rush is ended.—All Outdoors.

DARING WHALERS.

Risks They Take When They Dive With the Harpooned Animal.

Many of the Japanese whalemen are most expert and daring men. After a whale has been cornered, harpooned and is slowly giving out from exhaustion the nimble expert of the whaling crew must prove his mettle.

The skilled Jap, after jumping upon the animal's back and cutting two gashes in the head, one on either side, through which a rope must be run and tied, cannot always perform his work in one trial. Often the animal makes a deep dive. But the little Jap must hold fast to his quarry and dive also, trusting to the fates that his own air supply in his lungs will last as long as that of the whale's.

The Jap is safer from being drowned than from being crushed by the infuriated animal's tail. If the little Jap lets go it usually means his death, so he hangs on to the diving quarry. Frequently these whalemen lose their lives from drowning, but the members of their crew look upon this misfortune with something of a fatalistic regard.

But the main business in hand is the capture of the whale. As the fight progresses and the maddened, frightened mammal grows weaker and finally is dying the boat crews row closer to the body and pray for the ease of his departing spirit. Members of the crew will call out the words, "Joraku, joraku, joraku!" and on the third day after the mammal has been hauled ashore a service is held and prayers offered for the animal's future contentment of spirit.

As soon as the animal has been towed to the shore line he is cut up, the Japs making huge excavations and penetrating inside the animal's body, as though entering a mine shaft or gallery. It is a grewsome sight, but is looked upon purely as a matter of course among the Jap whalemen.—Exchange.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.—Adv.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Old Sultan and His Friend Had A Quarrel.

Her Tail Stuck Straight Up In the Air.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

WHEN the clock said half an hour before bedtime daddy began the story: "A wolf once did a good turn for his friend, an old dog, Sultan, that was so old he was little use to his master. Then the wolf soon went to Sultan and said: 'I helped you once. Now, you must turn your head the other way while I help myself to one of your master's good, fat sheep.'

"'No,' cried Sultan; 'I will be faithful to my master, the shepherd!'

"But the wolf thought the dog was joking, and that night he went to help himself to a dainty morsel to eat, for he was very hungry. Now, Sultan had told his master what the wolf wanted to do. So the shepherd lay in wait behind the barn door, and when the wolf was busy picking out a good, fat sheep he laid a stout club down on the wolf's back and combed his locks for him nicely.

"The wolf was very angry and swore he would take revenge on Sultan. So he challenged the old dog to come to the woods for a fight. Now, Sultan had nobody to ask to be his second except the shepherd's old lame legged cat. So he took her along, and she limped so much that each time she stepped her tail stuck straight up in the air.

"The wolf and his second, a wild boar, were there first and when they saw the enemies coming, saw the cat's tail sticking up so straight, they thought it was a sword she was carrying for Sultan to fight with. Each time she limped they thought she was bending to pick up a stone to throw at them. They were so afraid that the wild boar lay down behind a bush and the wolf jumped up in a tree.

"And then when Sultan and the old cat got there they wondered why no enemies had come. The boar's ear stuck up out of the bushes, and the cat, thinking it was a mouse, sprang upon it and scratched it till the boar was glad to run away in the woods. 'Look up in the tree,' he shouted back, 'and you'll see the one to blame!'

"So the cat and old Sultan looked up in the branches and espied the wolf. They called him a rascally coward to start a fight and then not dare come to it. They would not let him come down till he was ashamed of himself and promised to be good friends with old Sultan for the rest of his life."

"What a funny story, daddy!" cried the children.

"It's one of my favorites," said daddy.

And the children gave him two hugs.

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

Sweet Pickled Peaches—Select ripe but firm fruit, free from blemishes; peel them carefully. Allow a pound of sugar to a pint of good cider vinegar; place whole cloves and cinnamon in a bag and boil in the vinegar. When vinegar has come to a broil, drop in the peaches (a few at a time) and let them remain till done through, but not soft or broken; then remove carefully with a skimmer and place them in jars. Repeat till peaches all are done, then fill up jars with remaining vinegar and seal while warm. In the same manner may be made sweet pickled pears, plums, crab apples and cherries.

Bordeaux Sauce—Slice one quart green tomatoes, two quarts cabbage, five small onions and one red pepper; then add half teaspoon allspice, half teaspoon turmeric, one tablespoon celery seed, one cup sugar, and one quart vinegar. Boil slowly twenty minutes. Seal in jars or bottles. This sauce is excellent for all kinds of meats.

TO PRESERVE EGGS.

Add one pint silicate of soda (water glass) to nine pints water, then cool mixture and mix thoroughly. Put in fresh eggs carefully, small end down. This amount preserves five dozen eggs. Keep in cool place in stone crocks.

THE TABLE.

Egg Fritters—Take some well-drained poached eggs, brash them over with well-beaten yolk of egg, strew over some good cheese (grated), then bread crumbs. Fry a moment in very hot butter. Serve with fried parsley.

Round Steak Steamed—Purchase amount of steak desired 1½ inches thick. Place steak in skillet, brown on both sides, remove steak and make a brown gravy. Put meat in steamer, pour gravy over it, steam three to four hours. If one hasn't a steamer, put meat and gravy in stewpan, then put this pan into a larger pan with just enough water in pan to keep from boiling over into the meat; place lid on large pan, steam three to four hours. Meat cooked this way retains it flavor and is very tender.

Pepe a L'Italianne—Take six large green peppers, cut tops, remove seeds, put in pan of cold water until following is ready: Filling: Fry half pound (ground) steak until partially cooked, then add one cup tomato sauce; fry until meat is well cooked, remove from fire, add one cup bread crumbs, half cup grated cheese, one teaspoon salt, half tablespoon sugar, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one egg well beaten, sprig of parsley chopped fine. Fill peppers with this, then fry pepers in deep fat until a rich golden color.

Pieplant Pie—Yolks of two eggs, one tablespoon flour, one scant cup sugar, lump of butter size of hickory-nut, pinch salt, three tablespoons water. Beat well, add enough cut pieplant to fill pie pan. When baked, put whites of eggs on top and brown. You can use peaches instead of pieplant.

Peach Conserve—Allow a cup and a fourth of sugar to a pint of fruit. Make a heavy sirup of sugar and water, boiling it until it will spin a thread, then drop in the peaches cut into cubes. Cook until thick, then add a few drops of lemon and orange, and nuts if desired. Can and seal at once.

In Which Ethel's Deceit Is Discovered and a Family Row Follows.

Ethel was in bed with a headache and so did not get down to the office the first of the month, as she had invariably done since contracting the debt for her suit.

"Never mind, it usually comes the second of the month and then I will be safe," she thought as she dozed off. How I wish I had never bought the suit. It has been a constant worry. I can't see how I can pay anything on it and I paid nothing last month. Oh, this grinding poverty"

Her nap did her good and she rose and carefully dressed. "There is one thing, Ralph cannot find fault with me for being careless of my personal appearance," she thought approvingly as she gazed at her reflection in the glass.

"What are Lyman & Sons writing to you for?" inquired her husband as he handed her the bill when he came to supper. Her heart beat fast as she took it and tucked it in her belt.

"Some advertisement, probably," she answered in a tone that she tried to make careless. Her heightened color and nervousness held Ralph's attention.

"Why do you not open the letter?" he asked, looking fixedly at her.

"I must get supper on the table; I have been in bed all the afternoon with a headache," she answered by way of diversion.

"Would you mind opening it? Of course it is not a bill. You would not buy anything on credit knowing how I feel about it." There was a set expression about the mouth that terrified the girl. She stood rooted to the spot unable to think what to do. Ralph held out his hand for the envelope and she handed it over. He tore the envelope open and it seemed to Ethel that the silence that followed would never end. When he looked up his face was hard and set.

"Have you no sense of honor that you should lie to me about that suit?" His voice was low and the deliberate coolness of his manner seemed awful to Ethel.

"I did not lie. I said——"

"You gave me to understand that your mother gave you that suit"

"I said that she insisted on my having it. I never said she gave it to me." Ethel was struggling against tears.

"No matter what you said, you gave me the impression that she gave it to you. You meant to give that impression. You meant to deceive me. You have failed me utterly."

"I have not failed you. I have never even looked at any man since we were married. I love you, or did love you." Ethel wiped her eyes.

"As if there were but one way to fail your husband. I can never respect a woman who would deliberately deceive me, and I cannot love any one I cannot respect. You are an utter disappointment to me."

"Ralph Gordon, you have no right to say such things to me. I have done nothing to deserve it. I got that suit intending to pay for it and never bother you about it. You make such a fuss over every dollar I spend. I did not succeed in getting it paid for, but buying a suit is not a penitentiary offense. You treat me as if I were a criminal." Ethel's eyes blazed.

"It isn't the buying of the suit. It is the way you did it. You deceived me, ran in debt for something you did not need when we were in financial straits, and when I exacted a promise from you that you would not run in debt you neevr told me that you owed a bill in Kansas City. Instead of being a helpmate you have been pulling against me all the time, getting what you determined to have by underhand means if fair means failed." Ralph turned on his heel and Ethel heard the house door close after him.

Give Plants a Chance.

In all places, then, and in all seasons,
Flowers expand their light and soul-like wings.
Teaching us, by most persuasive reasons,
How akin they are to human beings.

And with childlike, credulous affection,
We behold their tender buds expand;
Emblems of our own great resurrection;
Emblems of the bright and better land. —Longfellow.

Baby Don'ts.

Cats and dogs are dangerous to a baby. They bring sickness.

Do not allow dirty dishes to stand in dining room or kitchen. They draw flies and roaches.

Buy mosquito netting for baby's crib, carriage and windows.

Don't let anyone handle and kiss your baby. Let baby sleep in the room adjoining yours, rather than in the room with any older person

Do not sweep or dust when baby is in the room. Dust is dry dirt and is dangerous to baby.

Do not take baby to picture shows or any crowded places. Do not take him into the street cars any more than you can help.

Do not keep baby awake nights. The mother and father who deny themselves evening outings for baby's sake will be abundantly rewarded in the good nature, steady nerves and sturdy limbs of the boy or girl who has been sent to the land of Nod early and regularly. These evenings at home are good for father and mother, too, in these days of rush and worry. Even when friends are expected as guests, however, see to it that the baby is in bed and asleep at the regular time, even if the "company" have to entertain themselves for a few moments while mother bathes her little one and tucks him away for his night of health-giving sleep.

Vacation Days.

Summer affords the opportunity for thoughtful parents to arrange for the health, pleasure and profit of their children as to make the vacation one of joy and value.

There is time for closer companionship, which gives better understanding of the children. Every mother can plan regular duties for each child which will occupy part of every day, which will develop reliability and responsibility. Boys and girls who know all about the work in a home are better prepared to make good homes themselves when they leave the parental roof.

The home work may be so divided that each one will have experience with each branch of work. Preparation of one meal a day is valuable education. The serving of the meal can be the duty of another child. The making of beds can be delegated to another. The clearing away of the meal to another. All should be done under careful supervision with a system of credit for work well done. The giving of a definite amount of money for the purchase of food for one meal, and the wholesome rivalry as to who can provide the most appetizing and nourishing meal within a given amount is both interesting and educational.

The Audubon Society has leaflets at two cents each, gving a colored picture of a bird with a description of it, and an uncolored drawing which children may paint. These interest and educate, and every child likes them. To know the birds and to learn how many varieties live near one's home is a valuable phase of nature study. Every child should have her own garden if any place for it can be found.

Outdoor games and plays should have a place in summer days. Reading too. Careful parents will see that books are chosen well; and reading aloud to mother cultivates the ability to read well and the questions raised by the reading can be discussed helpfully.

Parents should remember that there is a happy medium between no planning for children's days and filling every hour.

One of the blessed privileges of childhood is time to dream and do what one's own tastes dictate. Initiative is developed only by those who have some control of their own time and acts, and it helps parents to know better the real heart of a child, by observance of what he really likes to do when left to his own devices.

To make children happy, healthy and useful through the days of freedom from school rests with the parents.

Parent Teacher Work.

Up to the present time twenty-five theatres in Chicago are giving children's performances, and in almost every instance the performances are chaperoned by four or five members of organizations interested. Twenty-four cities in Illinois have been reported to the Better Films Committee, where one or more theatres are giving children's performances. These figures are made up from actual reports. No doubt the number would easily be doubled if all performances were reported.

An Enemy of Mosquitoes.

"The purple martin is one of our most purely insectivorous birds," says Mr. Shoffner, "and feeds almost entirely on winged insects, which it catches in the air as it flies for hours over our orchards and gardens looking for food. It also eats large numbers of rose and May-beetles, wasps, grasshoppers, June-bugs, clover-leaf weevils, crane-flies, moths and all kinds of injurious insects. House and horse-flies are eaten in enormous quantities. Young martins do not fly until they are twenty-six to twenty-eight days old, which means that a great amount of food must be brought to them. A young martin is never fed when on the ground, so if a young bird falls from the nest when no friendly human help is nigh, the young one usually starves or is caught by a cat."

The sociable and democratic martins will keep house in a soap box or barrel that has been divided into compartments, or live happily in gourd houses that swing from a high pole. They do not like to live alone, but prefer to bring up large families in a many-roomed house which has only thin partitions between the apartments of the busy, happy neighbors.

SPORT TOPICS

Lee Magee, who has been a tower of strength to the Yankees, was once manager of the Brookfeds. While leader of the Tip Tops he gained a "rep" for aggressiveness. His real name is Leopold Hoerschmeyer.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Willie Sullivan deserves a little mention. Bill plays with the Lenox team in the Parker Field League. He is one of the old standbyes of the club and has greatly added in bringing it up to its present level. The Lenox lads started poorly, but soon struck a winning stride. Billy has acted in the capacity of infielder, outfielder and pitcher. It's about time someone elected him manager.

Anthony Deady is now performing on first base. It has been a habit with "Goo" to play all positions. As a pitcher he has been a success and his friends believe that he will rank high among the Parker Field League initial sackers.

"Kid" Brennan wants to know when Jimmy McCarthy was "farmed out." Owing to the fact that we are unable to enlighten the 'Kid," we will have to order "Mac" to again sign with the Tabs.

The Royals are considered rather speedy we hear. If they are speedy, that's their good fortune. But what we would like to know is this. Who told the manager of the colored team that his lads were speedier than the players on any of the City League teams? If Mr. Simmons believes that the Royals can defeat the Netherwood, Dunellen or T. A. B. teams it is his duty to make known his belief to the managers of these clubs at once. We would like to see a game between the colored lads and the players of any one of these three teams.

Eddie Gunzelman once "broke" into this column by virtue of his ability as a wrestler. Now he gains recognition because he is a baseball player. The New Brunswick papers hail him as a "phenom" because he is handicapped by having only two fingers on one side of his hands. Eddie is all to the mustard, is a good fielder and a dangerous man with the willow. In speaking of him as a "star" the Middlesex scribe declared that the man with the two fingers was Lou Dixon. It's time for Lou to object. If Gunzelman and "Red" Grimes keep up their brilliant work, they will be soon heralded from coast to coast.

Wonder if Jimmy Montrose is slated to take Dick Schott's job away from him.

Henny Winters has accepted a job as umpire. And we always thought Henny wanted to live to be a hundred years old.

Cliff Randolph is back on the job. The other baseball player who boasts of the name of Randolph is related to Cliff, according to reliable information received here.

The Netherwood manager ought to send in a little information regarding this new twirler Hebding. The young man made an auspicious debut and deserves a little commendation. Here's the place to get it.

There is no truth in the rumor that the City League is bankrupt. The organization is strictly "amateur" and "money" is somehing the various managers speak of with disdain—except on pay day.

Wonder how Joe Malciewcz is making out in Wilmington this week?

O'LOUGHLIN FINISHES IN NEWSPAPER EVENT

Marty, However, Fails to Annex Prize, Returning Card of 293.

One of the largest crowds that has ever witnessed a golf tournament at the Van Cortlandt Park public links yesterday saw James M. Barnes, professional at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, of Philadelphia, win the first prize of $300 and a silver cup in the open tournament held under the auspices of the New York Newspaper Golf Club, with a total of 276 strokes for the seventy-two holes of the play.

Elmer W. Loving, of Quaker Ridge, and "Jack" Dowling, of Scarsdale, divided second and third prizes, amounting in the aggregate to $225, each having a total which left him three strokes behind Barnes. "Bob" Macdonald, of Buffalo, who was hot on the trail of the leaders all the way, finished fourth with an aggregate of 280, earning $60. Walter Hagen, of Rochester, the metropolitan title holder, tied at 281 for fifth and sixth prizes with Patrick J. Doyle, of South Shore Field Club, taking $45 each.

Marty O'Loughlin failed to finish "in the money." His record for the first day was 142, but he did not do as well yesterday. His card was: Out, 75; in, 77. His grand total for the entire event was 293.

EAGLES TROUNCE JEWISH BALLISTS

Johnson is Invincible Allowing But Three Scattered Hits.

The Hebrews lost to the Eagles in the regularly scheduled Parker Field League battle yesterday. The able work of Johnson, who occupied the mound for the visitors, was directly responsible for the defeat of the Jewish lads.

According to reliable information the Eagles are the class of the league, although they have to pass the Shamrocks before they can declare themselves "champs." The Lenox team has been going along poorly, while the other teams are barely breaking even.

SUBURBANS SEEK REVENGE.

On Sunday afternoon at 3:30 the South Plainfield baseball club will engage the Chelsea Park team, of this city, on the South Plainfield diamond.

The Chelsea team defeated the village outfit in a fast game about three weeks ago by a score of 6-5. The suburbans are out for revenge. The South Plainfielders will present their regular lineup.

'PERRY' OR 'TERRY' WHICH CAN IT BE?

Colonel and "Eight Sons" to Play National Game, Says Newspaper.

We clipped the following from the New Brunswick Home News:

"Colonel Albert Perry, of North Plainfield township, who has been running the bases of life for nearly seventy-six years and who was a crackerjack ball player in the pioneer days of the sport, is planning for a "come-back" stunt.

"The colonel is going to play first base on a nine composed of himself and eight sons at his birthday celebration in the mountainside hamlet of Bullfrog City next month.

"The Perry nine, led by the colonel, will clash with a club composed of single men.

"All of the Perry boys have been, and some are now, good players. They are William, George, Albert, Jr., Herbert, Frank, Howard and Elmer. William is a pitcher and known as 'Smoke Ball Bill' on Plainfield sand lots.

"'Yeppe, I'm going to get back in the game, and I'll show some of the youngsters that I can clout the ball and stop red-hot liners with the best of them. I dodged bullets four years in the Civil War, and reckon I'm spry enough to play ball.'

"Almost every evening Colonel Perry can be seen batting out flies to the youngsters on the Bullfrog City ball lot."

The above is "news" to us. We know Colonel Perry and realize that he is a hale and hearty man, capable of playing a good game of baseball even at his advanced age. But, nevertheless, we do not think that Mr. Perry has eight sons, with whom he could play the national game. If we are not mistaken, someone has confused the name "Perry" with that of "Terry." There are nine "Terry" boys and they have played together under the name of the "Terry" nine. There's a mistake somewhere.

HUNTING AND FISHING IN NEW JERSEY

Protection and Restocking Result in Vast Improvement In This State.

That New Jersey, one of the oldest and most thickly settled of the states, and situated between two of the nation's densest centers of population, has been able to maintain her fame for good hunting and fishing has long been a source of comment among outside sportsmen. Younger states have lost their natural resources and are striving hard to rebuild them, while in New Jersey, fishing and hunting, instead of deteriorating, are of late years actually showing a steady improvement as a result of protection and restocking.

State officials do not hesitate to declare that the only secret of this wonderful record of conservation is a strong and favorable sentiment of an outdoor loving public backing the firm enforcement of the fish and game protection laws. But for these laws and the work of the state's game wardens, every stream and lake in the state long ago would have been fished out and game would have become extinct in this commonwealth; game birds and animals would have been largely exterminated and the farmers' great winged army of defense—the millions of insect-eating birds—would have been practically wiped out by the thoughtless pot-hunter and alien.

The same condition governs seashore fishing. The deep sea angler owes as much to the protection of the fish and game law as does his brother who whips the inland streams for trout and bass and pike. A few years ago it was predicted that seashore angling was doomed because of the encroachments of the big pound nets and sea-sweeping seines, but the state saved the day and the fish by timely legislation.

CUBS RELEASE TWO.

Eddie Mulligan, shortstop, and McCarthy, a second baseman, were released yesterday to the Kansas City club, of the American Association, completing the deal by which William Wortman, shortstop, goes to the Cubs. Wortman is expected to play against the Giants today.

His Idea of Justice.

A well known Philadelphia lawyer tells of an enterprising man in that city who retained him to prosecute an action. Consultation with the plaintiff's witnesses revealed the fact that their stories were most conflicting and consequently far from convincing. This fact was communicated by the lawyer to his client, and the latter was advised to drop the suit. After some hesitation the client said that he would have a talk with the witnesses and the next day inform the lawyer what he would do in the matter. The next day the client appeared, quite cheerful and with the air of a man who has won a good fight.

"I have talked to all witnesses," said he, "and they all say they must have been mistaken when they conferred with you. They all see it alike now. I have also seen some of the jurymen, and they think I will win. Now, if there is such a thing as justice in law, we can't lose."—Chicago Herald.

Rebuked the Judge.

Of all the retorts made by barristers on unjust judges that recorded by Charles Phillipps, the famous pleader of the central criminal court, London, is perhaps best remembered. Phillipps, addressing a jury in defense of a man on trial for murder, was much embarrassed by the repeated interpositions of the judge, Baron Gurney, distinguished as one of the old fashioned "hanging" school of British jurists.

Phillipps, keeping his Irish temper well under control to the end, "got home" with this passage in the peroration of his address, looking full at Gurney the while:

"There are those on the bench who have the reputation of being 'convicting' judges. I neither envy them their reputation in this world nor their fate in the next."—London Globe.

Helping the Congregation.

The following notice was recently exhibited in a certain large church:

"The service on Sunday morning is at 11 a. m. The supposition that it is ten minutes later is a mistake.

"Young men are not excluded from the week night service.

"The seats in the front portion of the church have been carefully examined. They are quite sound and may be trusted not to give way.

"It is quite legitimate to join in the singing. The object of the choir is to encourage, not to discourage, the congregation."—Exchange.

An Invitation.

"I suppose," he said, "that you would scream if I attempted to kiss you?"

"What a pessimist you are!" she replied.—London Telegraph.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Feeding Babies.

No baby is able to digest starch before it is five months old. This is a fact well known to all physiologists and to all physicians who make a specialty of children. In a recent address before the Royal College of Physicians in London Dr. S. G. Moore, health officer of Huddersfield, said: "Surely it is not too much to ask that an infant be not slowly starved to death by having administered to it a substance which does not nourish it. The mind reels before a contemplation of the number of infants who have been slowly done to death in this horrible fashion during the past fifty years."

Too few mothers know that bread, potatoes, rice, cornstarch and such things cannot be digested by a baby's stomach. Mother's milk is the only safe food for infants. If it be necessary to resort to artificial feeding, then carefully sterilized cow's or goat's milk can be used, but never anything that contains starch.

When Icebergs Are Near.

Icebergs indicate their presence by a "blink" in the sky long before they may be seen. This blink is a path of sky above them lighter than that surrounding. It is caused by their capacity of refracting the sunlight or moonlight. An iceberg in a fog looks black. If of any height it will send back an echo when the whistle is blown. "By noting the time between the blast of the whistle and the reflected sound," say the men of the hydrographic office, "the distance of the object in feet may be approximately found by multiplying by 550."

No Use.

"Georgie, dear," said his mother, "you have been Mr. Coyne's office boy for nearly a year now, and he hasn't raised your salary yet. Can't you do something to attract his attention so he'll know you're alive?"

"I've tried that, mother," answered George. "I tipped the inkstand over this morning and spilled ink all over his white vest, and it didn't seem to help a bit."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

What You See.

"It is amazing," said the young man, "how it happens that when you have a swell girl on your arm and you are only 25 cents strong you will see restaurants in every spot where the day, before there were only vacant lots."—Exchange.

Dublin Castle.

Dublin castle has a history of over seven centuries, for it was King John who in 1204 ordered it to be built, "well fortified, with good fosses and thick walls strong enough to defend or control the city." Henry III., when about to visit Ireland in 1243, ordered the addition of a hall, "with sufficient windows and glass casements," and other improvements were made in succeeding reigns, particularly by the Duke of Clarence, son of Edward III., who as viceroy spent much money on the castle to make it convenient (as his father complained when called upon to pay) "for his sports and other pleasures."—London Standard.

Realistic Play.

"Can't you children play without continually ringing the doorbell?" asked mother, who had been trying in vain to get an afternoon nap.

"No, mother," said Alice, "it's quite impossible. You see, Edith and I are playing house, and Freddie is the collector."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Long Time Between Showers.

In 1912 rain fell in the nitrate territory of Chile for the first time in nearly half a century, and for the first time in man's memory the coast towns were free from dust.

Enough Said.

"Thrifty, is she?"

"Thrifty! I won't go into a long discourse. I merely tell you that she banks money in December."

RELIEF AUXILIARY ORGANIZED HERE

Officers Are Elected and Plans for Aiding Soldiers and Families Approved.

NEED FUND OF $1,000

George P. Mellick is Made Permanent Chairman of Body—Former Mayors Elected Honorary Vice-Presidents.

The first meeting of the executive committee of the Volunteers' Auxiliary of Plainfield and North Plainfield was held last evening on call of Mayor Calkins in the Council Chamber. There were present the following: Leighton Calkins, George P. Mellick, E. R. Ackerman, William Newcorn, William L. Smalley, W. R. Townsend, Dr. W. H. Murray, Dr. F. C. Wells, E. H. Bird, B. O. Bowers, Archibald Cox, Paul Burns, John J. Carroll, Marion Ackerman, E. F. Feickert, P. S. Kiely, Charles S. Sminck, Owen Fleming, Seymour Perkins, Mrs. W. B. Taylor, Mrs. William Newcorn, Dr. Frank C. Ard and George S. Clay.

Mayor Calkins stated that a constitution had been adopted by the organization committee which states the purpose of the Auxiliary to be:

"The purposes of this organization are to enable the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield to make generous and effective provision for the comfort of the men of this community who have answered and shall answer the call to arms, and so that their families may not suffer for lack of help if they are thus deprived of their usual and are without other means of support; and to take such other action from time to time as circumstances may require and as the hearts and minds of the people of this community, for love of country and in affectionate regard for the men at the front, may dictate."

The Mayor then called for nominations for permanent officers of the executive committee and the following were elected: George P. Mellick, permanent chairman; William Newcorn, permanent vice chairman; William R. Townsend, permanent secretary; Edward F. Feickert, permanent treasurer.

Mayor Calkins then turned the chair over to Mr. Mellick and in doing so stated to the committee that he would like to have it known that Mr. Mellick and former Senator Ackerman had already made a very generous personal contribution for the benefit of the men of Troop D by the purchase of an auto-truck at a cost of about $900, which the Troop had taken with them to the Mexican border and which added very materially to their comfort and convenience.

Mr. Mellick suggested the election of an honorary vice president and Mayor Calkins was chosen for that position.

The ex-mayors of Plainfield and North Plainfield were then elected honorary vice presidents, viz.: L. V. F. Randolph, Alexander Gilbert, Charles J. Fisk, James F. Buckle, G. W. V. Moy, Percy H. Stewart, John H. Van Winkle, Charles Place, J. H. Cooley, W. L. Saunders, Samuel Townsend, B. A. Hegeman, Newton B. Smalley, Robert Clark, Jr.

It was decided to appoint a small committee to be known as the finance committee, to have active charge of the details of management, such committee to have power to appoint other subcommittees such as a publicity committee and a supplies' committee.

The following were appointed to the finance committee: George P. Mellick, chairman; William Newcorn, vice chairman; William R. Townsend, secretary; Edward F. Feickert, treasurer; Charles H. Frost, Leslie R. Fort, Owen Fleming, William L. Smalley, Leighton Calkins, William J. Buttfield, James W. DeGraff, Ernest R. Ackerman, Henry C. White, Rev. B. M. Bogan, William H. Murray, M. D., A. W. Ransome, William G. Besler, Mrs. F. W. Wallace and Mrs. W. B. Taylor.

At the request of Mr. Calkins, Secretary Townsend read letters which the Mayor had received from the New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Relief committee and from the Plainfield Chapter of the National Special Aid Society, the Mercy Committee of New Jersey, the Washington Rock Chapter, Sons of American Revolution; and messages from the Belgian Relief and the Spanish War Veterans, all offering their aid and co-operation.

After the adjournment of the executive committee, the finance committee met and appointed a publicity committee consisting of Owen Fleming, chairman; Charles H. Frost, Lesie R. Fort.

Mr. Mellick, as chairman of the finance committe, was authorized to appoint a supplies' committee to consist of not exceeding nine of the women who are members of the executive committe. This committee was authorized to formulate from time to time and make recommendations to the finance committee regarding the needs of the men at the front and their families at home. The supplies' committee will also perform such other duties as the finance committee may from time to time delegate.

A statement was submitted by Mr. Mellick showing that $1,000 probably will be a sufficient amount to enable the organization to look out for the men and their families for the next two or three months unless the situation becomes more acute and unless Company K is ordered to the front. It was therefore suggested that the public be invited at this time to send in

CLARK MARTIN ILL AT M'ALLEN CAMP

Former Plainfield Boy in Critical Condition Suffering From Pneumonia.

New York State Troop Headquarters, McAllen, Tex., July 21.—Clark Martin, private attached to headquarters section of the Sixty-ninth regiment, is in a critical condition at the field hospital at McAllen, suffering from sunstroke and lobular pneumonia. His temperature was 104 degrees, and though he was still unconscious his condition appeared to be slightly better. Martin is thought to have gotten sunstroke before his arrival here with the regiment last Tuesday morning. He was transferred to the field hospital soon after the regiment reached Mission.

Private Martin formerly lived in Plainfield, where he is well known. He is twentyfour years old and the brother of Miss Sue Martin, of 20 Sycamore avenue, a trained nurse. Up to June, 1915, he made his home with his sister here, but left Plainfield at that time to assist in the management of Thomas M. Muir's camp at Lake Hopatcong.

Last fall he returned to Plainfield but later left for his former home in New York city, where he was married. He joined the Sixty-ninth regiment and was employed in the New York store of Gimbel Brothers.

GOVERNOR HOST TO POLITICIANS

Passaic, Bergen, Warren and Sussex Counties Represented in Gathering.

CANDIDATES ARE BUSY

Col. Colgate and Otto Wittpenn, Rivals for Gubernatorial Honors, in the Throng—Confab With Party Leaders.

(Staff Correspondent.)

Sea Girt, July 21.—It was Passaic, Bergen, Warren and Sussex counties day at the Little White House on the State camp ground and hundreds of politicians accepted Governor Fielder's invitation to take luncheon with him and discuss the political situation in those counties. The visitors included the leaders of all political faiths, and on the part of all factions in the two major parties were heard assurances that success would come to the standard of the particular person who happened to be talking.

Two candidates for Governor, Colonel Austen Colgate and Naval Officer H. Otto Wittpenn, were included in the throng, each trying to learn how his candidacy was being received in the counties represented. Warren and Sussex never having been known to give anything but a Democratic majority, those counties were given but little thought in the discussion, but in Passaic and Bergen the candidates were especially interested in learning what is going on. Colonel Colgate frankly admitted that his organization needed strengthening in Passaic and Bergen, and he was busy talking to Republican leaders from those counties all day.

Senators Samuel T. Munson, of Sussex, and Thomas Barber, of Warren, were among the early arrivals, but the Upper House representatives from the other counties were not on hand. Senator Hennessy, of Bergen, has not returned from a health-seeking trip to Battle Creek, and Senator Thomas F. McCran, of Passaic, is away on his wedding trip. Vice-Chancellor Vivian M. Lewis, of Paterson; Judge Allen R. Shay, of Sussex; Judge Abram Klenert, of Passaic; Judge Joseph M. Roseberry, of Warren, and Judge William H. Siefert, of Bergen, represented the judiciary. Assistant Secretary of State William M. Dill was also among the visitors from Passaic county, as was former Senator Peter J. McGinnis.

Others from Passaic county who accepted the Governor's invitation were Harry B. Haines, Mangold H. Ellenbogen, Rev. A. H. Stein, Civil Service Commissioner George H. Burke, Water Supply Commissioner George F. Wright, Dr. William A. Clark and Mayor Radcliffe, of Paterson.

The Bergen county delegation contained E. H. Sturtevant, a member of the State Board of Education, the Addison Elys, father and son, Navigation Commissioner John M. Ward, Director W. P. Eager, of the Board of Freeholders, Warren G. Winne, former Senator James A. C. Johnson, J. D. Probet, Walter Christie, George Van Buskirk, the Democratic county chairman, H. D. Terhune, former Assistant Postmaster General William M. Johnston, A. L. Banister, Jose M. Dias, Colonel James Kipp and Robert A. Sibbald.

P. J. Dolan, the Dmocratic leader of Sussex county, and his son, Prosecutor William A. Dolan, Dr. Edward A. Ayres, of the State Board of Health, were among the Sussex visitors.

SURPRISE PARTY GIVEN TO RAYMOND CALE

Raymond Cale was the guest of honor at a surprise party given by Miss E. E. Barnes, of 306 Plainfield avenue, last night. The evening was spent in playing games and dancing. Venable Brothers provided the music for the former. Refreshmers were served at a late hour.

Those present includdd Misses Maud Lambert, Gladys Stern, Alice Francis, Mrs. F. Anderson, Eleanor Greene, George Saunders, Pearl Jones, Helen Harvey, Lizzie Waller, E. E. Barnes, M. Barnes, Ralph Greene, W. Franklin, Harry Kline, Fred Kline, Foster Kline, George Taylor, William Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cale.

MEETING POSTPONED.

A committee of six members of the Business Men's Association journeyed to South Plainfield this morning, expecting to meet with President McCarter, of the Public Service Corporation. Mr. McCarter did not appear, however, and the meeting which was to have been in regards to the proposed trolley extension to South Plainfield, did not take place.

TRAIN VICTIM IDENTIFIED.

Oscar Olson, who was injured on the Lehigh Valley Tuesday, still remains in a semi-conscious condition at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he has been since the accident. A telephone call was received at the hospital last night saying the boy lived at 338 Union street, Elizabeth.

WANT SUBURBAN TROLLEY SERVICE

Representative Merchants Hold Conference at South Plainfield.

OUTLOOK IS PROMISING

President McCarter, of P. S. C., Unable to Attend Meeting, as Expected—Another Conference is Planned.

Busines men of this city and South Plainfield met in the office of the Spicer Manufacturing Company in South Plainfield this noon, to consider the proposed extension of the trolley system to South Plainfield. It was expected that Thomas C. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation, would be preesnt. However, owing to the fact that Mr. McCarter had other business engagements that prevented his presence, nothing definite was done in regard to the propose dplan. It is expected that Mr. McCarter will be able to attend a similar meeting in the near future.

Although it was impossible for the president of the Public Service Corporation to attend, much enthusiasm was shown at the meeting and it was demonstrated that the citizens of Plainfield and South Plainfield are determined to have a trolley service, along any route that the Public Service engineers deem fit, but fhich has for its terminus, South Plainfield, where almost one thousand citizens of this city are employed. At the present time the men have to get to their work as best they can, although auto buses are provided by their employes.

At the meeting were Senator Charles A. Reed, David T. Kenny, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Herman Schwed, president of the Business Men's Association; William Newcorn, president of the Board of Trade; William L. Smalley, mayor of North Plainfield; Thomas C. Vail, superintendent of the Spicer plant; Charles L. Dana, of the Spicer Company, and Samuel Rothbirg and other representative citizens. A mesage from Mayor Leighton Calkins, of this city, was read and met with the hearty approval of those present. In the message the Mayor spoke heartily in favor of the plan and seemed to coincide with the views of the committee appointed to discuss the matter with Mr. McCarter. The municipality of South Plainfield was represented by a town committee and entered into the spirit of the meeting with a will, realizing that the extension of the trolley system means much to their community.

Charles L. Dana, head of the Spicer Company, in discussing the meeting stated that he was very much in favor of the proposed extension and would do all in his power to help the cause along. He said that the need of a trolley line into South Plainfield was apparent and that it would be a vast improvement over the nondescript character of conveyance by which the workmen get to the shops in South Plainfield. It is expected that Mr. McCarter will make his promised visit to the village in a short time and, if enthusiasm counts for anything, he is sure to be impressed by the aspect of the gathering that will greet him.

TENNIS WEEK AT LONGWOOD.

Boston, Mass., July 21.—Many of the foremost racquet wielders of the East and West are turning up for the events at Longwood next week and the prospect is bright for the most notable tennis tournament that has taken place hereabouts in some years. It will be the twenty-sixth annual tournament for singles on the grounds of the Longwood Cricket Club. There will also be contested the championship of the East in doubles, the winners to enter the play-off for the right to challenge in the national tournament. In addition there will be held for the first time the New England sectional lawn tennis championships in junior singles and boys' singles.

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town. Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

R. A. Voehringer Describes Thrilling Experience as Prisoner on "Appam."

WAS ENROUTE TO CAMP

The monthly meeting of the local branch of the "Vaterlandshilfe," held in Saengerbund Hall last night, was one of the most enthusiastic gatherings held by the society. President A. W. Hauck presided during the session. Addresses were made by the recently elected members of the National Board of Relief society, who were present. These were Dr. L. Sattler, A. M. Scholl and Emil Germanus, all of Newark. Mr. Sattler told of his experience in Germany during his recent five months' trip to that country.

Much interest was manifested in the talk given by R. A. Voehringer, of Africa, the business manager of the Basel Mission Society of the African Gold Coast, who told of his voyage on the British steamer "Appam," at the time she was brought to this country as a German war prize. At the beginning of the hostilities, Mr. Voehringer was interned by the English authorities in Africa, and in January, 1915, he was to be sent on board the "Appam" with 600 German civilians to one of the English concentration camps. An accident in which he suffered injuries to his legs prevented his making the trip, however. On the second trip of the steamer he was again held back because of his isolation with an attack of pneumonia. On the third journey, however, he in company with fifteen other Germans, among whom three were women, were on board the vessel.

At this time Mr. Voehringer told of the stops at the various ports and the treatment to which the passengers were subjected. Shortly after leaving the last port the crew of the "Appam" saw another vessel in the distance. Coming in closer two big guns were visible and the "Appam" turned by and stopped. The other ship proved to be the German sea raider "Moewe." Boats were lowered and several officers and marines came on board the "Appam."

At that time the crew of the latter vessel learned that the raider had captured six English vessels, had sunk four of them, while the other two were still at large. The "Moewe" took over 37,000 pounds of gold bar and transferred a number of prisoners and officers from the "Moewe" to the "Appam." Mr. Voehringer stated that the average rate of speed made by the "Appam" was from 8 to 10 miles an hour, and it was not until the night of January 31 that the lights along the American Coast were visible. During the meeting $37.15 was collected for the German Relief Fund.

PIANO COMPANY FAILS TO RECOVER PROPERTY

Martin B. Stutsman, representing the Mathushek & Son Piano Company, of this city, failed to get a verdict in the District Ciurt, New Brunswick, yesterday, when he brought suit to replevin a piano in possession of Miss Hattie Robinson, proved that the piano was not in the jurisdiction of the court, being out of the county, and no cause of action resulted.

The piano was originally purchased by Miss Robinson's brother and upon his death she bought the instrument. The plaintiffs brought suit to recover money which was still said to be due when Mr. Robinson died. Mr. Moy proved to the court that Miss Robinson had secured the piano by paying a stated sum and was entitled to the property.

TERRIFIC COUNTER ATTACKS ARE CHECKED BY FRENCH AND HAIG'S FORCES TAKE 1,000 YARD TRACT

GERMAN POSITIONS OUTSIDE OF PERONNE WEDGE ASSAULTED HEAVILY BY BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS THIS MORNING.

FOCH WINS TRENCHES ALONG FOUR MILE SECTOR

German Losses Since July 1 Estimated at 200,000—Allied Losses Also Heavy But Inestimatable—French Took 2,900 Prisoners in Days' Engagement—Germans Continued Heavy Bombardment of French Positions in the Verdun Sector During the Night.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Paris, July 21.—A terrific German counter attack launched against the French positions south of Soyecourt, on the Somme sector, was repulsed with heavy losses, the French War Office announced today. Outside of this attack the night was calm on the west front. In the Verdun sector the Germans continued their heavy bombardment of French positions, the artillery duel being extremely violent in the sectors of Chattancourt and Fleury.

German Positions Attacked Fiercely.

London, July 21.—Vigorous attacks on the German positions outside the Peronne wedge were renewed by the Britsh and French today.

The French made the greater gain, for the British are meeting sterner resistance. General Foch's troops carried the German first line along a six-mile front south of the Somme, and won trenches along a four-mile sector north of the river.

General Haig's men have made further progress in Delville Wood and Longueval, the scene of the heavy German counter attack, and have struck northward again, winning 1,000 yards of trenches above the Bazentin-Longueval line.

German losses since July 1 are estimated at more than 200,000. Several regiments have been practically annihilated. Reports from Belgium tell of an endless string of hospital trains going eastward nightly.

Allied Loss Heavy.

As for the Allied losses, it is impossible to give an estimate. They, too, must be exceedingly heavy, for an advance under modern conditions, through mazes of redoubts and entanglements, is costly. But the toll of attack and counter-attack has not diminished the fierceless of the battle. On both the French and British lines today the struggle continues, with the Germans contesting furiously every inch of ground.

The French offensive, in addition to the marked advantages it realized on both sides of the river, relieved the pressure on the British, who have been engaged for forty-eight hours in a death grapple at Longueval. The proof of this was seen in Haig's advance north of Bazentin.

From Estrees to the height of Vetmandovillers the French troops captured the entire first German position. That is a distance of three miles. From Estrees to Barleaux, three miles further to the northeast, they took the first line trenches.

Took 2,900 Prisoners.

The official announcement of these successes adds that on both sides of the River Somme the French took 2,900 prisoners in the day's engagements.

South of the Somme the French began their attack Wednesday night, with the result that all the first line trenches from Soyecourt to Barleux fell into their hands.

London, July 21.—Today's official report from Sir Douglas Haig to the War Office announces further success for the British troops in Picardy. It shows also that the fighting is of a terrific character, the Germans striving to regain positions taken from them. British troops succeeded in capturing Fourex Wood, which the Teuton soldiers had strongly fortified, but the enemy immediately made a counter attack which was partly successful. Severe fighting is also in progress at the Leipzig Redoubt, another strong German fortification north of the Somme, as well as in Delville Wood.

London, July 21.—A wireless despatch from Rome transmitto Sophia advices stating that Bulgaria is seriously considering making peace and that Premier Radoslav XX has summoned the Sobranje to discuss the situation.

Steamers Sunk.

The British steamer Yser has been sunk, according to an announcement by Lloyds. A despatch from Algieres says that the British steamer Grangemoor, 3,198 tons, and owned by the Moor Line, of New Castle, has been sunk by a submarine. The crew has been landed.

DECK HANDS STRIKE, COMMUTERS HELD UP

Early Morning Traffic to New York is Upset When Ferryboats Fail to Run.

The large army of New Jersey commuters employed in New York and who have been depending upon the ferry-boats to take them across East river, were confronted with a perplexing situation early this morning upon reaching Jersey City, when they found all the ferry-boats tied up to the piers and not a wheel stirring. Hurried questioning brought forth the explanation that the deck hands on the boats had gone on a strike. The engineers were still at their posts, but it was found impossible to operate the boats without deck hands.

There was wild confusion for a few hours. Many of the commuters "beat it" for the Hudson tubes, while others, not so anxious to reach the city, took their own time. There were not a few who returned to their homes. These included some Plainfielders.

Toward noon the various railroad companies were able to get a sufficient number of "strike-breakers" to take the places of the strikers, and the boats began making their regular trips. The ferry service was crippled from Communipaw to 114th streets, and the commuters traveling on all lins who have been accus- on all lines who have been accusiderably delayed in reaching their places of business.

REPAIRING BRICK PAVE.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett's men have been busy the past few days repairing breaks in the orick pavement. The work of spreading Tarvia is still being pushed as rapidly as possible in different sections of the city.

FEDERAL RESERVE SERVICE EXTENDED

Residents May Now Cash Checks at Bank in System Through Postoffice

Postmaster Alvin E. Hoagland has just received the following communication from Postmaster-General Burleson that will be of considerable interest to a number of local business men: "Postmasters are authorized to receive checks from Federal Reserve banks drawn upon State banks, non-members of the Federal Reserve system, and they must comply promptly with requests of the Federal Reserve Board to collect these checks in currency and to remit currency to the Federal Reserve Bank by registered mail.

From the above order it would seem that the Government is taking steps to prevent banks that are non-members of the Federal Reserve system from charging exorbitant prices for collecting checks. If any one residing in a city that has not a bank in the Federal Reserve, as is the case in Plainfield, wishes to have a check cashed they may, instead of doing it through a local bank, send the check to the postmaster in a city with a Federal Reserve Bank and the postmaster will cash it and send the money back by registered mail.

TO BRING WALOPLE BACK.

Chief of Police Kiely left for Brooklyn this morning to get Albert Walpole, the leader in the Netherwood "fake holdup," and bring him back to this city. He will probably be arraigned before City Judge William G. DeMeza tomorrow and held for the Grand Jury, as the other three in the escapade have been.

BOTH FOUND GUILTY IN "BACK YARD SCRAP"

A "back-yard scrap," in which Mrs. Joseph Brodack and Mrs. John Stephani, neighbors residing in the Equator Park section, were the principals, had its termination in the borough court last evening, when Mrs. Brodack was arraigned before Judge von Minden on complaint of Mrs. Stephani. The judgment of the court was that the complainant was as much to blame as the defendant and in dismissing the case he told both that each must stay on her own side of the fence and keep her chickens there also. Both were warned that if they appeared before the court again fines would be in order.

COURT DROPS ACTION AGAINST PRACTICAL JOKERS

Because no ordinance or statute could be found that covered the case, the action brought against Martin and James Colvin and Arthur Force was dismissed last night by Justice P. F. Kaine, of South Plainfield. The three boys arraigned for a "fake holdup" several months ago, when they reported to the police that while they were walking to South Plainfield, where they intended to purchase an automobile, they were held up and robbed of $200.

Later, following an investigation, the authorities learned that the trio were playing a joke. The matter has been pending for some time, and when the boys were brought before Justice Kaine last night, it was found that there was no statute under which they could be punished. City Judge W. G. De Meza represented Force, while William Newcorn appeared for the Colvin brothers.

Clean Your House The Right Way

Carpet drawn up by suction, shaken, vibrated and swept by soft hair brush.

BEATING ruins your rugs and carpets,

—Because the violent blows of rough sticks displace the binding cords of the warp,

—Causing the nap to to fall out.

Do this work in the correct way—the Hoover Suction Sweeper way.

It shakes, sweeps and suction cleans in one operation,

—Thereby removing all dirt, thread, lint and surface dust,

—Together with every particle of deeply embedded dirt.

A Hoover, sufficiently large for the average house, costs $47.50. Yours to use for $4.75 down—$4.75 monthly.

We'll Give You a Special Demonstration

Your written or 'phoned request will bring a courteous representative of ours to prove the Hoover's worth to you. Our new booklet, "The Right Way to Clean House," contains a lot of valuable information. The demonstrator will bring you a copy.

FEDERAL AID FOR RURAL HIGHWAYS

$85,000,000 is Authorized in Recent Legislation to Improve Roads.

Washington, D. C., July 21.—The sum of $85,000,000 of Federal funds is made available for the construction of rural roads, by the passage of the Federal Aid Road Bill which became a law on July 11, 1916. Of this sum, $75,000,000 is to be expended for the construction of rural post roads under co-operative arrangements with the highway departments of the various States, and $10,000,000 to be expended for roads and trails within or partly within the National forests. The Act limits the Federal Government's share in road work in co operation with the States to 50 per cent. of the estimated cost of construction. Federal aid may be extended to the construction of any rural post road, excluding all streets or roads in towns having a population of 2,500 or more except the portions of such streets or roads on which the houses are, on an average, more than 200 feet apart.

Five million dollars is made available for expenditure during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and thereafter the appropriation is increased at the rate of five millions a year until 1921, when the sum provided is twenty-five millions, making a total of ten million dollars, is made available for the development of roads and trails wholly or partly within the National forests.

The class of roads to be built and the method of construction are to be mutually agreed upon by the Secretary of Agriculture and the State highway departments.

The Act provides that after making necessary deductions for administering its provisions, not to exceed 3 per cent. of the appropriation for any one fiscal year, the Secretary of Agriculture shall apportion the remainder of each year's appropriation.

SCHOOL TERM OF 160 DAYS FAVORED

U. S. Commissioner Claxton Believes Change Would Give Better Results.

The first problem in the program of the Federal Bureau of Education in its nation-wide campaign for better rural schools is that of a longer school term. "A school term of not less than 160 days for each child" is the minimum term according to Commissioner Claxton, which all States with a shorter term should strive to reach.

The latest data (1910) available concerning the length of a term for urban schools and for rural schools separately give the average number of days school was in session during the year for urban schools, 184.3, and for rurtl schools 137.7. "For the United States as a whole the urban schools are in session 46.6 days longer each year than the rural schools," says A. C. Monahan, the bureau's specialist in rural school administration.

In Rhode Island and Connecticut, the difference between the urban and rural school term is 3.8 days, while in South Carolina it is 88.5 days. The average number of days in the rural school term in the several States ranges from 90 in New Mexico to 190 in Rhode Island. Four States—New Mexico, North and South Carolina, and Arkansas—each had in 1910 a rural school term of less than 100 days, while Florida had a rural term of exactly 100.1 days. "But," declares Mr. Monahan, "these averages do not tell the whole story. There is much variation above and below the average, there are many school districts, and even many counties, where the term for the past year was not over 60 days."

From the reports for the school year ending June 30, 1915, there were fifteen rural school districts in Arkansas that held no school; sixty school districts with only two months of school; and 557 school districts with only three months of school. And yet a great majority of the town and city schools in Arkansas have a school term of eight or nine months. That there are equally deplorable conditions in the rural schools of other States will be shown in the next talk. This discrimination against the farm boy and the farm girl in free school privileges is not just or wise.

LEHIGH VALLEY TO BUILD MODERN PIER IN NEW YORK

One more modern and up to date pier for New York harbor was formally started yesterday when the Lehigh Valley began work on a structure which will be known as Pier 44, East River. The new pier is at the foot of Jackson street and will have a frontage of 260 feet on South street.

For more than a year the Lehigh Valley has had a barge station at the point, but business in the adjacent territory has developed rapidly recently and a new and modern structure was demanded. The pier will be a two-story affair, 60 feet wide. The bulkheads will afford facilities for four car floats.

The second story will be used partly for offices, but the balance for storage purposes. There will be a freight elevator; two bag, barrel and box elevators and two chutes for the same purpose. A twenty-ton automatic truck scale and a three-ton automatic be a part of the equipment.

The territory adjacent to the pier is a centre of the flour industry and it will be used especially for the handling of this commodity. There will be ample facilities, however, for handling package freight generally.

E. H. BONNELL HOUSE IN OLD SHORT HILLS SOLD

The mansion and grounds of the late Elias H. Bonnell in Great Hill road, in the Old Short Hills section of Millburn, have been sold to Frank V. Skiff, of Chicago, title being passed from Mrs. Mabel Bonnell Crane, of Caldwell, sister of the late owner. Mrs. Crane came in possession of the premises through her brother's death. The transaction includes a large concrete dwelling, with about twenty rooms, located on the north side of the road and situated on the side of the mountain, and a plot of twenty-eight acres of land. The new owner paid $55,000 for the place. Mr. Skiff expects to make his home there.

The house was built about five years ago by Mr. Bonnell, who was president of the Second National Bank of Orange. It is said Mr. Bonnell spent at least $100,000 on the grounds and new dwelling. Not long after Mr. Bonnell and his wife took possession Mrs. Bonnell died. She was before her marriage Miss Brunson, of this city. Less than a year later Mr. Bonnell also expired. In his will he left the Old Short Hills place to his sister.

The house is said to be one of the finest in the vicinity and is so located on the side of the mountain as to afford a view to the west of about twenty miles.

JIM BLUEJACKET NOW MILWAUKEE BREWER

Former Federal League Indian Hurler Now Full-Fledged "Teetotaler."

Jim Bluejacket, formerly a pitcher with the Brooklyn Federal Leaguers, has been signed up by the Milwaukee American Association club, with which Jack Martin, of this city, plays. Bluejacket is an Indian and was more or less successful with the Brookfeds, although he did nothing startling during his season's stay with that club. His addition to the Brewers brings the total of full-blooded Indians on that club up to two. Jim Thorpe is the other Redskin.

Jack Martin has been going much better of late. Jack has been hitting a little more consistently and has been figuring in eevry rally or spurt engineered by the team. In a game last Tuesday, the signal was given for a "squeeze play." Martin carried out his part of the program all right, but Jim Thorpe fell asleep and died a hard death. In the same game Jack polled out a neat single, scoring a man.

MATHEWSON IS NOW MANAGER OF REDS

"Christy" Goes to Cincinnati With Best Wishes of All New York.

After sixteein years as a member of the New York Giants, the erstwhile premier pitcher of professional baseball, Christy Mathewson, will return to Cincinnati tomorrow to manage the Reds, the team that allowed him to slip through its fingers without a trial.

With Mathewson comes two of his teammates, Outfielder Roush and Infielder McKechnie, and New York obtains Charles Herzog, manager of the local team, who was a member of the Giants before coming to Cincinnati. Outfielder Wade Killifer also goes to the New York Club.

Some years ago Manager McGraw of the Giants established the rule that he would never ask Mathewson to retire from a game in which he was pitching. In principle this rule was adhered to to the last. A statement issued by President Hempstead of the Giants today revealed the fact that it was not until Matty had asked for permission to negotiate for a managerial berth that the idea of trading him entered their minds.

Although the deal involved only the two Cincinnati men for the three New York players, a moment after it was completed President Herrmann announced that Mathewson would be in charge of the team, beginning tomorrow.

ABSTAINERS ENTERTAIN GARWOOD ON SUNDAY

The Tabs will play the Y. M. A. baseball team of Garwood on Sunday. This team is not the one that was defeated by the Tabs last Sunday and is considered much better than that aggregation. The manager of the Y. M. A. outfit has stated that his is "the" representative team of Garwood. His line-up includes such well-known stars as Fay Washburn, Johnny Gray, Mason and the Brown brothers.

According to the press agent of the Tabs, "Manager Scott will lead his brave men to victory." Jack Denny will do the pitching, with Teeling behind the bat. The rest of the Fourth Street team will be the same as that used in City League contests.

CY YOUNG'S NATAL DAY.

Forty years ago today Irving M. Young, better known to the baseball world as "Young Cy" was born. He is now a full grown man of large stature, being five feet nine inches in height and weighing 180 pounds. As a pitcher he had few peers, and began his somewhat varied career with the Woodsville, N. H., Y. M. C. A. His days in fast company spent with the Boston Nationals, Pittsburgh Nationals and the Chicago Americans. He bats and throws left handed.

GEORGE CHURCH WINS.

George M. Church attained one of the notable achievements of the tennis year yesterday afternoon when he defeated Willis E. Davis, of California, national court champion, in the finals of the singles event at the Rockaway Hunting Club invitation tournament in straight sets. The score was 7—5, 6—4, 7—5. Not since he began competing in the East, early in the season, has the Coast star bowed to the superior play of a rival contestant.

FOR JERSEY TENNIS TITLE.

Baggs, the present champion and holder of the Spring Lake Casino Challenge cup in the challenge round.

"REUBEN HAL" PACER TAKES JUNIOR EVENT

Driven by Adam C. Blair, Montclair Horse Easily Wins Heats.

Red Gift, a Goshen horse, piloted by J. I. Townsend, was the winner of the Junior League cup at the opening of the amateur three-day meet on the Weequahic Park track today. Red Gift captured the trophy only after a battle royal with Kitty L. Bellini, also a Goshen entrant, in the 2:15 trot.

Reuben Hal added to his laurels by winning the 2:21 pace. Reuben Hal is owned by A. C. Hensler, the brewer, of Newark, and has never been beaten in a heat in his three races.

Pierre Lorrilard, Jr. handled the reins of his pair of entries, Notice B and Pagan, but failed to land in the prize class.

A popular victory was that of R. G. Husson's black mare, Toddess Sheet, over Berean, the speedy Boston horse, in the 2:26 trot.

The meet is scheduled to continue tomorrow and Saturday, and is likely to run over into next week, owing to the large number of entries.

In the 2:21 class (pacing) Reuben Hal, owned by A. C. Hensler, of Montclair, and driven by Adam C. Blair, of this city, captured first honors. The time for first and second heats was 2:15½ and 2:17¾, respectively.

I. C. S. FRATERNITY TO JOIN CAMPAIGN

Abraham Lincoln Chapter Will Aid Big Industrial Preparedness Movement.

Realizing the need of industrial preparedness for their country, as well as the military training, members of Abraham Lincoln Chapter, No. 122, I. C. S. Fraternity of the World, at a meeting last night in the Frost building, entered enthusiastically into the big industrial preparedness campaign now being conducted by the schools throughout the country. In addition to liberal cash and merchandise rewards, students will have an excellent opportunity to win some of the twenty-nine grand prizes, among which are a five-passenger Overland automobile, three motorcycles and twenty-five trips to Scranton, in October, at which time that city celebrates its fiftieth anniversary and twenty-fifth celebration of the I. C. S.

Last night's meeting was one marked by many interesting addresses. The chair was occupied by Harry W. Swivel, the president and in absence of Secretary C. Ivan Hill, who is enjoying his vacation at Lake George and Northern Nek York. Alex. A. Doig was appointed secretary pro tem.

The industrial preparedness committee appointed is: Alex. A. Doig, chairman, J. Sayre Slaton, and Clarence E. Tilley. R. M. Aldrich was made director of publicity for the campaign.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

A new chapter of the big fraternity, that is represented in nearly all principal cities of the Union and many foreign countries, including a chapter in Shanghai, China, was organized last night at Elizabeth. The local chapter sent a telegram of congratulations.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES ENROUTE TO BORDER

One Result of Distribution of Testaments Contributed by Plainfield People.

The following extract from a letter written by one of the New Jersey Y. M. C. A. secretaries at Douglas should be a source of satisfaction to the generous hearted people of this city, who have contributed to the fund which made possible the purchase of the Testaments, one of which found its way into the hands of the man referred to.

"One of the men told me of a little incident which shows how well worth while our efforts are. He had a New Testament handed to him just before he left Sea Girt and it so happened that he was the only one in his car who had a testament. While they were on the way down on Sunday, one of the fellows, knowing he had a Testament, suggested that they have a religious service. He got out his Testament, read a portion of it and they sang a hymn or two. While it was a very simple service he said it changed the whole atmosphere in the car for the rest of the day."

TROOP D DEPRIVED OF ITS AUTOMATICS

Lot Drawing to See Which Detachments Would Use Weapons Available.

Douglas, Ariz., July 21.—Because the government has not provided enough pistols for the squadron of cavalry here, it was necessary for the four troops to draw lots to see which would use the few in camp. Troop B, of Red Bank and Troop C, of Newark, drew the winners and left Troop D, of Plainfield and Troop A, of Newark, without their weapons. As soon as the lot drawing was over the Plainfielders and Newarkers on the losing end were called upon to surrender their automatics and were supplied with old-fashioned 38-calibre pistols. Instead of new saddle equipment for war strength the troops will get old-fashioned saddles.

Rejections resulting from physical examinations, and the disposition of many of the men here to seek release from present service under the terms of a recent War Department order, are factors which, it becomes apparent today, will probably contribute materially to the depletion of the ranks of Jersey troops on the border.

Two campanies a day passing under the scrutinies of the medical officers, the physical examination of the troops is passing expeditiously. The men are in ignorance as to how many are to be rejected, but it is not expected that many members of Companies A and B will be turned down.

Captain Thomas Barton Freeman, of Company B and Second Lieutenant Charles H. Kolb, of Company A, both of the First Regiment, were rejected yesterday by the medical examiners. Freeman, whose disqualification was caused by the lack of vision in one eye, declares he will go to Washington from her to appeal, pointing out that Lieutenant Charles E. Hild, of the Fifth Regiment, rejected because of physical defects, got back nevertheless. Some other officers are worried, for it is known that the examination will include everybody up to Colonel John D. Frazer.

There are 4,000 men here, whereas there were 4,688 at Sea Girt, so it is seen that the proportion of men over age in the First Regiment was large. There will be a falling off of fully 150 men under the Wood order, providing for the return home of family men, it is thought here, and there are indications that twice that number will make application to go back.

In the First Regiment the applicants include one mounted command of twenty-seven men who have taken advantage of the privilege, extended by the order.

Cases All to Be Investigated.

Affidavits based on good reasons for desiring relief from duty will be demanded by the commanders, and soldier relief committees of the various municipalities in which the guardsmen have their homes will be called on to make investigations of statements by applicants and if they are bona fide, sign affidavits to that effect.

A number of the well to do men contemplate making applications, claiming that there presence here is bringing no good results and that their business at home is neglected. Moreover, it is known that frie[illegible] of Many officers on duty here are bringing pressure to bear in Washington with a view to having the New Jersey troops withdrawn within a month. This assertion is, it is understood, that business is suffering through the absence of so many men. The headquarters of this movement is said to be in Paterson.

Any such move as this is sure to be combated by officers of the regular army, as many regular commands have been weakened by the taking of men for new regiments which are not yet ready for duty. In the throes of reconstruction the regular army is weaker than in years, and the guard is absolutely needed. The opinion is openly expressed here that the men back of the movement for the return of the troops are ones who want to go home, but who are ashamed to quit.

Lieutenants John A. Scott and Holmes E. Dager yesterday passed the foramal examinations for first lieutenant and second lieutenant, respectively, in Company I, First Regiment. They were elected while the company was coming down from the North. Five other officers of the Fourth and Fifth regiments also passed.

Officers and men of Company I, First Regiment, presented a seal ring to Captain Arthur D. Marsh yesterday, on the occasion of his forty-third birthday.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JULY 21, 1916.

MUST THEY BE DRAFTED?

A perplexing question has arisen in connection with the National Guard forces that have been sent to the International border. General Crowder, the judge advocate, head of the legal department of the United States army, has been looking into the action of Congress whereby it sought to make United States volunteers of State militia and the National Guard. Congress decided that if the militia and guard took the oath to serve the United States in addition to the oath to serve the State they could be ordered out of the country for service.

With few exceptions our Plainfield and New Jersey soldiers accepted the oath and about 50,000 of the men who thus, as they supposed, had become United States volunteers, were sent to the border for service, and to enter Mexico in case of war. General Crowder's investigation has resulted in an opinion that the second United States oath does not federalize the guard and militia, hence the time and expense of the "federalizing" were in vain.

Thus it happens that not a soldier of the guard and the militia on the border could be sent into Mexico no matter how greatly they might be needed. President Wilson, judging from news from Washington, is greatly perplexed. He has the right to draft the militia which would enable him to use them in Mexico, but he fears to do so at this time, for Carranza might look upon the drafting as evidence that he, President Wilson, is not placing complete confidence in the de facto president of Mexico.

The act of drafting 100,000 volunteers into the service, after they have patriotically responded for the service and taken the U. S. oath, had no weight in delaying the draft. It is the fear of hurting Mr. Carranza's feelings that is putting off the hour of draft.

The situation is bound to become embarrassing to the New Jersey soldiers on the border and the entire National Guard that Congress has "federalized," accepted as an important part of the national defense, and directed that it be recruited up to more than half a million. In other words, Congress has planned an army of fifty thousand State soldiers, at quite an expense to the general government, not a man of which can be ordered out of the country, unless the President issues an order drafting them into service.

It must be very easy for the average citizen to understand that men who have volunteered to serve both the State and the United States will not look with pleasure upon being drafted into the service by the President.

WIRELESS ON THE WAY.

The application for patents covering an invention for a wireless telephone apparatus working through the ground may mean the rapid advance of the wireless principles for telephone work, or it may not. But it no doubt does mean another step in advance. The California inventor who is the applicant for patent papers has technical standing to back up his claims in electrical work. He declares he has worked his invention with perfect results over a distance of 50 miles. He claims to have found some new facts which will help him vastly in developing his invention to the commercially profitable stage.

The promising fact in this case is that the inventor, without special pains or apparatus, successfully operated his 'phone over a distance of 50 miles. Those who remember the beginnings in the wire telephone circuits have no trouble in recalling that it was a long time before the best apparatus worked with anything like satisfactory results over a line much shorter than 50 miles. In fact, when telephones began to be operated up to that distance there was something of wonder expressed at its development. If the wireless 'phone can make a practical beginning at a distance that was a long step in advance for the metallic system there is no reason why we should not continue to trust this inventor.

The wireless telephone for ordinary use is not here, but it is on its way.

WORST PLACE IN THE CITY FOR A TERMINAL.

Plainfield has yet to satisfactorily solve the trolley terminal problem. To the minds of business men located on the main street the Somerset junction is one of the worst messes ever thrust upon the public. Oftentimes trolleys held up in respecting signals at this intersection block traffic on Front and Somerset streets for five minutes at a stretch. Besides seriously inconveniencing those having occasion to use the thoroughfares for vehicular travel this tie-up forms a trap for accidents and it is a wonder that someone has not been badly injured. Why the city ever allowed the Public Service to establish a terminal at this narrow and busy point is a puzzle and merchants in that vicinity are beginning to wonder just how long they are going to be made to suffer.

GIVE THEM A ROUSING SEND-OFF.

Another detachment of Plainfield men entrain for the State camp at Sea Girt tomorrow noon. This delegation foresees little likelihood of service on the border, but nevertheless it is sacrificing summer vacations, business plans and home pleasures for a fortnight's army training to the end that soldiers will be fashioned from raw recruits. One month ago Plainfield gave a troop of cavalrymen a wonderful send-off as it departed for Sea Girt. Is it not right to expect that Company K be given a similar adieu tomorrow? The militiamen will be subjected to a rigorous army routine and they have staring them in the face some real work.

Mosquitoes have arrived in Arizona, according to a report from the troopers. Funny we haven't missed them around here. But if those Jersey boys ever get an army of trained skeeters rounded up they'll be able to direct a wonderful air raid on Villa's holdings.

On the Spur of the Moment

When the Circus Is Coming.

Pick the apples, pound the rugs,
Also pick potater bugs;
Run the errands every day,
In a most obligin' way.
Never stop to question why;
Do exactly as we're told.
Don't give ma a chance to scold.
Haven't spoken one cross word;
Not a spankin' has occurred
Round our place for most a week;
Sort of quiet, so to speak.

Dad says us kids must be sick,
Wants to call a doctor, quick.
He can't see why we're so good;
If he'd read the signs he could.
Answer's on most every fence,
Stuck regardless of expense;
And if Dad fails to observe it,
We must jar his mind a bit.
'Tain't no snap to be straight-laced
For two weeks and solemn-faced,
Workin' mornin', noon and night,
Tell you what, it's sure a fright.
Hope that we can just hold down,
Till that circus somes to town.

Get Wise.

that he needs the dough,
He knows that he can get it if he

He sits him down and figures out a

And then he writes an ad, and starts a correspondence

Short story writing is a thing they

Although they do not teach how to

They tell you how to darn a sock, or how to make a speech,
They also teach you how to

They teach you how to clean straw

Or how to run a trunk railroad and make a million cool;
If there is anything on earth that you would like to know,
Just send your check and leave it to the correspondence school.

NEW JERSEY SOLDIERS' RELIEF LEAGUE TO SUPPLY GUARDSMEN ON THE BORDER

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Sea Girt, July 21.—Through the co-operation of organizations in every county in the State, not a single desire for neceessities on the part of the citizen soldiers of New Jersey at the Mexican border, is to be unsupplied, provided such desire is made known to the folks back home. That was determined at a meeting of the State Central Committee and county chairmen of the New Jersey Soldiers' Relief League, which was held Wednesday afternoon at the Governor's cottage here. Plans are so well formulated that as soon as discovery is made at the border of necessary comforts, word will be sent home, and the members of the League will see that they are supplied.

Beside Mrs. Fielder four members of the Central Committee and twelve county chairmen were present yesterday. All reported great interest in their work in the section of the State from which they come, and one of the most gratifying things to the Governor's wife, as she expressed it after the meeting, was the fact that just as much or more interest was being taken in the work in counties from which no troops have as yet gone forward, in their being too busy Jersey sections where thousands of men have left.

The system which has been adopted for supplying the wants of the men has been worked out by Mrs. Fielder personally. She is in direct touch with the colonel or cammanding officer of each section that has gone forward, or intehir being too busy to serve has arranged with a surgeon or chaplain, to advise her at once of any need. As soon as she reveives a request for anything that the women can make, each county is assigned a certain amount to supply, and they have agreed to fill the order. Up to the present time, said Mrs. Fielder, after yesterday's meeting, the demand that has come from the front has been for things which have to be bought, and cannot be made, but they are being forwarded. There has also been a request for games and magazines for the men to read, which are forwarded to be placed in the Y. M. C. A. tents, and the Governor's wife said that she hoped the people of the State would heed the suggestion and send all the magazines they could find.

The method of caring for the families is as thorough as that for the men. It was decided to secure rosters of every command that has gone forward and to investigate every case, that no person can be in want because of their pride preventing them from asking assistance. For this investigation special committees will be formed by each local organization.

Following yesterday's meeting Mrs. Fielder made an especial appeal that the newspapers call attention to the need for funds for the work. Just $2,500 has been given up to the present time, and two entertainments at Spring Lake, this week and next, are expected to net substantial sums. It is hoped, however, that the people all over the State will realize the need and contribute.

Those who attended yesterday's meeting were Mrs. J. N. S. Brewster, of Elizabeth; Mrs. Arthur Mackie, of Newark; Mrs. Karl G. Roebling, of Trenton, and Mrs. William D. Sherrerd, of Haddonfield, representing the Central Committee, and the following county chairmen: Mrs. J. J. White, Atlantic; Mrs. H. V. D. Moore, Bergen; Mrs. Elizabeth Reeve, Camden; Miss Elizabeth B. Matlock, Gloucester; Mrs. H. Otto Wittpenn, Hudson; Mrs. E. B. Allen, Hunterdon; Mrs. Francis C. Lothrop, Mercer; Mrs. W. Parker Runyon, Middlesex; Mrs. Louis C. E. Bartholemy, Monmouth; Miss Mary F. Campbell, Morris; Miss Cornelia Schwartz, Ocean, and Mrs. Howard C. Whitehead, Salem.

LUCKY DOG!

Plainfield Theatre.

Joseph Henabery, the acter who portrays President Lincoln in D. W. Griffith's historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the Plainfield Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, was selected from twenty players who were coached and prepared for the part before the choice was made. Mr. Lincoln's appearance and mannerisms were carefully counterfeited, even to the small but interesting detail of the President reaching back for his shawl just a few minutes before Wilkes Booth attacked him.

The first scene in "The Birth of a Nation" showing the War President is of Lincoln's signing the call for 75,000 volunteers. Around him are his Cabinet heads and private secretaries. Another view of Lincoln's character is exhibited in his granting of a pardon. As this scene opens, the gorgeously uniformed diplomatic representatives are being received by the President. After the Appomattox surrender the leader of Congress calls with a proposal to deal harshly with the South for its rebellion. "I shall treat them as if they had never been away," is Lincoln's gentle answer. Then, two or three days later comes the awful tragedy in Ford's Theatre, Washington, when Southern hopes of clemency are blasted by the assassin Booth's maniac act. That great and terrible scene is reproduced in he play to the minutest historical detail. Mr. Henabery, the portrayer of the great President, has been widely commended for the sincerity, dignity and pathos of his characterization.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Norma Talmadge appears in a Triangle crook play at Proctor's today entitled "Going Straight," the story of which concerns a man and his wife who have turned from criminal ways to "go straight." The man has served his time in prison and is free of the police, but the woman could still be "sent up" if the authorities were given certain information. An old pal, still in the underworld, threatens this very thing, unless the husband will "pull one more job" with him. Shall the man refuse, and let his wife be exposed to their new friends as a former criminal, and perhaps sent up for a term of years, or shall he shield her, at the cost of a return to crime? Here is a play with a big problem. The decision to which the husband comes, and the events which follow are sensational in the extreme. Norma Talmadge is again seen in the role of the wife and has one of the best parts yet given her by Trinagle. This actress is rapidly building up a big following of picture fans, and is a big favorite in this vicinity. The noted "Triangle Kiddies" are in this picture, and moreover are very prominent in it. Other attractions today include the latest Keystone comedy entitled "Ambrose's Cup of Woe," and the famous Mutual Weekly.

Tomorrow Harold Lockwood and May Allison make their debut as Metro stars in a vitally interesting romantic drama entitled "The Conflict," which takes one from society life in metropolitan cities to the wilds of the North woods. Vivian Rich is also seen tomorrow in a dramatic offering entitled "Killer By Whom," and there are several comedy subjects provided for variety.

On Monay, Tuesday and Wednesday Anna Pavlowa, herself, recognized as the greatest dancer of the age, appears in a mammoth eight-part film spectacle entitled "The Dumb Girl of Porticci," which was adapted from the opera "Masaniello," by Lois Webber and produced by Miss Weber and Phillips Smalley. This wonderful production cost over a quarter of a million dollars to produce and is one of the most lavish and gorgeous screen spectacles ever conceived by the brain of man.

AMERICAN EXPRESS COMPANY WILL FORWARD SUPPLIES

Announcement was made today that the American Express Company had thrown open its entire organization to the aid of the American Red Cross in getting relief supplies to the Mexican border. As the various chapters of the Red Cross organization collect and receive supplies they will forward them to their concentration depots, which have been established at the following railroad centers: New York, Cincinnati, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver and San Francisco. There the supplies will be assorted, classified and repacked, if necessary, for further shipment to the distributing depots at Douglas, Ariz., El Paso and San Antonio, Texas. From these distributing depots final distribution will be made to the troops at the front.

The company has instructed its agents to accept such shipments at a special rate of only two-thirds of the regular shipping charge. This will not only make a very material difference to the Red Cross in shipping expenses, but will also insure the quick arrival of relief supplies where they are needed.

H. A. LELAND'S FUNERAL.

The funeral service of Henry A. Leland, whose death occurred at Haddonfield yesterday, after a long illness, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, at the home of his brother, Elwin R. Leland, 65 Sandford avenue. Rev. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, will officiate and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

WILL MEET MONDAY NIGHT.

The North Plainfield Township Local Option League, which was organized at Watchung, will hold its next meeting Monday night, at 8 o'clock, in the Greenbrook schoolhouse, Jefferson avenue and Greenbrook road.

APIARISTS TO GATHER IN ELIZABETH SOON

Those Interested in Bee Culture Cordially Invited to Attend Gathering.

Apiarists from different parts of New Jersey will meet in Elizabeth on August 1, when one of the summer sessions of the New Jersey State Association of Beekepers will be held at the apiary of Christian Diener, 627 Elizabeth avenue. Mr. Diener has been interested in apiculture for many years, and his bees produce thousands of pounds of honey every year.

The State association has never before met in Elizabeth. It is the custom to have two summer meetings at the apiaries of two of the members, and the places selceted this year are on the grounds of Harold Horner, near Mt. Holly, on July 31, and at Mr. Diener's place the next day. The association also meets during the winter, at the State Agricultural College, New Brunswick.

Noted beekepers are secured to address the meetings, and at the meetings on July 31 and August 1 the principal speaker will be C. P. Dadant, of Hamilton, Ill., editor of the American Bee Journal. Mr. Dadant's knowledege of the industry is based on experience, as he has been an apiarist for many years.

It is also expected that at the Elizabeth meeting there will be an address by a representative of one of the business concerns interested in bee-raising. There will also be talks by the New Jersey men and general discussion and exchange of ideas.

The apiarists invite the attendance of any person interested in bee culture.

MEN'S BIBLE CLASS HOLDS CAMP FIRE

First Baptist Churchmen Enjoy a "Spread" and Inspiring Addresses.

The annual camp-fire of the Men's Bible Class of the First Baptist church, of which George H. Batchelor is the teacher and leader, was held in the Sunday school of the church last night, instead of on the mountains as usual, owing to the inclement weather. There were about fifty members of the class and their guests present.

After all had enjoyed a delightful supper prepared by a committee from the class, there were inspiring addresses by Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the church; Henry Weiss, John G. McLaughlin and W. W. Stine, the general welfare of the class being the principal topic.

There was an informal discussion of plans to double the membership of the class at the rally day exercises to be held in the near future. This class is for the older men of the church and has been very successful since its organization several years ago.

FUNERAL OF INFANT.

The funeral of Elizabeth Luerssen, the infant daughter of Mrs. Florence G. Luerssen, whose death occurred on Tuesday, was held yesterday afternoon from the late home on Hillcrest road. Rev. Mebane Ramsay, pastor of the Wilson Memorial chapel, was in charge of the services. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Queen Made Seven Nettle Coats.

Every Day She Loved Him More.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

DADDY told the bedtime story to Jack and Evelyn, the tale of a dumb girl, Elise, whom a king loved and who was trying to redeem her brothers from a horrid spell by keeping silent till she wove eleven coats of mail from nettles for them:

"The king found Elise in the woods and built her a cave in his palace where she might still weave. When she saw that she might still go on with her work for her brothers she was so pleased that she kissed the king's hand. He took her in his arms and ordered all the church bells to ring. The lovely dumb girl was to be queen of the land.

"The archbishop did not like Elise and whispered words of evil about her in the king's ear. When he married the pair he pushed the crown on to Elise's head so hard that it hurt her. But the pain in her heart for her brothers was so much heavier that she hardly felt the crown. She kept her lips sealed, but her eyes were full of love for the good and handsome king who had been so kind to her. Every day she loved him more and longed to tell him the reason of her silence, that if she spoke her words would fall like daggers in her brothers' hearts because their wicked stepmother had cursed them. So in silence she remained and worked on their coats of mail which were to free them."

"I wish I could weave like that!" cried Evelyn.

"Every night she stole away from her king to her secret chamber, which he had made like her cave in the woods. Here she wove one coat after another till finally she had seven all done for the eleven brothers. When she had finished the seventh all her nettles were used. She remembered that the fairy who had told her how to break her brothers' spell had said she must go to the churchyard to find nettles to make more flax. How was she to get there, now that she was a queen?

"She decided to venture out that night with terror in her heart just as if she were doing something evil. When night came she left her cave chamber and stole out into the moonlit garden of the palace. Through the long alleys out into the silent churchyard she crept.

"She passed great shadows and ran to the spot where the nettles grew. She said a little prayer and plucked the stinging nettles that blistered her hands. Then she ran back to the palace."

"Oh, daddy, wasn't Elise brave!" cried the children.

And daddy gave them a good night hug.

Household Hints

A TIMELY SUGGESTION

An inexpensive as well as a very acceptable Christmas gift to personal friends is an assortment of flower seeds gathered from your own garden, done up in neat packets. Label each packet in which are some of the choicest seeds. These, with a few good bulbs, make a cheery Christmas box and give pleasure not only at the time received, but all through the coming summer.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES.

To Relieve An Extremely Sick Stomach, when neither food nor medicine can be retained, beat up the white of an egg, add juice of an orange. If it cannot be drunk out of a glass, take it through a straw, such as used at soda fountains. This can be given with perfect safety to typhoid fever patients, especially with the orange juice.

Liniment—Two drams oil of peppermint, two drams oil of sassafras, two drams laudanum, two drams chloroform, alcohol to make four ounces. This is splendid for sprains; also used in cases of pneumonia—rub on chest, then apply hot cloths. To be used externally only.

To Relieve Gravel of the Bladder—Take half teaspoon strained honey and what soda will lie on the point of a knife. Mix together and swallow. Can be taken several times a day or once a day, according to need.

THE TABLE

Minestrone (Italian)—This nourishing soup is considered a meal in itself. Chop a slice of raw ham, three or four strips of bacon, and a few stalks of celery. Cut a small cabbage in finger-length strips, and a carrot, onion and turnip into dice. Add half cup of large red beans (if dried beans are used, soak over night before mixing with other vegetables). Pour in a cup of stewed tomatoes and half cup of uncooked (ribbon) macaroni. Add two quarts water and a small soupbone. Cook slowly for an hour or more, season with salt and pepper, and pass grated Parmesan cheese, which is sprinkled over each portion as served.

Pie Crust That Will Not Soak—One heaping teacup flour, one tablespoon lard, one teaspoon baking powder, pinch of salt, two level tablespoons corn meal.

Wonder Pudding—Mix one cupful each of raw potatoes, carrots and granulated sugar, beef suet chopped very fine, seeded raisins, dried currants; one and one-half cups flour sifted with one rounding teaspoon baking powder, cinnamon, cloves, half teaspoon salt. Do not add any water or milk. Fill a greased pudding mold two-thirds full, cover securely with its own cover or oiled paper tied well over, and set dish in a kettle of absolutely boiling water that reaches two-thirds to the top of the mold; cover kettle and cook three hours. This may be made a week ahead of time for serving, then reheated and served with either a lemon hard sauce or any preferred liquid sauce.

Grape "Spread"—Three pints of grapes; pulp, cook and run pulp through sieve, add pulped juice to skins, then add one pint water, eight cups granulated sugar, two oranges sliced thin, half pound seeded raisins. Cook until jellied. Be careful not to get too thick. Just before taking off, add two cups chopped English walnuts (one pound).

Fresh Young Roast Pork—Have the cut about two inches thick, from a fresh ham; remove all fat, wash and dry; dip in egg (well beaten), then in cracker crumbs. Have a little butter in spider, fry meat for a minute, turn, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Now take meat from the spider and put in roaster. Do not put in any water. Roast slowly about two hours, then take from roaster, put on platter. Pour all grease from the roaster, and put in two cups of water; thicken as you do any gravy, only make it thicker.

Wash shrimps in cold water, drain thoroughly and mix with one cup celery cut into small pieces, one or two hard-boiled eggs (chopped), three sweet pickles (quarter and slice fine), eight olives chopped fine, one-half sweet green pepper (chopped), one cucumber (quarter and slice fine). Salt for five minutes, wash in cold water, drain thoroughly. Peel one ripe tomato, chop fine; three sprigs parsley cut fine; mix with salad dressing and allow to stand on ice until chilled. Arrange the heart leaves of four small heads of lettuce in the form of shells and put in each as much of the mixture as it will hold. Drop a teaspoonful of salad dressing on top and serve.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Ralph Decides On Drastic Measures and Ethel Concludes That It Is Time to Leave Her Husband.

The weather was raw and chill. It was one of those damp evenings of early fall. The wind, chill as it was, felt agreeable as it blew on Ralph Gordon's hot cheeks. Every street lamp was the center of a misty circle of light, and he instinctively looked at the sky to see if the prophesy of rain was to be fulfilled. The pavements were greasy with black mud, and in the roads were deep pools of muddy water, for it had rained all the early part of the week. The streets were deserted and from the sodden ground a great vapor arose, melancholy as life itself. The oblong squares of light that pierced the gloomy fronts of the houses were occasionally crossed by a human figure moving about within.

"I wonder if there are not hundreds of people in this very town who if they were honest enough would admit that their marriage was a failure," he thought, brooding darkly as he walked down the long dismal street. He had had many misgivings about his marriage, but had put them away and tried to make himself believe that all would straighten out in the end. Now he saw the futility of such hopes. He knew that the trivial question of a sixty-dollar debt contracted by his wife had not made him come face to face with the truth about his marriage. He also knew that present difficulties could be more or less satisfactorily adjusted. What could not be altered was the character of his wife. She had deceived him. Before this had happened he had regarded her careless extravagance as he might the vagaries of a child. They were very annoying, but she might outgrow them. But the cunning plan to make him believe that her mother had bought the suit was a sharp goad that prodded up all the fierceness of his nature.

"She won't alter her ways and I shan't stand them." His lips pressed into a hard line as he thought. "I can see that our marriage won't last long. The forces that are too strong to be downed are at work to shatter it."

It was nearly midnight when he turned in at his own gate and noiselessly let himself in at the front door. Ethel was sitting with her head on her arm asleep in her chair by the library table. The fire in the grate threw a soft light over her slight girlish figure. Her eyes were red and there was a pathetic droop about the mouth. Ralph was tempted to take her in his arms and try to make her see that such deceit was suicidal to all marriage worthy of the name, but he hardened his heart, saying, "I have talked to her enough. Some other more drastic measures are necessary to bring her to her senses." He passed on to the spare room and locked himself in.

Ethel had been awakened by his key in the door, but she had decided to feign sleep and see what he would do. She had expected him to waken her and it gave her an added sense of the gravity of the situation when he left her and went to bed alone. She sat up and listened to the key turning in the door, then rose and stealing softly down the hall tapped at his door. There was no response. He was not in bed, for she could see the line of light under the door.

"Ralph, Ralph," she called repeating the tap, "let me in. I have something to say to you." But there was only the silence of the house for answer. She stole off to her room, angry and humiliated.

"He does not love me any more. I will never stay here and be treated in this way," she whispered to her wet pillow. The gray dawn was breaking before she finally fell asleep.

YANKEES MAKING FIGHT.

Too much praise cannot be given the team piloted by Bill Donovan. Yesterday the crippled aggregation twice defeated the hard-hitting Tigers. No major league team has been as badly crippled as New York this season and hardly a day goes by without a report of some new mishap. First it was Fritz Maisel, out for several months, and he is still out of commission. Then Frank Gilhooley had a leg broken. Frank Baker has been plucked from the lineup on account of a couple of broken ribs. Rube Oldring was bought with the idea of filling in the gap, but something happened to Rube and he is missing from the lineup. When a team loses three of its best players—for there is no doubt but that Gilhooley, Baker and Maisel are three of the stars of the team—and can still hold the lead of the league, and such a tight race as it is, then that team deserves credit. The entire sporting world is watching the fight of the Yankees and pulling hard for them, just because they are battling against one of the biggest jinx that ever struck a club.

GIANTS GET EVERYTHING.

Charley Weeghman and some other magnates of the National League are kicking at the alleged "railroading" of players to the Giants, just to boost the New York chances for the pennant. It does look like a little favoritism is being shown. It is all right to bolster up a club, but when a manager is permitted to tamper with men on other clubs and do everything possible to have other players become dissatisfied, it ceases to be sport. The deal for Herzog to go to the Giants was verbally sealed, according to Garry Herrmann, but some of the other National magnates have stepped in and demanded that they be given a chance and that the weaker teams of the circuit not be combed of their best men for the benefit of the Giants. Weeghman wants Herzog; Barney Dreyfuss has made inquiry as to how the matter stands now, while George Stallings threatens to kick up a nice little fuss if the Boston offer is passed by without a good explanation. Tener and some of the other moguls should begin to realize it is not essential to the success of the league for the Giants to win the flag. Let it be an open race.

A TALK ON TOMMY MULLIN.

Very diminutive in stature is Tommy, but when it comes to enthusiasm, the North avenue lad is right up on top. Tommy began his baseball career on the sand lots of this city and quickly distinguished himself for his ability to do most anything. He and his brother, Billy, used to perform with the old St. Mary's nine when that team used Hope Common as the "happy hunting ground." Tommy began as a catcher, shifting to the infield when occasion required. We often viewed his efforts from the sidelines, but we were too small at that time to appreciate that which was going on. When the City League opened up Tommy had little trouble securing a berth with one of the teams. He performed with the now extinct Saurer team and destroyed many a pitcher's reputation. Several times Tommy played with the Clinton Avenues and a year or so ago accepted an offer to join a Georgia baseball team, which was, at that time, under the management of Connie Mack's son. The calibre of the ball put up by that team was all right, but the financial matters were not always to the liking of the young men who were registered on the club's roster. Food was never too plentiful and the players, who were generally displeased, soon left the team. Mullin returned to the North and has been playing semi-professional ball around these parts ever since. He is at present one of the most reliable men on the Perth Amboy Pacer clan. On Saturdays he pastimes with the Washington, Schwab League team. Of this team Frank Hand is manager and Cliff Randolph is the mainstay in the box. Tommy has had a most successful career as a baseball player and is by no means through. While he is not as well known a personage as Jack Martin, he can be safely ranked as the second best baseball player in this city. His standing among the better ball players of the State is high. Hats off to Thomas.

ENERGETIC MANAGEMENT.

Tommy Apgar is making a bid for the title of most "energetic manager in this city." Tommy is doing all in his power to annex that title and his many friends firmly believe that he is entitled to it. He has booked a series of five games with the Knights of St. Peter of New Brunswick. Two of these games, it is understood, are to be played in Dunellen after the close of the City League season. The first game of the series has already been played, the Middlesex team winning. Tommy is not a bit disheartened and hopes that his boys will even matters up when the two clubs get together again. All that Tommy must do to make himself the "king" of local managers is to arrange a series of games with the Royal Giants. Then Pete Simmons will be satisfied.

ARGUMENT MUST CEASE.

When one or two fistic encounters were recorded at City League games, instances of this nature were ordered stopped and the parties engaged were warned against a repetition of the offense. But when a fight occurs in the National League, the incident is given plenty of publicity and that's about all. If the moguls of the National circuit cannot control their players, they might as well give up baseball. The national game isn't gaining a thing from this idea of "pep." It's not "pep" at all. It is retrogression to the low level of former days, when "pop bottles" and even harder missles were thrown almost every inning. If the Giants, Cubs and Braves believe that fighting is going to get them a pennant, why doesn't each manager secure the services of at least a dozen pugilists?

BROOKLYN DESTINED TO STAY?

"Brooklyn is in the lead of the National League in team standing, but no rival is found for leading the publicity stuff held by the Cubs. Charlie Weeghman always managed to find some big stunt to pull when he was in the Federal League and he is going to further limits since joining the ranks of the National. Just as soon as a hitch in the deal for Herzog was reported, Weeghman boarded a train for Cincinnati and is hot after the services of the Cincinnati leader. Yesterday he purchased Shortstop Wortman from the Kansas City club at a price said to be in the neighborhood of $25,000. The stunt that will probably cost Weeghman $1,000, however, was staged in the game with Brooklyn, when Joe Tinker refused to leave the field after being ordered off in the tenth inning, and when a policeman refused to put the Cub boss out of bounds, Umpire Byron forfeited the game."—Pittsburgh Leader.

T. A. B. S. at Dunellen.

The City League attractions carded for tomorrow are of the best. The league-leading Netherwoods are scheduled to do battle with the Hope Chapel baseball outfit, while the Abstainers are booked to cross bats with the Dunellen clan. The Baptists, who firmly believe that it is about time that they won a baseball match, are going to try to do what many fans consider the "unusual" by defeating the Farmers. Of course, it isn't unusual for the Farmers to lose, but strange things do happen. At any rate, either of these teams is carded to break the losing streak tomorrow.

Should the Hopes defeat the East Enders and the Tabs win over Dunellen, the pennant race would be a little closer. In the event that things do happen in this manner, the Chapel boys would be right up among the "elite." If the Netherwood team trims the Hope clan and the Teetotalers go down to defeat before the Apgar bunch, the East End clan will have practically cinched the flag.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

In the opinion of Jack Sullivan, second baseman of the Seton Hall College baseball team, Oscar Dilts, formerly the North Plainfield High School pitching "phenom" has the goods. According to "Sully," Oscar's drop is a well-developed one and one that is accompanied by plenty of speed. The fact that Sullivan, although he played with the Reserves when they last met N. P. H. S., as a member of the first team, adds much value to his opinion.

Native sons, sometimes, fail to receive the praise due them. In this respect, however, we do not believe that Jack Martin suffers. Jack is very popular in this, his home town. And why shouldn't he be? He has done much to bring honor to the fair name of this city. Just now he is having a big season with Milwaukee, an American Association team. Out in that city he is very popular and, in fact, is almost as popular as Jim Thorpe, the fleet Indian. It has been said that, had he absolutely no speed, Jack Martin's popularity with the fans would carry him over, at least for one full season. That's some tribute.

Miss Mary Pickford, no doubt, is the queen of filmdom, but who is the king of balldom in this city. It is a noticeable fact that the baseball profession, like the "movie" game, develops individual stars, whose sole ambition seems to be to get personal advertising. There are those who insist that individualism is proving the ruin of at least one local baseball team. And what is more distressing, it is said that the members of the team in question, realize their sad state and are doing nothing to remedy the situation.

Baseball in Bound Brook seems to have died a hard death. Inability to secure Pierce Oval for the present season is assigned as the reason why the Bees are not active this season. It is quite unusual that four of the Bees are pastiming with Netherwood and are doing well.

Dolan, a product of the Jersey City playgrounds, has cast a spell over the Lenox batters. The Hudson county lad lost his first start as a Parker Field Leaguer, but still he fanned eleven men and earned the right to a little mention. If he keeps up this record he will make several of the other junior hurlers hustle for their honors.

Lou Feiring seeks notoriety. The way to get it is by hard work. Consequently, Louis has been playing the game of his life with the Lenox Leaguers in an effort to make mention of his efforts worth while. He is a good fielder, and can hit. What more can be expected of him?

Francis Connolly is a versatile chap. Frank has been doing a little catching and other field work. He handles everything that comes his way in a style that is admirable. Although he is no "giant" in stature, he is one of the most dependable men on the whole Lenox team.

Wonder who this Malcolm chap is? We do not hold an intimate acquaintance with the young man, but still we venture to state that he is rapidly coming to the top as one of the best baseball players in this vicinity.

Normie Lynch is also on the roster of the Diamond team. He has assisted that club in winning many of its games and is generally considered one of the best all around men in the league.

DISBANDING.

The Elm A. C. will close their baseball season today. Manager Britton and Captain Mason announced this afternoon. The team has done good work all the season and the pitching has made up for what the other things lacked. There will be a few changes in the team of next year, but these will be avoided with a few exceptions if they can be. There will undoubtedly be a few more players added to the team and the Elm A. C. does not not want the players they cannot use. They will play next year any teams under the ages of thirteen years and will take home games only.

SAINTS TO PLAY.

The St. Joseph's will clash with a team from Westfield tomorrow. The game will be played on Hyde Oval and Eddie Conshay and Andy McDonough will be in the points for the borough club. The Westfield lineup has not been given out, but it is expected that the manager of that club will present a strong array of talent.

ROYAL GIANTS EAGER TO PLAY ABSTAINERS

"Fan" States That Contest Should Be Arranged Without Further Discussion.

In discussing the possibility of a baseball match between the Royal Giants and the Tabs, one loyal fan of this city stated this morning that he did not believe that the Abstainers would sidestep such an engagement. He also was of the opinion that any "teasing" on the part of Royal rooters would do more to make a match improbable than to insure the arrangement of one. "There is no reason under the sun why these two teams should not get together," was the "Fan's" parting shot.

Manager Pete Simmons, of the Royals, is authority for the statement that the Tab management is considering a game with his team. Pete is of the opinion that Jim Scott, the Teetotaler leader, will consent to the staging of the affair. Another Royal player hinted that, should a game be played between the Tabs and the Giants, Pete Simmons would secure an out-of-town pitcher. It is not unlikely that either McDonald or Murphy, both Philadelphia Giant hurlers, will do the pitching in the event of an acceptance of the Royal challenge by Manager Scott.

The Plainfield A. C. and the Royals will get together for the second time this season on Parker Field tomorrow. The Royals hold an overwhelming victory over these lads and hope to repeat tomorrow. Butler will twirl for the Royals, while Harry Stites, the "no-hit" hurler, is carded to pitch for the Plainfielders.

LENOX LEAGUERS DEFEAT DIAMONDS

But Dolan, Newcomer, Twirls Great Ball for the Losers.

The Lenox baseball team of the Parker Field League annexed a victory yesterday at the expense of the Diamonds, the score of the engagement being six runs to five. Eddie Deady was responsible for the win, as he stole second just a few minutes before a team mate singled. The young fellow then made a sprint for home and was successful. His base running featured the attraction

Fred Sears, Tommy Kyle and Bill Reasoner were all adept with the stick, although each admits that Dolan, the Diamond pitcher, who until recently performed in the Jersey City Playground League, had "something" on the ball

TROOPS SETTLING FOR A LONG STAY

Much Dissatisfaction in Douglas Camp Over Lack of Definite Information.

MEN TALK OF BALKING

No Lack of Patriotism But Soldiers Want to Know Certain Things Which Are Being Kept From Them —Y. M. C. A. Building Accepted.

HARRY H. KROH.

(Press Special Correspondent.)

Douglas, Ariz., July 16.—Officers and men in the New Jersey National Guard who are stationed here to a number of almost 6,000 express their dissatisfaction at being held without definite news of the probable tenure of their stay nor an idea of the possible scope of their duties. The situation is rapidly becoming grave in some organizations, where it is feared that the refusals to enlist may seriously interfere.

There seems every indication that the men are to be held here for a long time. The Department of the South of the War Department has authorized Captain John Malcomb, the brigade quartermaster, to issue enough material to build permanent mess halls and kitchens for all organizations.

When the troop first came here they requisitioned the quartermasters department for such supplies, it having been noted that the kitchens and mess halls of the regulars were constructed for permanency. The department gave out a statement in which it called attention to the fact that requisitions for supplies which woul cost approximately $0,000, had been received. They called attention to the fact that the uncertainty at that time of the length of time the troops would be here made it inadvisable to issue the supplies which would be used toward creating a permanent camp. The department has evidently undergone a change of heart and it is believed that their action in announcing the issuance of such supplies indicates that a long siege will be the lot of the New Jersey troops.

Inquiry as to the likelihood of a long stay brings little satisfaction to the gaurdsmen, and Brigadier-General Edwin H. Hine knows no more about the situation than the lowliest private in the ranks. The entire organization is entirely in the air and the only way in which the men can arrive at any conclusion is to read and interpret the signs as best they can.

There is no lack of patriotism in the hearts of the New Jersey guardsmen, and their position should not be taken as an indication of a falling off in their loyalty to the State. The men are disappointed in that they have received no active service and there seems little indication of it. They are eager to get into real red-blooded work and can't content themselves with lying here on the border waiting, waiting, waiting, while their business affairs, their homes and their families are really needing their attention. They feel that the present duty is a waste of their time with no advantage to their country, and threats to bolt are heard on every hand. Officers on every hand frankly state their determination to resign their commands rather than lie down here for a year or two without action. As for the enlisted men, the feeling is probably stronger in their ranks than in the officialdom.

Brigadier-General EdwinW. Hine t oday presided at the ceremonies attendant upon the presentation of a new Y. M. C. A. building to the entire New Jresy soldiers now encamped here as a reinforced brigade. The building, which is large and roomy, was constructed with funds raised by influential people in Plainfield, who are interested in Troop D of the First Squadron Cavalry, of that city. The building was presented to the brigade by Captain Albert C. Borden, commanding the Watchung troop, and General Hine, with his usual grace and ability accepted the building for the officers and men of the brigade. His speech, which was brief and to the point, was followed by prolonged cheering.

All three of the regimental chaplains participated in the services and Major William A. Bryant, commanding the cavalry, was prevented from making an address by illness. Chaplain Charles W. Gulick, of the Fifth Regiment, delivered the dedicatory prayer and Chaplain William F. Coon, of the First, made an address. Chaplain James Madison, of the Fourth Regiment, read the scripture. About 1,000 men attended and joined in singing the hymns.

Church services for the entire brigade were held in joint meeting during the morning on the parade ground, near the First Regiment, which is the central location of the camp. All of the chaplains participated.

Men in the two Orange companies of the Fifth Regiment and the boys of Battery A, of East Orange, are to be given comfort to a certain degree by prominent people in the Oranges. Brigadier-General EdwinW. Hine today received a telegram from Francis H. Holmes, asking what could be sent to give the men comfort and what means could be taken to aid them. General Hine, after consulting with Major Lord, commanding the battalion of the Fifth Regiment, in which the Orange boys are enlisted, and Captain Claude H. Lenterman, commanding Battery A, tonight replied to Mr. Holmes advising him that lumber with which to build floors for the tents would be the most appreciable gift to the men.

A second offer of help came to Battery A, as well as to other organizations today in letters sent by Mrs. James F. Fielder, secretary of the New Jersey Women's Soldiers' Relief Association, asking what the men could best use and to whom to make checks payable in the event the men had organization funds. Expressions of appreciation for the work the women are doing, were heard on every hnad.

The probabilities of an early promotion to the majorship of the artillery is making Captain Claude A. Lenterman one of the most interesting officers here at the present time. Captain Lenterman is the commander of Battery A, of East Orange, and it was largely through his influence and hard work that the new Battery C, now at Tobyhanna, Pa., at the government training ground there for practice, was organized. The new battery is to report here during the next month and it is reported for duty with Batteries A and B, the latter of Camden, and with their introduction into the New Jersey military service it will create a battalion of artillery and make necessary the election of a major to command it.

Captain Samuel Barnard, commanding Battery B of Camden, is the senior of the two artillery outfits here, and was a few days ago designated temporary commander of the artillery in camp here. Friends of Captain Lenterman, fearing that Captain Barnard's assignment indicated his elevation to the majorship with the arrival here of the new outfit made inquiry and were assured that the major would be selected in the customary way by the officers of the outfits interested.

It is almost certain that the boys of Battery C, who are grateful to Captain Lenterman for his assistance in getting the battery organized, will stand by him on the election, and his elevation seems assured. Both artillery commanders are efficient men and the chances for each for selection to the higher command have been discussed generally throughout the camp. Both Batteries A and B have been complimented by Colonel H. St. John Groble, commanding the regular artillery outfit here and he has expressed the opinion that the Jerseymen make good even if called into action at this time.

Now that the camp is almost in condition such as to permit the men to turn their attention from digging trenches, building incinerators, stacking up forage for the horses, piling up fire wood and such other duties as have kept them busy during the first two weeks of camp, they will turn their attention to hard drill work tomorrow. Those who were effected by the second inoculations are getting on their feet again except in a few organizations where heavy sick lists have developed as a result of the vaccinations. The sickness wears away within a few days, but while it lasts the men are indisposed for work in the heat of the Arizona desert.

Commissions for Colonel George T. Vickers and Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Lohmann, Jr., were received from Trenton today. The officers were elected at Sea Girt, following the dismissal of Colonel Arthur L. Steele, of Jersey City, for physical unfitness, but their commissions were not received until today.

Horse swapping between organizations is at its height. The infantry organizations have a number of horses fitted for artillery work, and some of the horses provided the batteries are better suited for saddle work by infantry officers. Exchanges have been started now and from the rate at which the dickerings are being carried on all hands should be fairly well satisfied at the conclusion of the negotiations.

The controversy over affairs in Comany H, of Rutherford, in the Fifth Regiment, is waxing warm again. A request for an investigation of the case of Lieutenant Ely was received here by Clonel Albert M. Van Valraven a few days ago, and Colonel Van Valraven replied that it was discretionary with him whom he named to command the company.

Lieutenant Ely, whose experience in the National Guard has been very brief, became peeved when Colonel Van Valraven refused to name him to command the outfit as captain. He was a second lieutenant. He was so disgruntled that he resigned his position at Sea Girt and would not accompany the company down here. Lieutenant Kruitbosch, of Passaic, was named temporarily to command the company.

Ely, it would seem, wrote to Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary of the President, saying that Colonel Van Valraven coerced the Rutherford troops into serving. While Mr. Tumulty is said to have paid no attention to the communication, Senator James E. Martine, to whom a copy of Ely's letter was sent, referred the matter to the Adjutant-General of the Army, and it was from the latter that the request for an investigation came to brigade headquarters.

Dr. Parkhurst On "The Birth of a Nation"

By REV. DR. CHARLES H. PARKHURST

IT is impossible to witness the film drama "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Liberty Theater, and not want to say something about it.

Every one who has seen it is saying something about it. When one has been crowded upon, pressed down and run over it is against nature not to make some kind of an outcry.

That is the way one feels when coming out of the Liberty Theater. The thing is vast. It is overwhelming. Nothing like it has ever before been put upon the stage.

The tension of the performance is but a single feature of it, but it is that which one feels most poignantly after three straight hours. It begins in an easy way, but commences soon to find its muscle and goes on to the end, pounding upon one's senses with blows that come heavier and heavier, more and more rapid.

It is not apparent what are the grounds of the objections urged against it nor what is the animus of those who are scheming to have the exhibition prohibited.

The natonal board of censorship has approved it and reaffirmed its approval. The popular indorsement which the play has since received by the thousands who are seeing it daily will require more than small prejudices or moral eccentricities to disturb. In the meantime efforts to suppress it are thus far successful in nothing so much as in giving it wider and more remunerative publicity.

The intimate familiarity which David W. Griffith has shown with the events of the reconstruction period along with the detailed scholarly study which he has made of the wider territory of events which the play covers renders the production one of surprising educational value to those who were either young children still or even unborn in the stirring years of 1860 to 1870. A boy can learn more true history and get more of the atmosphere of the period by sitting down for three hours before the film which Mr. Griffith has produced with such artistic skill than by weeks and months of study in the classroom.

This drama is a telling illustration of the possibilities of motion pictures as an instrument of instruction in history.

The criticism that it exhibits the negro in an unfortunate light and that it is calculated to engender racial animosity is fully met by the consideration that it represents the negro, not as he is now at all, but as he was in the days when he had just had the chains broken from him and when he was rioting in the deliciousness of a liberty so new and untried that he had not yet learned to understand it and was as ignorant as a baby of the way to use it. It is in this respect exactly true to history, and if it reflects upon the negro as he was then it is a compliment to the black man of today. An exhibition of lawlessness might not have been proper thirty or forty years ago. Such proprieties change with the passing of time.

The battle scenes which Mr. Griffith has depicted are of surpassing power and realism. Every lover of peace must experience a certain painful gratification that just at this time the ghastly horrors of carnage can be brought so closely home to the eye. It is one thing to read about the trenches, the killing and the corpses. It is quite another thing to have them bodily pressed before the eye, with all the demoniac fury that marks conflict at close range. A well written description of a battlefield allows the place and the occasion to be invested with features of magnificence, with the heroism of the contestants and the glory of the victors. On Griffith's screen we see the real thing. There is no magnificence, no glory, but horror, brutality and stark butchery. It sickens with the sense of man's inhumanity to man. It makes war despicable and devilish. It conveys an indelible lesson to all who have been bewitched by those who have decked out the naked hideousness of war with tinsel drapery.

There are also scenes of surpassing dignity and beauty done by a master artist's hand—the signing by the president of the proclamation for volunteers which marked the end of the old regime, the surrender of Lee to Grant and the assassination of the president in Ford's theater.

The tender affection in which Mr. Lincoln is held was manifested in the way the great audience received the scene of a heartbroken southern mother pleading with him for her son, sentenced to death as a guerrilla. Every eye was dim with tears in the strangling hush that fell on the theater. What might not our country have been saved had the problem of reconstruction been left to the great heart—the one man who compassed within himself the resources of the intelligence, experience, breadth and sympathy of Abraham Lincoln!

"The Birth of a Nation" has my unqualified approval.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

The fourth national convention of the National Council of Women Voters will meet in Cheyenne, Wyo., July 26 to 29. The Council of Women Voters was organized by Mrs. Emma Smith De Voe, of Tacoma, shortly after Washington came into its suffrage. Senator James H. Brady, then Governor of Idaho, issued a call to the Governors of the other suffrage States, four in number at that time, asking them to appoint a delegate who would assist in uniting the women of the enfranchised States for the purpose of aiding the women in other States to secure the ballot. The convention this year will be attended by representative women voters from twelve States. The council also announces the establishment of an official paper, the Vanguard, of which the first issue appears this month.

The head of the greatest agricultural library in the world is a woman. Miss Claribel R. Barnett, librarian in charge of the Department of Agriculture library at Washington. The collection comprises over 133,000 books and pamphlets, with an increase of about 9,000 annually, and 2,300 current periodicals from every civilized country, dealing with agricultural subjects.

An 18-year-old girl, Miss Hortense Stollwitz, of Brooklyn, has broken all business records for quick advancement after coming out of high school. A year out of school, Miss Stollwitz is now securing $50 a week. She began as a typist at a small salary but won a typewriting contest by writing accurately over 140 words a minute. Her engagement by a large typewriting firm for demonstration purposes followed, at her present salary.

A woman is now accredited with diplomatic rank to the British Embassy to the United States. The incumbent is Miss Violet Erskine, a daughter of the British consul general at New Orleans, who is now a member of the staff under the Commercial Adviser and Minister Plenipotenitary, Sir Richard Crawford, the British Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, having officially reported the fact to the State Department at Washington.

Mrs. Joseph Fels, of Philadelphia, the ardent single ta xadvocate, who recently pledged a million dollars for the establishment of a single tax colony in Palestine, is the guardian and almoner of an enormous fortune made by her late husband in the United States and England. She is a native of Germany, of parents who emigrated to Iowa, where she fas educated in the public schools. After she married Mr. Fels she took courses in the University of Pennsylvania. She has been for many years an advocate of the single tax, and last year toured the United States delivering lectures on the subject.

Just twenty years ago this summer, it was the style to wear long trailing skirts that did a portion of the work now paid for by the street cleaning department, and in 1896 the Rainy Day Club was organized to start a propaganda for the adoption of more sensible dress by women, and the "rainy daisy" skirt saw the light. Intended at first solely for stormy weather, the short skirt made such rapid strides for popularity that trailing gaments for the street are now as extinct as the dodo, and in all probability will never return even after the passing of the present fashion of very short skirts for any and all occasions.

Dr. Lucy Langdon Williams Wilson, principal of the Southern High School for Girls, of Philadelphia, has just started on an expedition, which is her second, into the wilds of New Mexico, where she succeeded last summer in excavating a carload of valuable ethnological material concerning the ancient Pueblo Indians, who inhabited the region before the time of the Spanish conquerors. Mrs. Wilson is now in the Southwest, making up a party of Indians to journey with her into the Mesa lands, to continue the work of excavation, where she left off last year.

AFRICAN ELEPHANTS.

They May Be In Captivity, but They Are Never In Subjection.

For many reasons the chase of the elephant stands at the apex of sport. As a man killer in open combat he ranks with the lion and the African buffalo. He is the only beast that fears no other. While he will almost invariably run from the scent of man he is as invariably ready to attack on the slightest provocation. Fear does not exist for him. His overwhelming bulk, power, speed and intelligence make him supreme beyond the range of rivalry.

As though this were not enough to establish his pre-eminence, he alone carries a trophy which is one of the staple products of the industrial world. The value of ivory rises. It never fluctuates. Nor is this all. In the mind of the east the elephant is intimately associated with dignity, pomp, pageantry and kingship. But in the mind of the native African he is king—a king in his own right.

In this regard let it be affirmed that no elephant born in Africa has ever docilely paced a hippodromed stage, trundled a circus wagon or taken children for a ride in the park. Those sleep-walking cattle known to the American public as elephants come from India and are mere distant cousins to the king. You may have seen the African elephant in captivity, but never in subjection. Chain him to the floor behind iron bars, and after ten years he is still quick to throw muck in the face of the man that jeers at him.—George Agnew Chamberlin in Century.

1,200 CADETS IN MILITARY CAMP

291 Preparatory and Public High Schools in 25 States Are Represented.

U. S. ARMY IN CHARGE

Y. M. C. A. Supervises All Athletic Sports, a Group of Twenty Secretaries eing Engaged to Look After the Boys.

Camp Washington, Fort Terry, N. Y., July 20.—The twelve hundred cadets in this military camp for boys, which is conducted by the United States Army, represent 291 preparatory and public high schools in 25 different States. The camp is an outgrowth of the Plattsburgh camp and the contingent of boys now here in training arrived July 6, and will remain until August 10. Immediately following there will be a second boys' camp which will run until September 9. The climatic and sanitary conditions are almost ideal. Plum Island is at the eastern end of Long Island Sound and military life in the sea air is bronzing and toughening every boy in the camp.

The Young Men's Christian Association has found its field not only among the men at Plattsburg and the real soldiers on the Mexican border, but also among the boys at this camp, who are getting their first taste of preparedness. She association is carrying considerable responsibility. Parents and relatives will be interested to know that all athletic sports, including swimming lessons, the camp postoffice, motion picture entertainments and a general supervision of the boys in their hours of leisure is being exercised by a group of twenty Y. M. C. A. secretaries.

There are two Young Men's Christion Association units at the camp, one in charge of Allen Evans, Jr., while the other unit, which is utilizing the ground floor of the regular barracks, is directed by C. B. Horton. At both of these units there is equipment for recreation, correspondence, reading and social life. Magazines, games and the daily papers are provided free of charge. There is a victrola and a piano, and a motion picture show is given nearly every night. To each of the eight companies of boys, two association secretaries have been assigned. They eat with the boys and have absolute freedom to visit in their tents or company streets. The first night the boys were in camp they left something over $2,000 in the care of the association branches for safe-keeping.

More than two-hundred of the cadets have become members of the provisional Young Men's Christian Association established at the camp. Colonel Andrew Hero, Jr., of the United States Coast Artillery, the commandant, his adjutant, three of the eight captains and three of the West Point cadets have been enrolled as members.

The swimming parties, under the direction of one of the association men, are an enjoyable sight. At the first period nearly one thousand boys were in the water at one time. Four row boats, well manned, and a motorboat, patrolled the front of the swimming beach as a guard. Mine buoys connected by ropes have been anchored as boundary lines.

One of the entertaining features which is popular with the boys are the bonfires which are held by companies under the leadership of the association's representatives.

Three of the men who are acting as association secretaries paid their own way to the camp and are giving their time. One of these is an attorney from Pittsburgh, who visited twenty tents in his squad the first night.

HOLD UP YOUR HEAD.

It Will Stimulate You Mentally as Well as Physically.

In a letter to Robert Grimshaw of the New York university William Muldoon gives advice that it would be well for every man and woman, boy and girl in America to take to heart. He says:

"I was taught in early manhood not to throw my shoulders back, stick my chest out, draw my stomach in or hold my chin down like a goat preparing to butt, but to always try and touch some imaginary thing with the crown of my head. If one tries to do that—first understands how to try and then tries—he doesn't have to pay any attention to the rest of his physical being. That effort to touch something above him not with his forehead, but with the crown of his head, will keep every particle of his body in the position that nature intended it should be.

And as a boy I was advised to frequently back up against the wall and make the back of my head, my shoulders, hips, heels all press against the wall at the same time, and in that way get an idea of what was straight, or, in other words, how crooked I was beginning by drooping.

Both to young and old Mr. Muldoon's "hold your head up" suggestion is inspiriting. Try it. The effect physically and mentally is immediate. When the head goes higher the impulse is to deeper breathing. A man finds more elasticity in his limbs. He steps out with more ease. There is more spring to his gait. He isn't a lumbering, stumbling creature, but a man alive. With the elevation of the crown of the head there seems to come clearer thinking, a more buoyant feeling and a brighter outlook.—Commerce and Finance.

COAL OPERATORS CONFER.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 21.—Problems of vital importance to the coal mining industry of this section of the country were taken up for consideration by the Southern Appalachian Coal Operators' Association at its semi-annual meeting here today. With the prospect of an unusually active and strenuous season, the operators face a serious shortage of cars with which to haul their product to market. A shortage of labor is also threatened, while the increased cost of mining supplies is still another source of worry for the mine owners.

WOULD PREVENT HANGING.

Topeka, Kansas, July 21.—To prevent a blot being placed on the record of Kansas, which has not had a legal hanging in many years, Governor Capper and other officials and representative citizens of the State have appealed to President Wilson to exercise executive clemency in the case of Robert Proud, a convicted murderer. Stroud was originally sentenced to be executed at the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth today, but an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States has served as a temporary stay of execution. Failure to secure a reversal of the case at the hands of the highest tribunal the President will be urged to commute the sentence to life imprisonment. Stroud was a prisoner at the Federal penitentiary when he attacked and killed Andrew Turner, a guard. For this crime he was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to death.

CO. K AND SECOND REGIMENT REVIEWED BY GOVERNOR UPON ARRIVAL AT SEA GIRT CAMP

PLAINFIELD'S SOLDIER BOYS FORM PART OF 800 WAR STRENGTH REPRESENTATION AT STATE ENCAMPMENT FOR A WEEK.

COLONEL READING, OF STOCKTON, COMMANDER

Special Trains Brought Biggest Part of the Militia Into Camp This Afternoon Over the Pennsylvania and Central Railroads—Expect Hard Work Schedule During Stay—Tomorrow Will Be Devoted to Religious Exercises, Real Work Beginning Monday Morning.

(By Telegraph From Staff Correspondent)

Sea Girt, July 22.—Recruited to the maximum peace strength of nearly eight hundred men and fifty-five officers, the Second Regiment of Trenton, including Company K, of Plainfield, is this afternoon encamped on the State ground, and busily preparing for a week's tour of duty as "citizen soldiers" in the New Jersey National Guard. Commanded by Colonel Horace M. Reading, of Stockton, and with full regular army field equipment attached to their persons, the boys swung briskly by the Governor's cottage, where the Executive, with members of his staff stood on the porch and reviewed them. The regimental headquarters was soon established at the south end of the big parade ground, and as soon as the baggage wagons could be unloaded the men of the command started erecting their wall tents.

When they arrived in camp they found one company street fully established, for Company L, of Princeton, has been here since Thursday, getting preliminary instruction from Captain Charles F. Silvester. They also found the big wire screens for the kitchens erected. These were not used when the First Brigade was here a few weeks ago, preliminary to going to the border, but the sanitary officers decided not to take any chances this time.

With Colonel Reading are associated as officers Lieutenant Colonel William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, one of the best rifle shots in the State; Captain William E. Pedrick, of Trenton, regimental adjutant; Captain Richard Stockton, Jr., of Trenton, regimental quartermaster; Captain Orville D. Oliphant, of Trenton, regimental commissary, and Captain John Handley, of Camden, chaplain.

The regiment has headquarters at Trenton, but the companies come from several towns in central New Jersey. Four companies are stationed at the home armory, A, B, D and E; Companies C, F and I are at Elizabeth; Company G, Freehold; Company H, New Brunswick; Company K, Plainfield; Company L, Princeton, and Company M, Somerville.

The command came in on special trains over both the Pennsylvania and Central Railroads, those from Trenton, New Brunswick and Freehold coming over the former lines, and the balance of the regiment over the Central, with the exception of the Princeton men who were already here.

While the routine practice which has been followed in the past in Sea Girt encampments will be followed during the week, there will be a general tightening of the lines laid down for the work, and the men will be given little opportunity for anything but work. The rules as to passes to leave camp in the evenings will probably not be so strictly enforced as they were when the men were mobilized to go to the border, and there will be evening parades and other "show features" which were lacking during the mobilization, but during the daylight hours the troops will have a busy time. The entire program is now arranged to lead up to a tactical manoeuvre late next week, in which the regiment will probably be divided into two parts.

LEADERS SHOULD NOT INTERFERE

Richard Boardman Urges G. O. P. Organization to "Call Off" Its Workers.

THE SPIRIT OF 1916

Candidate for Congressional Honors Says Primaries Are a Family Affair and People Should Be Allowed to Vote for Party's Good.

Richard Boardman, of this city, who recently declared his intention of seeking the Congressional nomination on the Republican ticket in the Fifth District, makes some interesting comment on the political situation in a letter which he sent yesterday to William Newcorn, chairman of the Union County Republican committee. Mr. Boardman has furnished a copy of his letter to the press. It is as follows:

"There is a lot of nonsense going the rounds in political circles these July days—a kind of hot weather politics or midsummer madness.

"A tentative candidate for the United State sesnatorship, former Governor Stokes is, the newspapers tell us, trying to harmonize the senatorial and gubernatorial controversies. It is intimated that these contests are a bad thing for the party. But why? No one seems to know. It is intimated that they engender bitterness. Pure buncombe!

"Look at the men—former Governor Murphy opposed General Sewell for the senatorship in 1895. He has had an eye on the office ever since. He has had many disappointments. Yet, a stauncher Republican doesn't wear shoe leather. Is Mr. Frelinghuysen going to sour in his first adventure into national politics is a failure? The question answers itself. As for former Governor Stokes, it is needless even to ask the question.

"The gubernatorial situation presents a very interesting contest. At one extreme, Senator Edge makes a very strong personal appeal to practically the entire suffrage of the State. At the other extreme, George L. Record makes his appeal to the force of ideas, and as far as outward signs go, cares not a flip for personal popularity. Between the two extremes, appealing to personal regard and to the force of ideas as well, Colonel Colgate genially goes his way.

"Will anything be said or anything done in the pre-primary campaign to alienate these men or any one of them from the Republican party? Not at all.

"Every day I hear suggestions that Mr. Capstick withdraw from the congressional campaign—that his friends should persuade him to withdraw. Don't do it. Why, another than I had better say.

"Men who essay to public office, have blood in their veins, not milk that sours at the first thunder storm.

"But, I call your attention to this fact: The new statutes, expressing a new public sentiment, are intended to make primary contests a kind of family matter in which the party organizations take no part. It is a good theory. It's sound principle. It's good politics.

"Let the organization call off its workers. Let it tell them to vote for the party's good and each as his own judgment dictates.

"We are all Republicans together. The only bitterness that can be engendered is when members of one's party conspire against him. Mr. Capstick might well resent any coordinated effort to defeat me, not coming from Mr. Capstick's personal and political friends.

"A Republican machine is created to shoot Democrats. When it begins to back-fire, it is time that it was junked.

"Let the organization leave the situation clean. Let us make our appeal to Republican sentiment and to Republican voters, each in his own way.

"That should be the spirit of 1916. That will hold together a reunited party, whatever the results of the September elections may be. This is a public matter and I am giving this letter to the press.

"RICHARD BOARDMAN."

GRANTED WRIT TO REVIEW PROCEEDINGS

G. W. V. Moy Makes Another Move in Behalf of Pillar of Fire Clients.

G. W. V. Moy, representing Lavinia Leach and Laura Wilson, members of the Pillar of Fire, who yesterday completed a seven days' sentence in the county jail as part of their fine for violating the city ordinance, appeared before Judge James C. Connolly at Elizabeth yesterday and obtained a writ to review the police court proceedings in the case. In the event of his finding any error in the proceedings, he will endeavor to have the action set aside. A hearing on the writ was set for July 29 at Elizabeth.

In additon to the seven days given the women a fine of $20 was imposed and in case of failure to pay the fine they are to serve ten days more. The fine was not paid yesterday and the women are still in jail.

Mr. Moy appeared before Justice James J. Bergen at Somerville yesterday for the purpose of securing a writ of certiorari. The latter, however, called his attention to a law enabling him to apply to the Court of Common Pleas, which Mr. Moy did later. It is Mr. Moy's intention to test the constitutionality of the action taken by the city of Plainfield.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE MARKED DEDICATION

Captain Borden Writes Interesting Leter Upon Open- of Y. M. C. A. Building.

George P. Mellick, of East Seventh street, received a letter yesterday from Captain Albert G. Borden, of Troop D, now in Douglas, Arizona, giving an account and program of the dedication of the Y. M. C. A. building at Douglas a few days ago. He says:

"We had a great and pleasant surprise on Friday. There has been a large Y. M. C. A. building going up in our camp and the representative called and informed us that the citizens of Plainfield were the persons who erected it—another fine proof of the spirit of Plainfield, and I am very proud of it all.

"The building is to be opened this afternoon and I enclose herewith a program. I want to thank most every one most heartily for the generosity shown. The building is a great boon.

The dedication of the Plainfield building, as it is called, took place on Sunday, July 1, with General E. W. Hine commander of the New Jersey Brigade, presiding. The complete program of the exercises was as follows: Hymn, "Stand Up for Jesus;" scripture reading, Captain J. Madison Hare, Fourth Regiment, N. G. N. J.; hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers;" presentation of the building to the brigade, Captain Albert G. Borden, Troop D, N. G. N. J.; remarks, Mayor William A. Bryant, commanding First Squadron;, N. J. Cavalry; dedicatory prayer, Captain C. W. Gulick, chaplain Fifth Regiment, N. G. N. J.; acceptance of building for brigade, Brigade General E. W. Hine; hymn, "America." The inscription on the building is as follows: "The Plainfield Building," this building has been erected for the Y. M. C. A. by friends of Troop D, New Jersey Cavalry (The Watchung Troop of Plainfield), for the benefit of the entire New Jersey Brigade.

TROOPERS GIVEN FULL EQUIPMENT

Rifles, Pistols, Boots and Uniforms Distributed Among Cavalrymen at Douglas.

PREPARING FOR DRILLS

Squadron Resents Criticism of Those Who Failed to Go to the Border—Bravest Regard for Former Comrades.

(Special to the Daily Press)

Douglas, Arizona, July 14.—Rifles, pistols, boots and uniforms were today distributed in the Watchung Troop, so that each man is now fully equipped; the equipment taken from the troop at Sea Girt to get the other troops of the squadron upon a war footing has thus been replaced. As soon as the horses have become acclimated regular drilling will begin and a few weeks later the troop will be prepared for any kind of service.

At present the men are taking it easy and getting acclimated themselves. On the whole the weather is excellent for this purpose,—the nights delightfully cool, and beautiful with a full moon and large broken clouds. Ned Cady, looking up into the sky last night, remarked: "Well, it's not doing us much good."

"But somebody, somewhere is getting good out of it," said George Alpers, of Westfield, one of those who had his head shaved and became thereby unpopular with Captain Borden, who forbade "any more convict haircuts."

"Does that give you consolation?" some one asked.

"Well, the fact is it couldn't do me any good till my hair grows," said George, who is very sensitive about his present appearance. Corporals Ransome and Perkins also came under the captain's mild displeasure in this way.

There has been considerable talk in camp over a rumor raised by letters received from Plainfield recently that former members of the troop who failed to stay in the organization by refusing to take the new oath at Sea Girt were the subjects of unfavorable criticism in Plainfield. Opinions strongly unsympathetic with such an attitude toward any such men were expressed on all sides. The propriety of their conduct was never doubted by the men of the troop, and their sincerity and the courage they showed in standing for their plain duty in the face of great temptation and of public opinion were highly respected in the troop, and this especially since, in several cases, it is known that these men tried hard to adjust their affairs by taking out insurance and so forth as to feel that families were sufficiently protected to warrant them in going. Failing in this they could properly do no more, and they have the bravest regard of their former comrades.

MISS RAYBERT SOLOIST FOR MUSICAL IN THE CITY PARK

Another of the now popular musical hours will be held at the City Park tomorrow afternoon at 5:15. There has been an increasing interest manifested in this new work of the Public Recreation Committee, and it feels much encouraged by the large attendance at these half-hour gatherings. The soloist tomorrow afternoon will be Miss E. Etta Raybert, soprano of Trinity Reformed church, whose singing is always an enjoyable feature of any program where she appears.

The committee urges all to occupy seats provided in the park and join in the concerted singing. Similar gatherings are proving popular in other cities and it is hoped that the people of Plainfield will join in making this Sunday afternoon gathering a musical success. The hour is 5:15 and the music lasts one half-hour. The program is under the direction of Clifford a Braider.

CAMP ACKERMAN NEWS.

The weekly "treasure hunt" of the Scouts at Camp Ackerman was held yesterday and was exciting from beginning to end. Scout Jack Squires, of Troop 11, found the map and started the excitement, but it was left for Scout Harold Allen, of Troop 14, to be the lucky contestant. Scout Allen received a pound box of candy as award for his prowess. The camp cook is an ex-prizefighter and has been instructing the boys in the manly art of self-defence. Only those boys "who keep their heads" are allowed to box, however. A supervisor sees to it that this rule is observed. An aquatic meet is carded for today.

MARTIN'S CONDITION REPORTED SERIOUS

Former Plainfielder at McAllen, Texas, Very Low With Pneumonia.

Reports today from M'Allen Texas, camp of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, of New York, state that at the First Field Hospital, the entire staff, under the direction of Colonel Terriberry, chief medical officer, and Captain James Dunseith, are fighting to save the life of Private Clark Martin, a former Plainfield boy. Clark came to M'Allen suffering from sunstroke and pneumonia, and had been seriously ill for thirty-six hours before the Field Hospital got hold of him. Today there is a chance that Martin will pull through.

Martin is in a special tent under the charge of two enlisted medical students, acting as nurses, and with doctors taking turns at watching him. His temperature, which had been as high as 107, is down to 101. In view of the fact that Martin is under treatment in a tent out on a windswept field, and covered only with a mosquito bar canopy, his recovery, should he get well, will reflect the greatest credit on the staff of the field hospital.

LOCAL YOUTHS HELD FOR ALLEGED ROBBERY

Steve Durkwetz Charges That He Was Separated From $87 at a Picnic.

Louis Malanga, Frank Malanga, Alfred Marsh and Joseph McCarty, all young men of this city, were arraigned before Justice Peter Kaine at South Plainfield yesterday afternoon on a charge of highway robbery, preferred by Steve Durkwetz, also of this city, and were each held in $1,000 bail for trial Monday night. Durkwetz charges the four with robbing him of $87 on July 16, to which the men plead not guilty.

The robbery is alleged to have taken place at a picnic held on that date at Seventh street and Rock avenue. In some way a fight started and it was during the fracas that Durkwetz says he was robbed. In the preliminary hearing the lawyer for the defense said that Durkwetz had taken his coat off just as the fight started and threw it on the ground. After the scrap he picked it up and carried it on his arm, and it was then that the money fell from his pocket.

PICTURE OF CO. K TAKEN ENROUTE TO THE STATION

THERMOMETER 112 IN THE SHADE, SAYS JOHN REINHART

Chief of Police Kiely received a letter from Johnny Reinhart, former court stenographer, this morning, that was mailed from Douglas, Arizona, on July 16, in which he says he is in excellent health and working hard. It is 112 degrees in the shade, Johnny says, although there is little shade to look at the thermometer in. Nothing is to be seen for a mile, he says, but cactus and desert.

Although he says he was glad when Troop D arived, he says he is still in Troop C, the cavalry company he joined at Sea Girt and went to the border with before the local troop. Several days later he went on a hike with part of the company and walked over the battleground of Auga Prieta.

RUSSIAN FORCES CROSS THE LIPA

Victorious in Three Big Battles Taking Many Prisoners and Guns.

LULL ALONG THE SOMME

Next British Attack Expected to Be for Capture of Third German Line Berlin in Official Statement Admits Losses.

London, July 22.—According to the official bulletin arriving at Petrograd today General Saharoff has crossed the Lipa River and the enemy has been forced to retreat in great disorder. Russians captured 1,000 prisoners and four cannon on the northern bank of the Lipa and at the crossing of Syr the number of prisoners was increased to 2,817 men and 75 officers, three guns and considerable war material. The Austro-Hungarian war office officially admits the reverse and adds that the Russians have been successful in a series of moves during the past twenty-four hours.

A lull occurred in the stupendous operations on the Somme today following the vigorous British and French attacks. The Berlin official statement says that more than 200,000 troops attacked the German forces Thursday on a front of twenty-seven miles. Vast troops have been shifted from Verdun to stem the Allies' advance on the west front

The next attack of the British is expected to be for the capture of the German third line in the Foureaux Wood, northeast of Longueval. It is a stragetic point and its capture would bring General Haig's forces to the highest point on the ridge commanding the German positions in the less hilly country beyond. The Germans are fighting desperately to hold what they have left of this wood.

According to the official statement issued at Petrograd, a Russian battalion is engaged with the Austro-Hungarian rear guard in the region of Berestechk. More than 1,600 prisoners, including many officers, were taken by the pursuers.

Berestechk is of strategical importance to the Russians in their drive toward the heart of Galicia. The new advance threatens both Lemberg, the Galician capital, and Brody, half way between Lemberg and the Volhynian fortress of Dubno. Twenty miles to the west of Berestechk lies Stojanow, the terminal of a railway running directly to Lemberg. The distance from Berestechk to Brody is only seventeen and one-half miles. Thus the Russians will be in a position to drive to the Galician capital from two directions as soon as they have reached the Stojanow-Lemberg railway, due west, and the Dubno-Brody-Lemberg road, southeast.

Artillery duels were in progress all night on the Somme front with both sides preparing for attacks and counter attacks. Today's statement issued by the War Office did not mention any infantry action. Both British and German positions in the sector of Foreaux Wood, where here was severe infantry fighting yesterday, were heavily shelled.

Berlin, July 22.—It is admitted in a statement from the War Office that the German line along a front of about two miles south of Hardecourt was driven into its second trenches about half a mile back and that enemy forces penetrated into the German salient at the Wood of Vermandovillers.

Paris, July 22.—Renewing their assaults on the Verdun front the Germans attacked the French positions last night, but according to today's communique issued by the War Office all were repulsed. At the same time the Germans assaulted the French positions in the Vosges Mountains, but met with no better success.

The supreme decision of the war will take place on the western battlefield, says General Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief of the British army, in a statement printed in the Matin today. The statement adds: "We must impose a worthy peace for we shall have paid the price for it."

Amsterdam, July 22.—Placards announcing that Germany may evacuate Belgium on the payment of $1,000,000,000 indemnity have been posted in the barracks at Ghent, says the Echo de Belge today. The posters also state that negotiations have been opened between the United States and Germany relative to the giving up of Belgium.

BAT CAUSES COMMOTION IN BOROUGH BARBERSHOP

The commotion which attracted so much attention in the vicinity of George H. Richter's barber shop last night, which led some people to think that murder was being committed, was due to Mr. Richter's efforts to kill a bat which had taken up its abode in his tonsorial parlors. In his attempt to kill the animal, the wall decorations were considerably damaged. Finally, the bat found an exit through a screen door and quiet reigned once more on the borough's busy thoroughfare.

LOCAL MAN NAMED ON NEW BRITISH "BLACKLIST"

In the revised "blacklist" issued by the British government of "persons and firms whose transactions it is undesirable to facilitate or finance" the name of Leon P. Mainetty of South avenue, appears in the list contained in thirty-four pages. There are several other local business men who expect to be placed on the list also, and it means that the English government forbids any one in the United Kingdom from trading with those firms.

In the majority of cases those named on the list have been of German nationality. Mr. Mainetty is an Italian by birth and was born in Turkey at the time his father was consul to that country from Italy.

Accessories for Sea Bathers

In bathing caps and hats there is endless variety and very considerable charm as well as mild fantasy.

The coolie hat of bright hued rubber perched upon a tight cap of the same rubber, the flat mortar board with pendant tassel posed in like fashion upon a head hugging cap, the Rob Roy cap with fluttering ribbons of the rubber, the rubber Breton cap, the satin rubber turban trimmed in satin roses, the close diving caps of bright rubber with tiny frill or band of contrasting rubber, the mushroom brim hats of gayly checked tub satin, the satin crowned, wide rubber brimmed hat trimmed in rubber flowers and worn over a close cap—these are only a few of the successors to the once inevitable mob cap or bright knotted kerchief.

There are beach scarfs of rubber, too, (the thin rubber in lovely colorings, with a bloom upon it which is so generally used for caps), amazing scarfs, some of them, with deep cut fringe ends and applied designs of contrasting rubber.

There are also the futurist-like beach cushions of rubber in brilliant contrasting colors and curious designs, or in black and white even more startling than the colors.

As for shoes: Well, bathing shoe and sandals are of many new shape and kinds, with high laced shoes in the lead, and one is quite as likely to see socks worn with them as to see stockings, if the manufacturers have their way.

No 1.—Skirt of velvet corduroy, in gores of alternate colorings: White with taupe, white with green, white with red, white with purple. Belt of self color. $6.75.

No. 2.—Top coat of tweed, showerproof, in light and dark gray and brown mixtures, yoke and sleeves lined. Bone buttons. $18.50.

To Remove Spots from Linen

Nearly all spots of fruit juice, wine or other stains will come from table linen if boiling water is turned through the spots before they are put into the suds. If they are stubborn, however salts of lemon, spirits of wine or ammonia will usualty remove the stains.

If they do not, try javelle water. In all cases rinse the linen thoroughly before putting it into the suds. Ink stains will come out if oxalic acid or salts of sorrel are used. First dip the article in hot water, then spread it smoothly on the hand or the back of a spoon and pour a few drops of the acid or salts on the spot, then rub and rinse in cold water until the spot is removed.

Grease spots usually give way before a thorough application of yellow soap and a rinsing of hot water.

Tussore Used for Frocks

In the holiday wardrobe, if you expect to play tennis, it is necessary to own at least one pretty, easy-fitting frock, one made of tussore is preferable.

This silk is an old friend coming very much to the fore again, and washes very well.

There are all sorts of dyed tussors and flowered tussores, but for a frock of this kind the plain natural fabric is the best. It is strong and so cool.

If you like to see a touch of darker color associated with it, choose nigger-brown, introducing a waistband, cuffs and facings of it. This would be particularly becoming to the brunette but, if your locks are fair, stick to the plain unadorned tussore, completing neck and sleeves with the usual muslin set in white or blue.

Tussore is also charming for more dressy folks. The plain ground offers, moreover, a splendid opportunity for applying that personal touch which embroidery lends to a gown and which is always much appreciated.

To Wash Lace

Lace collars and cuffs should be carefully basted on a strip of flannel, then placed in a suds of lukewarm water and soap and allowed to soak for an hour.

They may then be washed between the hands, rinsed carefully and put in the sun to dry. When almost dry remove the pieces from the flannel and pick out the edges; next lay on the ironing board, covering with a piece of thin, dry flannel, and press with a hot iron until dry. Then lay the lace on a tray in the sun for 20 minutes. This will restore the color and natural firmness.

Black lace may be washed clean, then dipped into a little carefully made and strained coffee, which will restore its color and stiffness, but the lace must be well aired after so doing.

Swagger Sticks

The summer girl must go garbed in things to match. Now she may alternate a cane with a parasol to match her hat, sports coat, bag, belt and stockings.

When the wind blows too freely the parasol is left at home and a short swagger stick covered with the material of the rest of the set is substituted. These swagger sticks promise to become very popular with tailored and sports attire. They may be covered with short tight covers to be made at any umbrella shop out of the suit material or a contrasting color.

White kid with amber tops are good, and the braided leather throng is seen on these as well as on the umbrellas and sun and rain parasols.

Cotton Nets

Cotton nets are useful for the everyday afternoon frock of summer. These nets give good wear, and they can be made as elaborate with tucks and lace as desired. They can also be made into the simplest of frocks.

MORRIS IS HAVING GREAT TIME AT PLATTSBURG CAMP

Letters received in this city from Lieutenant of Police Maurice Higgans indicate that he is having a great time at Plattsburg, where he is at the military training camp. Hard work has not affected his appetite, as nearly every other word in his letters has something to say about "eats." On his first day out on the range he qualified as a marksman by making four shots out of a possible fifty, and on the marches he also hold his own. On a six-mile "hike" Thursdey, he says, the heat was so intense that several men fell, but he stuck it out with the rest.

He also sends a schedule that is followed out at the camp. The day starts with mess at 6:00. From 7:20 to 11:30 the time is spent on the parade ground, at 12:00 is noonday mess. In the afternoon they are back on the parade ground from 1:50 to 4:00, with dress parade at 5:00 and mess at 6:$$. From 6:30 to 8:30 the men all gather for a lecture and then follows an hour before reveille.

He afterward said the terms offered him in his contract were satisfactory and that he and Herrman easily reached an agreement. Neither Herrmann nor Mathewson would say what the terms were. The New York contracts with "Eddie" Rousch and "Bill" McKechnie, who were obtained by Cincinnati in the trade for Mathewson, were assumed by the local club. Rousch has a one-year contract and McKechnie two years.

ALBERT WALPOLE HELD ON ROBBERY CHARGE

City Judge DeMeza Fixes Bail at $3,000 and Youth Goes to County Jail.

The last one to be caught and the alleged ring-leader of the trio of Scotch Plains youths implicated in a "fake" robbery at the Netherwood railroad station on June 30, when over $600 was taken, Albert Walpole was arraigned before City Judge William G. DeMeza this morning and held in $3,000 to await the action of the grand jury. Walpole was caught in Brooklyn several weeks ago and brought to this city by Police Chief Kiely yesterday after extraditon papers had been obtained.

Walpole, together with Gabriel Groletto and John Southard, also of Scotch Plains, it is said, arranged the "holdup" when he and Groletto were to waylay Southard on his way home from the Netherwood station, where he was agent. Walpole, it is alleged, got away with $500 while the other two were caught. When apprehended by Lieutenant Higgins, Walpole was adorned in silks and "hitting the high spots." He was taken to the county jail today.

HEALTH VIOLATORS ARE TO BE SEVERELY PUNISHED

Morris Levine and Abe Deutsch, both storekeepers of West Third street, were arraigned before City Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning charged with violating the sanitary code. They were remanded for trial until Monday morning.

One arm from the shoulder to the wrist is still paralyzed, but he is now able to move his fingers for the first time.

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

Press' printing is the result of ceaseless efforts to render the best service.

It's just as easy to tell a happy store as it is to tell a happy home. The minute you step inside the door you feel a certain atmosphere—you know whether you want to go back or not. Making a happy store is not altogether a simple affair; it depends on many things—chiefly on the customers' good-will and on the employes' good-will.

Sixteen years ago, before anyone else had considered the matter, James A. Hearn and Son decided that during the summer (July and August) they would close their store the whole day Saturday. In this way they could give their employes two full days to rest and to enjoy out of doors.

This policy was so sane, so altogether reasonable, that public opinion has forced practically all department stores to close the entire day Saturday.

But isn't there something quite fine and worth while about a firm that is always on the lookout to make its employes happy? It means a consideration that is bound to show, in fair business relations to all its patrons. Fair and considerate treatment of employes means that the policy of the Firm is faithfully carried out to the public.

Samuel Hopkins Adams said, in the Tribune of July 14th in speaking of a replacement of a loss in which the Hearn store was in no way to blame, "But James A. Hearn and Son—rather than have their customers suffer a loss and perhaps feel a sense of injustice—promptly made good a full assumption of responsibility."

That expresses much—"a full assumption of responsibility." It applies throughout the store, from the smallest purchase to every word of advertising. No adjective is allowed to go in unchallenged. The words special, unusual or remarkable are never used unless they apply literally. The words must describe accurately the goods that are offered. Perhaps that policy of full responsibility—real stability—explains why this business of eighty-nine years' duration has so completely maintained the confidence of its patrons.

We have been adding equipment to our delivery service from time to time, but the public's patronage has been so increasingly generous that we have been hard put to it to make deliveries promptly. We have still further augmented our equipment and are now prepared to meet the most exacting requirements.

CAPE COD SPIRITUALISTS.

Harwichport, Mass., July 22.—Cape Cod Spiritualists and Liberals, said to be the oldest Spiritualist camp of its kind in the world, will observe its fiftieth anniversary here during the week beginning tomorrow. In 1866 the Cape Cod Spiritualists held their first meeting at Pleasant Lake. For several years thereafter they were held at Harwich Centre. Since 1868 the camp has been located at Ocean Grove, Harwichport. Here a large memorial hall, known as Lincoln Hall, has just been finished in honor of the semi-centennial celebration.

OHIO MINERS' CELEBRATION.

Athens, O., July 22.—With Governor Willis as the chief speaker and many notable guests in attendance the mine owners and miners of the Ohio bituminous district joined in a great outdoor demonstration today at the village of Gloucester. The demonstration was held in celebration of the resumption of work in the mines, after a long period of idleness, and the recent reduction of freight rates by the State public utilities commission.

LITERARY

A Baseball Scout's Complaint.

Hugh S. Fullerton has a short story in the August American Magazine in which a professional baseball scout laments the tricks of bush league managers. One of them says:

"If a scout don't keep his eyes open those bush managers are worse than a bunch of salted mine promoters, so I don't ask any questions, but goes around snooping after Musser. Everyone in Muskegon knows all about that game, but no one knows Musser—new man. I had to hunt up the manager and take a chance of having acid enough to test his gold bricks. But this one was different. When I asked about Musser he said, 'Shush-sh-sh-sahh,' and I has to walk him around in front of the mirror so the bartender can't hear before he'll say a word. Then he leans over and says, 'Shush-sh-sh! College man. Rich daddy. Pitching under fake name. Afraid he'll lose his amateur standing. Hired him to pitch one game, won a sockful. Musser wouldn't even stay to supper. "Shush-sh-sh-shhh!'"

Mary Synon's "My Grandmother and Myself," in the August Scribner, Fiction Number, is about as fine an appeal to loyalty as you will ever read. The story of the blind old Irishwoman, whose gateway to the land of the free was Castle Garden, now the Aquarium, in Battery Park, New York, will do a lot to squelsh the hyphen problem.

"'Did you ever think what it means to the poor souls who come here alone for their living. When you've a house of your own, Shauneen, with men servants and maid servants, don't forget that your father's mother worked out for some time. They were kind people, too, who took me to their homes. Don't forget that either. For 'tis my first memory of America. Kind they were, and just. They helped me save what I earned and showed me ways of helping my folks at home. I'd brought out Danny and James and Ellen and Mary before the war. I met each one of them right here at Castle Garden. That's why I always think of this place as the gateway through which the Irish have come to America. Sure Ellis Island's been for the Italians and the Jews and the Greeks. We didn't wait outside the door. We came straight in,' she chuckled."

—Find the "likely-looking" ads. in today's classified columns—and solve that problem of yours.

—If you have something to rent, you have something to advertise—and something that it will pay you to advertise adequately and persistently.

PLANS OUT FOR QUEEN CITY HOTEL CHANGES

Improvements to Cost $35,000, and Include Elevator and Garage Building.

Plans for the remodeling of the Queen City Hotel that will make it one of the best hostelries in the State have been completed by Oakley & Son, architects, of Elizabeth, and J. A. Staats, the owner, is planning to let the contracts for the work as soon as the present lease expires in October. Mr. Staats expects that the building will be ready by early spring. A prospective of the Queen City after it is remodeled is on exhibition in a window of a Park avenue store.

The new plans call for the extending of the Second street end of the building so that the entire building will be of four stories. That will mean an additional twenty-two rooms with private baths, making a total of seventy rooms in all, thirty of which will have baths.

The dining room will be left in the same location as present but will be so enlarged that it will have nearly double its present capacity. The bar, lobby and office will also remain in the present sections of the structure but will be enlarged. All of the rooms will be redecorated.

Two new features that will account for the expenditure of $35,000 on the improvements will be the building of a separate structure for the storage of automobiles and the putting in of an elevator in the hotel. The garage will have a capacity of from twenty to twenty-five cars and will be intended especially for the convenience of dinner parties who come by automobile. The elevator will run up through the center of the building and will relieve the necessity of walking up and down stairs.

As at the present time, Mr. Staats will run the hostelry on the European plan and will cater especially to dinner parties.

LAING AUTO COMPANY TO BUILD REPAIR PLANT

It became known today that Isabel Laing, a member of the Alien H. Laing Automobile Company, is having plans prepared for the erection of a fireproof brick building adjoining the Laing garage on East Fourth street to be used as an automobile repairing plant. The proposed building will be one story in height and have measurements of 30x30x40.

Plans have not yet been filed with the building inspector and the amount to be expended and the contractors are not yet known as a result.

NEW BRUNSWICK TO HAVE NEW $50,000 BUILDING

A contract has been filed at the county clerk's office in New Brunswick between Fred Kilgus, Inc., contractor, and the Ringwalt Linoleum Company, owner, for the erection of a new factory building on the lands of the Ringwalt concern on Godwise avenue.

The contract price is $51,000, exclusive of boiler house, and the building is to be ready for occupancy by October 2, 1916. Ballinger & Perrot, of New York and Philadelphia, are the architects.

Since it was located there in 1912, the Ringwalt concern has had a most gratifying growth and the new building is required to take care of the extension in the firm's business. Local capital has been interested to quite an extent in the company.

Building permits took a big drop 250 for the month of July and $11,-ceding week and only totaled $11,-900. This makes a total of $74,-250fo r the month of July and $71,-415 for the year.

There were only three permits issued during the week by Building Inspector Doane for two dwellings and one garage. The biggest of the permits was for $7,800. That amount will be expended by Ernest T. Hand, Sr., of Netherwood avenue, for the erection of a two and a half story modern house on Dixie lane. It will measure 36x24 and will include a kitchen, dining room, reception room and library on the first floor, four rooms and bath on the second floor and two sleeping rooms in the attic. TIRE AND RUBBER CO. TO OPEN IN ABOUT A MONTH

The India Tire and Rubber Company, which was incorporated in New Brunswick Thursday, will be running on full time at its plant on the old Middlesex Bridge Company property on Lawrence avenue within thirty days and will employ a force of from 35 to 40 men on full time, according to a statement made by Willard P. Fraley, of that city, the president of the new corporation.

The necessary machinery for the plant has all been delivered and is now being installed in readiness for the operation of the plant. A number of rubber experts have been secured to put it in, and the work will be rushed as quickly as possible. It is expected that when the new plant is in operation it will turn out at least fifty tires a day at the beginning.

The company is planning to manufacture solid rubber motor truck tires of the steel base variety for the use of commercial motor truck vehicles. There is a steadily increasing demand for these tires throughout the United States, and the company will be forced to run at its full capacity in order to keep up with the demand.

DESIGNED BY CHAS S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT

OUR illustration this week is for a modern "Colonial" house having a frontage of 34 feet exclusive of the piazza on the right side that is 10 feet in width, and an equal depth of 34 feet over the main part. The house is built frame construction with wide siding and shingled roofs. There is a good full basement complete with laundry, rooms for heating plant, fuel, vegetables, toilet room, etc. It is estimated to build complete, exclusive of heating and plumbing, for $5,000 to $6,000.

The vestibule entrance is central through a modest Colonial porch, with brick platform, steps and buttresses and a seat on each side. The front treatment of house is symmetrical with wide windows each side of entrance, windows over and dormers in roof. It is designed to stain all shingles moss green and paint the outside old ivory white. The interior arrangement has had careful study and has many pleasing features. The living room on the right with wide fireplace, and library on the left. The main stairs leading up from the center opposite the entrance, with liberal platforms. The dining room in the rear of the living room and the kitchen in the rear of the library with good pantry between.

There is a stairway from the basement to the attic and so arranged as to keep entirely separate the rear portion of the house from the front. The first story is to be furnished in fumed oak except the library—that is in white enamel. The second story chambers are also to be in white enamel with red mahogany doors. The floors are of oak and birch. The attic is large and space for two or more good rooms, but not finished in this estimate. The chambers are all good sized and provided with ample closets and a liberal bathroom, well located.

BUILDING NOTES

Contractors have practically completed work on the building of a one-story addition to the Marshal building on Watchung avenue. The structure will be used to take care of the overflow of busoness from Mr. Marshall's laundry.

Jeremiah Manning has started a force of men at work on the addition to the home of J. Herbert Case on Martine avenue and expects to have it completed in six weeks.

Contractors are now well advanced on the remodeling of the structure at 1090 Park avenue into the Wardlaw School and will have it completed in time for the fall opening.

Contractors who tore the dwelling down at Fifth street and Sycamore street to make room for the new Y. M. C. A. structure are now putting it up on South avenue opposite the site of the J. D. Loizeaux yard.

Actual work has now been started on the building of the new plant at the Standard Arco Company's factory on North avenue. Work on the new structure, which will be one story in height and built on the west end of the main building, will be rushed foward as rapidly as possible by the New York Corrigated Structure Company, which has the contract.

Miss L. E. Connett, of 23 Warren street, North Plainfield, has purchased a tract of land in the Adirondacks. It is understood that she will develop it for speculative purposes.

Theodore Crohen, executor of the estate of Hermann Crohen, has sold a tract of land that is a part of the estate just east of Berckman street on East Front street to Godfrey Welman, of Sandford avenue. The tract is 150 feet by 303 feet and was formerly a part of the Edward W. Marsh estate. It adjoins the property of L. V. F. Randolph and was said to have brought in the neighborhood of $7,500.

The Sattels property on North avenue, which was recently sold to Sigmund Frucht and just been resold to Daly Bros., the grocers, who are going to move into it on August first. The selling price, it is said, was $7,500.

Build It of WHITE PINE

Whether you're going to build a home, barn, garage, or henhouse, White Pine will give you longest service and greatest satisfaction.

No wood equals White Pine for all exposed surfaces. Three centuries of building experience in America prove this. It does not warp, sag, twist or split after years of exposure even in closest mortises and in delicate mouldings.

Its popularity has never waned since the Pilgrims used it, but many people who know the desirable qualities of believe it is difficult to obtain. Such is not the case, as the ample stocks in our yards bear witness. And its longer service makes it most economical, even at a slightly higher first cost.

Get our prices on this king of all structural woods and—if you don't already know its advantages—let us tell you more about them.

It costs no more to buy your lumber at home—often less—freight considered, and you can see what you get before you pay for it. Then, too, we are "on the ground" to serve you—always as near as your phone.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, JULY 22, 1916.

On Saturdays the editorial column of the Daily Press is conducted, at our request, by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is Alfred C. Estes, General Secretary Y. M. C. A.

To clear the understanding and pave the way for a united effort in the campaign to be held next November for funds to erect and equip a new Y. M. C. A. building it may not be out of place to enumerate as well as answer some of the "WHYS" regarding location, need, and the real purpose of a modern association building.

The question has often been asked why the new site at the corner of Fifth and Sycamore streets was chosen, for to the inquirers some other place nearer Front street and Watchung avenue would have been better. There was a time years ago when the association building was almost as much the stopping place for transients as it was the rendezvous of members. Again in planning the old type building space was alloted on the ground floor for stores. This situation of course demanded a location right in the heart of the business section. These conditions have now changed, however, as will be seen later on.

Other considerations in the present case were the expense involved and the shape and size of the lot. The Fifth street property met these requirements.

The need and purpose of a new building are set forth as follows:

First. Since work was started in the present building more than twenty years ago, association methods have changed so much that the old plant is not adapted to present day needs. At that time little or no work was done for boys; now it is a very important part, and the old building is so constructed that it is impossible to separate the men and boys which must be the case if efficient work is to be done for each.

Second. The physical department with its lockers, antiquated shower baths and small pool is overcrowded. With poor light and ventilation, which cannot be changed, it is impossible to provide proper sanitation. The bowling alleys had to give way to the need for more locker space, while the auditorium has been turned into an auxiliary gymnasium.

Third. An important feature of the association building today is in providing a home for young men away from home by furnishing at moderate cost, comfortable dormitory rooms and this is one very important reason why the location should at least be on the edge of the residential section, for men as a general rule do not care to live where they work. The Fifth street site is ideal in this respect, meeting as it does the above need and yet being accessible to all lines of travel and close to the business section.

Fourth. In the modern building the valuable ground floor is no longer used for rental purposes, the rented portion being in the upper floors, which are, as stated above, devoted to dormitories, thus leaving the ground floor free for the social activities of the members.

Fifth. The present equipment is practically worn out and even if the old building could be made sanitary and fairly comfortable for the present needs, the expense of which would be almost as great as to build new, according to a careful estimate made by a recognized expert in association buildings, there would still remain an old plant and one very expensive to operate.

Sixth. The proposed new building in itself will be the equal of any in the State in architectural beauty and construction, doing credit to the enterprise and spirit of Plainfield.

For years the directors of the Young Men's Christian Association, all of whom are representative men, have been carefully considering the needs of the boys and young men of our city and have reached the conclusion that in order to best meet these needs, the old building must be abandoned, and a new one erected on the best site available, corner of Fifth and Sycamore streets, where the character forming activities of the all around association work may find an equipment adequate to the demands.

ALFRED C. ESTES.

Plainfield Theatre.

A great deal of film comedy is horseplay, but David W. Griffith, in "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the Plainfield Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, proves that quiet and refined comedy is a big laugh maker and pleases people better than the old style, crude methods. One of the best laughs in "The Birth of a Nation" is the lovesick sentry in the hospital scene, gazing at Elsie Stoneman. This particular bit is of the "sure fire" order, for never does an audience miss the rapt devotion of the sentinel and the haughty expression of the young lady rebuking him with a million-miles-away look.

Paul Le Blanc is the name of the young actor who has made the unexpected hit in the part. He is a New Orleans Creole by birth and played comedy roles with Mme. Bernhardt before going out to Los Angeles, where Mr. Griffith discovered him. Miss Lillian Gish wears her costumes of Civil War and reconstruction times that are heirlooms in her family. Seats for the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" are now on sale at the box office. Daily matinees will be given.

Proctor's Theatre

Gertrude Hornidge, the talented soprano, appearing at each performance, is becoming quite popular with local film fans, and her rendition of the latest song hits in conjunction with their presentation on the screen in story form has created a favorable impression among the Proctor patrons. This is a distinct novelty and an attraction that provides variety for those attending the photoplay entertainment, and the Proctor management are to be commended upon their zeal in thus providing for the amusement of their patrons.

Today Harold Lockwood and May Allison are co-starred in their first Metro production entitled "The Come-Back." Lockwood has the role of a worthless young man, whose sole occupation is "Busting Bubbles" in Broadway cafes. His father, of course, eventually tells him he is no good, and the son starts out to prove eh is. He proves it by going to a lumber camp in the North woods, and regaining his moral and physical manhood by becoming one with the the management of the camp, reporting his discovery to his father—the owner. The scenes in the snow-buried woods are excellent examples of wisdom in the selections of locations, and add a great deal to the value of the pictures. Vivian Rich is also seen today in a gripping mystery story entitled "Killed By Whom," and the latest Mutual Weekly also appears on today's program.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Anna Pavlowa, the famous Russian dancer, will appear in her first photoplay, a mammoth and gorgeously produced film spectacle entitled "The Dumb Girl of Portici," presented in eight lavish parts, and adapted from the famous opera "Masaniello," by Lois Weber, and produced at a cost exceeding a quarter of a million dollars by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley. Over 5,000 people were used in its production and nearly 9,000 scenes are witnessed by the spectators. Added features include on Monday the 12th episode of "The Mysteries of Myra," and on Tuesday, the 7th chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine."

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Unpardonable.

We can forgive the hair-brained mutt who trumps his partner's ace;
The bonehead who buys mining stock may have a saving grace;
There may be circumstances when we can forgive the goat
Who takes a woman out to row and gaily rocks the boat;
We may, perchance, deal lightly with the chump who hands his friend
A carefully prepared cigar, which shoots sparks at the end;
The man who borrows our lawn-mower and keeps the thing a week
May have some saving qualities of which we cannot speak,
But we cannot find one kind word of any sort to say
About the gink who says: "Old man, you're looking bad today."

Uncle Abner

There are enough other ways to be unhappy without wearin' a stiff bosom shirt on work days.

Nobody knows just how a married couple can get along peacefully as well as do a man and woman who have been married about two weeks.

Hank Tumms is a good feller and everybody knows it, exceptin' his wife.

The feller that keeps braggin' about his virtue hasn't had it very long.

Willie Tumms has learned how to chew tobacco and when he grows up he will probably either be a baseball pitcher or a member of the supreme court.

There ain't nothing that a woman wants worse than a safety pin when she wants it.

Making a Noise.

When we purchased our almost-mobile a gentleman came to us and told us that our old rubber bulb honker was passe. "Smart folks are not using them any more. Honk horns don't attract any attention and don't make the police get a bit angry. What you want is my patent wildcat yeller. It makes a sound exactly like a wildcat suffering from a severe toothache and can be heard for nine miles on a level road and when there are hills it echoes and re-echoes for a week. If you pass the same spot a week later you will still hear the wildcat signal that you let loose the week before. It is guaranteed to topple the driver off from a coal wagon. The price complete and installed is $47."

We had the wildcat screecher put on and it remained in service for nearly a month when we fell for a new pipe organ attachment which cost $56.75. On this horn we could play almost any tune from "The Doxology" to "Tipperary." If we had to run over a cat we could do it to music.

The pipe organ was in style for two weeks when a man came and sold us a night owl hooter. From that we went to the elephant trumpet, the hyena shriek, the rattlesnake rattle and the tomcat howl and we are still looking for perfection in noises.

When some man invents an automobile horn that will emit a sound that is pleasant and terrifying, soothing and nerve-racking all at once he will have solved the problem. In the meanwhile we have paid more for noises than we paid for the car originally.

Still at It.

Mary had an automobile
And she ran it like a man;
'Twas a dandy, forty-horsepower,
Bought on the instalment plan.
As a driver she was reckless
And went whizzing through the town;
She defied speed regulations
And she ran people down.

Mary couldn't make her payments,
And they took the car away,
Then she was almighty lonesome,
Knew not how to spend the day.
So she joined a sewing circle,
'Twas a club of great renown;
There she's perfectly at home, for
She's still running people down.

GOOD CHANCE FOR SERVICE ON BORDER

Recruiting Stations Have Been Opened in Several Cities of the State.

In compliance with instructions received from headquarters of the Eastern Department of the United States Army at Governors Island, New York city, recruiting offices have been opened in several cities and towns throughout this State.

Recruits enlisting at these offices will be given their choice of joining any regiment, troop or battery now in service on the border from this State. Men will also be accepted for the United States Army at these offices. This is an excellent chance for young men to see active service.

The State has been divided into districts with a recruiting station in each district. Recruits living in that part of the State south of a line from the Raritan River to Sea Girt, will be enlisted at the Armory of Battery B, Ninth street and Whright avenue, Camden, where an office has been established under the command of First Lieutenant Samuel Brown, Third Infantry, and a detail of enlisted men.

Men will be enlisted and physically examined in Camden and then sent to a recruit rendezvous at Du Pont, Del., where they will be shipped and sent direct to the border in detachments of fifty or one hundred.

The New Jersey troops are stationed on the most desirable spot along the border. Douglas, Arizona, is situated in the mountains, about 8,000 feet above sea level, with cool, pleasant and healthful climate.

It is the intention of the War Department to recruit all State organizations to full war strength and to fill vacancies caused by the honorable discharge of soldiers having dependent families.

MAJORITY FOR MARTINE CERTAIN, LEADERS SAY

Opinion is that Farmer Orator "Has Been Faithful and On the Job."

"It appears to be a certainty in the minds of Democratic leaders that Union county will give a big majority for Senator James E. Martine for renomination," says the Elizabeth Journal.

"With the gubernatorial plum already allotted to ex-Otto Wittpenn, the interest in Democratic State politics is centred largely upon the selection of a United States Senator and in some sections a decided opposition to Martine has set in, in favor of Attorney-General John W. Wescott. Following the announcement that James Nugent, of Essex, would support Wescott, and that some of the Hudson county leaders would oppose the "Farmer orator" from Plainfield, speculation has been rife as to how Union county will stand.

"This question has been put to a number of prominent Democrats in the county, on both sides of the so-called political fence, and the answer has been invariably that Martine would be well supported in his home county. His friends here, moreover, are of the opinion that the opposition which has apparently developed in Essex and Hudson will not prove very formidable and they are still confident that he will carry the nomination at the primaries.

"The general impression of Martine in the county is that he has been a faithful representative for the State in the Senate. While some of his acts have not been fully approved of here, he nevertheless is pointed out as being 'on the job,' imbued with the courage of his convictions and unafraid always to be recorded either for or against any proposition that may come up."

SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED FOR FRESH AIR HOME

The regular services at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:45. The speaker will be the Rev. C. S. Gillespie, of the Grace M. E. church, and there will be special music by the children's choir. Services are held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings each week, and the speakers for these services this coming week will be the Rev. E. C. Conover, A. C. Estes, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and the Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring. These services are open to the public and adults will be made welcome. There has been no illness of any kind at the Home this season and the children and mothers who have had the good fortune to be at the Home during the trying days in the city are in better condition to go back and fight the illnes incident to life in the city than they otherwise would have been. Owing to the absence of visitors at the afternoon services one of the main sources of revenue has been cut off, and contributions of money, clothing and fruits and vegetables will be gratefully received.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No. 1, Plainfield, says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventative of any serious trouble."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wahl had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advt.

The King and Archbishop Followed Her.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Elise Made A Last Trip For Nettles.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

AFTER Jack and Evelyn had finished their supper daddy told them about the brave princess, Elise, who stole out of her chamber one night to pick nettles in the churchyard to make into flax with which she could weave the coats for her brothers, who were turned into swans each night. The coats were to save them from this spell.

"Now, Elise was watched by one person," daddy began, "the old archbishop, who stayed awake while others slept to see what the new queen might do. He had never liked her, and when he saw her gathering nettles in the churchyard he felt sure she was bewitched, you see. He thought that later she might bewitch the king and the people."

"How stupid!" cried Jack.

"So he ran and told the king what he had seen and what he feared. When his bad words left his lips all the pictures of saints on the wall shook their heads as if to say no. But the old archbishop thought they were bearing witness against her. Two big tears rolled down the king's face, and he went away with doubt in his heart. He pretended to sleep, but when Elise got out of bed and went to her cave chamber to weave he felt that something was wrong. Day by day his face grew darker, but Elise could not imagine the cause of it. She suffered more, already suffering enough for her brothers. Her tears ran down her purple robe like sparkling diamonds, so that all who saw her wished they were queens too.

"She had almost reached the end of her long labor of love for her brothers, for only one shirt was left to weave. But, alas, her flax had given out, and she had no more nettles left to make more. Once more she must go to the churchyard and pluck a few handfuls of nettles. She dreaded the trip, but her courage was high because she thought she was now near the end of her long labor and silence.

"When Elise started for the churchyard that night the king and the archbishop followed her. They saw her disappear within the grated gate. They saw the deep shadows she crept through, and the king was sorry she was his queen. 'The people must judge her!' he groaned. And the people judged that she must be burned," daddy finished.

"She wasn't a real witch, was she, daddy?" asked Jack.

"She was an agel much misunderstood," daddy assured him.

"Tell us some more, daddy," they begged.

And daddy kissed them.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

In Which Ethel Runs Away and Ralph Breathes a Sigh of Relief.

When Ethel awoke it was broad daylight and the house was very still. She looked at her watch and found it was nearly nine o'clock.

"Well, I wanted to sleep till after Ralph was gone," she reflected as she lay back on her pillow, "and I shall be gone when he comes home to dinner. I will never stay here to be slighted and punished as if i had committed a crime just because I bought a suit and had it charged. As if I could do anything else when I never have a dollar to spend. The idea of his leaving me all the evening and when he did come home and I waited up for him to go off to the spare room and leave me as he thought asleep. Mr. Ralph shall pay for that. I will run away some where and he shall have a nice little worry before he finds where I have gone." Ethel rose and dressed herself for the street.

"I have it!" she exclaimed aloud, going to her purse. She counted the money. "There is plenty to pay my board down at Mrs. Tellson's for three or four weeks and Ralph would never think of looking there for me." She made herself a cup of coffee and a slice of toast, then sat down to write a note for Ralph to find when he came at noon. When it was finished she laid it where he would be sure to find it, then stood back, trying to imagine how her husband would feel. It read:

"Dear Ralph: I am going away. I can not stay where I am not loved and where I seem only to make trouble. I shall never come back till you really want me, faults and all.—Ethel."

"There! That sounds demure enough," she thought, "but I think it will bring him to time. If i come back I shall make my own terms." Ethel's lips were pressed in a hard thin line.

She locked the door behind her and made her way to the station in time to take the morning train to Riverdale, where she hired an auto livery to set her down at Mrs. Tellson's door, much to that good lady's astonishment.

When Ralph came home at noon he was surprised to find the door locked, and his lip curled in scorn when he read the note.

"Well, I can straighten things out here and have the comfort of an orderly house for a while," he thought. His foot accidentally turned up the rug near him and he gave a little snort of contempt as he discovered the dust and threads hidden from view that should have been taken up in the dustpan. "A woman who will practice such pharisaical neatness in her home can be expected to be deceitful in other ways," he reflected.

He went to the icechest and found a disordered lot of fragments of food that were past being used. By the time he had scraped together a lunch and cleaned out the refrigerator it was time to return to the office.

"Well, my lady, if you stay away long enough, I can get your debts paid up. I think your going was a good scheme."

ACTIVITIES AT THE 1ST BAPTIST CHURCH

Plans Underway for Erecting Sunday School Chapel to Meet Growth.

The work at the First Baptist church, which has been progressing so well since the close of the Biederwolf campaign continues semi-weekly, and other baptisms will take place before the pastor's departure for his vacation, the next administration of the ordinance being Wednesday evening, July 26.

So large have been the additions to the church and to the Bible school that both organizations are facing serious problems. The famous Probasco class has outgrown its quarters, and has made formal application for larger accommodations. The same is practically true of the Matlack class, while the other and smaller classes have been increased proportionately.

The trustees will doubtless make some readjustment of the partitions in the Sunday school room, which will in part meet these requirements, but it will only be temporary at best and it is expected that a Sunday school chapel will have to be erected on the lot adjoining the church proper.

An important campaign is to be inaugurated by the Batchelor class, a class consisting of men in middle life and more advanced age. This class, which has one of the best teachers, is about to make a canvass for additnonal members, intending to double its membership by "Rally Day" in September, and then to make an effort to redouble the membership as then constituted. At the campfire Thursday evening much enthusiasm and interest was manifested along these lines and the success of the effort is practically assured.

EMIL HOOS RELEASED IN BAIL ON DISORDERLY CHARGE

Emil Hoos, of Greenbrook road, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Charles E. Neier in North Plainfield last night, on charges of assault and battery, made by Albert Perret, Sr., and Albert Perret, Jr., and William H. Demler. These charges were dismissed and Recorder Schmidt made a charge of disorderly conduct for the township. During the course of the trial Hoos made himself generally unmanageable and had to be handcuffed.

Judge Neier found him guilty and sentenced him to spend thirty days in Somerville, stating at the same time that had Hoos beena little more quiet during the court proceedings in all probability he would have been freed. Hoos represented himself and this morning appealed the case. He is out on $100 bail, which was furnished by John Near, of Penington avenue.

CO. K REVIEWED BY GOVERNOR

Tomorrow morning the usual church services will be held for the men. The Catholic members will assemble in the mess hall, and later Chaplain Handley, providing it does not rain, will preach from the knoll adjoining the Governor's cottage, the regimental band furnishing the music. Aside from guard duty and the evening parade no military duties have been arranged for the day, but at 5:45 on Monday morning the "strenuous life" will begin with a rush. Colonel Reading made that plain as soon as the men arrived today.

That the Federal authorities do not intend to let regular army officers serve in the National Guard, even temporarily is the interpretation placed by the New Jersey officials upon the act of the Government in sending Captain Walter L. Reed and First Lieutenant Charles B. Elliott back here as instructors. Prior to the departure of the New Jersey troops for Texas, Captain Reed was elected a major in the Fourth Regiment to succeed one of the men moved up when Colonel Steel was disqualified by the medical examiners. Reed had been one of the instructors detailed to New Jersy for some years, and his election was hailed with delight by officers and men of the command. It was made, pending final approval by the War Department, but the fact that he has been sent back as an instructor from Governor's Island forms the basis for the opinion held by the State guardsmen.

The same rule holds in the case of Lieutenant Elliott, who was chosen a major in the Fifth Regiment under similar circumstances. He had passed his regular army examinations for captain, but had not yet qualified when the election to the New Jersey regiment was made. Both men are now here with Major Henry D. Styer as the senior instructing officer, and Captain Gouvenor D. Packer as the fourth man.

After getting the hopes of everyone about the camp up to a high pitch by the report that mobilization was to continue here, a wet blanket was thrown on the whole situation yesterday by instructions being sent to muster out of the service every man connected with the quartermaster's department who had completed his work. The mobilization camp was officially closed, and with the exception of Colonel David S. Hill and one or two others every one was ordered home. Colonel Hill still has to account to the government for some $200,000 worth of horses, $60,000 in cash and a few similar items, so he will in all probability remain in the regular service for some time.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH GATHERING

Political Crowd Fails to Materialize at "Little White House."

BARBER SEEKS OFFICE

Announces His Candidacy for Congressional Honors In Sixth District—Three-Cornered Fight In Bergen.

(Special Service of the Daily Press.)

Sea Girt, July 22.—Rain in the northern end of the State, which failed to materialize here interfered with the crowd which attended the Governor's Day gathering yesterday, so that no more than 125 men from Passaic, Bergen, Sussex and Warren counties reached Sea Girt. There was plenty of political gossip to be heard on all sides, but as George F. Wright, a member of the Water Supply Commission, expressed it, the politicians all over the State "are finding it mighty hard to get any one to take any interest in the campaign."

Before the guests sat down to luncheon Governor Fielder repeated his appeal of a week ago that those present make contributions to the work of the New Jersey Soldiers' Relief League, and when the pans were passed, $190.10 was put in them, much to the delight of Mrs. Fielder, who is chairman of the league, and watched the whole proceeding from the porch of the "Little White House."

About the only development of a political nature during the day was the announcement, following the one made at Phillipsburg on Thursday night, that Senator Thomas Barber, of Warren county, will seek the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Sixth district, consisting of Warren, Sussex, Bergen and the northern part of Passaic county. Senator Barber said that he had been debating over the matter for a long time, and had to arrange some of his personal affairs before deciding definitely what he would do. The place, now held by Archibald F. Hart, will also be contented for by Sheriff Robert N. Heath, of Bergen county, on the Democratic ticket. On the Republican side the nomination is sought by John R. Ramsey, former Assemblyman Guy H. Fake and former Senator John D. Prince.

There will be a three-cornered fight in Bergen county for the State Senatorship in the Republican primary, as former Judge David P. Zabriskie, former Assemblyman Randolph Perkins and William R. Mackey all seek the place. Up to the present time Congressmen Dow H. Drucker, in the Seventh district is apparently the only one who wants the job, as there have been no names suggested of possible Democratic opponents.

The Passaic county Assembly delegation of last year is to be split up and two members will seek nomination on a local option ticket, combining forces with the Record candidacy for Governor. Assemblyman John Hunter will not seek re-election, as he hopes to be made one of the candidates for the small Board of Freeholders, but Assemblyman George H. Dalrymple and Edward H. Randall, with three others to be later picked by the county organization, will oppose Assemblymen John H. Adamson and Josiah Dadley, who will probably have as running mates G. Blauvelt, Howard Sewell and one other man, on a local option plank.

Frank J. Bock and Congressman Edward W. Gray were on hand in the afternoon, assisting Colonel Austen Colgate in his solicitation of support for the Gubernatorial nomination. While they were sure that the Colgate prospects in Passaic and Bergen, where they have been admittedly weak, are looking up, they said that they were not yet ready to announce who would take charge of the campaign for the Essex man in either county.

United States Senator William Hughes was expected to be present with the Passaic county men, and a number of the visitors waited around after luncheon, expecting him to come, but he did not put in an appearance. Former Senator Edmund B. Wakelee, of Bergen county, and Mayor Radcliffe, of Paterson, were among the late arrivals, as was former Senator Johnston Cornish, of Warren. The latter, in talking of the Babber candidacy for Congress, said that the understanding had been that the good things should be passed around, and it was about time Warren county got something. "We are all for Barber, and the Sussex county people are with us. We expect to nominate and elect him," said Mr. Cornish.

Next Friday Governor Fielder expects the largest crowd this far at the gathering. The Second Regiment will be in camp, and visitors have been invited from Mercer, Middlesex, Union, Somerset and Monmouth counties.

FRANK CASEY.

Frank Casey, of 189th street and Washington avenue, New York city, son of the late Maurice Casey, and nephew of the late Patrick Casey, of this city, met with a trolley accident in New York city yesterday. He was removed to Fordham Hospital, and there died of his injuries. The funeral will take place Monday morning, requiem mass being celebrated at 9:30. Interment will be made in Calvary cemetery.

SUCCESS TO CHRISTY MATHEWSON.

The morning papers inform us that the proposed deal between the Cincinnati Reds and the New York Giants is now a certainty and that Christy has assumed his new position as manager. Matty was always a conscientious worker and gave to the New York club all that was in him. Whenever he pitched a baseball game, he worked with a will and to win. One of the metropolitan papers asserts that "Matty was never ambitious to the detriment of his club." No better compliment than that could be desired by anyone. To be ambitious is to be all that one could desire. Ambition is really the stepping-stone to success. And Christy, being ambitious, is bound to be successful.

TO PRESERVE STRICT ORDER.

"President John K. Tener, of the National League, was a spectator at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, yesterday. He talked of the increasing interest in the game and said that practically every team in the league would make money this season. Tener was questioned about the recent troubles in the league, and particularly at Chicago, when a game was forfeited. While not making any definite statement as to what action he will take, Tener said he was going to 'preserve strict order' in the league. He attributes the intense feeling on the field of play to the closeness of the race in the National this year, and with six teams having a chance for the pennant believes that it is only natural that the players should at times overstep the bounds of politeness, and that all the umpires are giving a little leeway, but that he has issued instructions to tame down some of the more belligerent players. A meeting of the National League magnates is to be held in New York soon, at which time some inside dope will be spilled and perhaps a revolution started. Some of the magnates are after the scalp of Tener, and one or two of the fellows are not a bit backward in stating they want someone else as chairman of the National Commission. Some deep politics are being worked just now, and mayhap Garry Herrmann will have his head lopped off and Tener either given a nice lambasting or pushed out altogether."—Pittsburgh Leader.

OPINION OF ANOTHER.

"Spectacular tennis such as McLoughlin, Johnston and the rest of the Californians play is the sort that gets the crowd. There is action every minute and it's action the average spectator wants. To some, however, who have studied the game closely and know its finer points in detail, long court tennis, carefully played, is most attractive. When R. Norris Williams was at his best, playing the defensive and offensive game from the back line of the court, sending low, swift shots across the net, right and left to the corners, many a man preferred his tennis to McLoughlin's rocket service and slashing play at the net. Williams had learned his tennis on European courts; McLoughlin played a new type of game, invented on the Coast. Williams attempted to learn California tennis and lost some of his skill. He was the only one in the East who used the long court game and played it well. Perhaps he will return to his old form when the nationals come along."—Newark News.

SEEMS TO BE THE PRACTICE.

The season's record of major league games to date indicate that the big time pitcher able to go the entire distance is fast becoming a rare bird. The daily box scores almost invariably show the names of from two to half a dozen flingers appearing for a single team in a nine-inning contest.

No fewer than 44 pitchers worked in the sixteen major league games played on a recent date. Of this number Alexander, of the Phillies, was the only flinger able to go over the entire route of nine innings. The Boston Americans, on the day in question, used Ruth and Foster to defeat the Chicago White Sox, for which team Danforth, Scott, Cicotte, Russell, Benz and Walsh did the pitching.

On the same day the Yankees, with Cuddop, Caldwell and Russell doing slab duty, defeated the Cleveland Indians, who used Beebe, Coumb and Gould in the box. Meyer and Bush, of the Athletics, defeated Hamilton, Groom, Weilmann and Parks, the Brown's quartet of heavers, while the Tigers, with Dauss and Cunningham doing the twirling, defeated Washington, the Senators using Gallia, Ayres, Dumont and Boehling in a vain attempt to bring home the bacon.

This record for one day, which is a fair sample of what appears to have become an established practice this year, indicates that all the big league outfits are working along the same lines in the handling of their pitching staffs. "Put 'em in and take 'em out" has become the rule. With all the clubs it appears to be the same. A couple of safe bingles is the cue for the heaver to beat it to the shower and civilian scenery.

Should this system of changing pitchers during the game continue to grow as it has thus far this season it won't be long before two-thirds of the roster of every team will be made up of pitchers. One for each inning.

THE INVADING JAPS.

The reader can rest assured that the latest talk of a "Japanese Invasion" has nothing to do with military affairs. It centres about the performances of two Jap tennis players who are the proud owners of names that are very hard to pronounce, but that are bound to find themselves in print very often from now on. Ichiya Kumage, we believe, is the correct name of the better of the two players. Ichiya demonstrated at the Point Judith tournament that he is a capable player and that he intends to prove to all tennis followers that he is a foe worthy of the sharpest steel. He will in all probability compete in several tournaments that are to be held in New York State in the near future. And the followers of the racquet sport are looking forward to another set of surprises.

NOW THAT IT IS ARRANGED.

Now that the Tabs have agreed to meet the Royals what are we going to do about it? The game should be well patronized as it is going to be an attraction that is worthy of the name. The Royals want to win. There is no denying that fact and no one has denied it. That they are going to "pad" to win is only a rumor, although certain members of the Royal team admit that an out-of-town pitcher is to be employed. As far as we know there is no local title at stake and there is no reason why Pete Simmons should not pad up if he has the cash with which to do it.

These "Vets" have seen plenty of service and many fans believe that they are destined to play for years to come. Perhaps they will.

EAGLES AND "ERINS" EACH GAIN VICTORY

Hebrews and Diamonds Are Victims in Splendid Exhibitions.

Two games were played in the Parker Field League yesterday, the Diamonds defeating the Hebrews 3 to 0 in the first canto, which lasted but seven innings and the Shamrocks taking the measure of the Eagles in the nightcap. The last game was an eight inning affair and was won by a score of 3 to 2.

These two contests were by far the most interesting yet played on the playground circuit, which, by the way, seems to get better instead of worse as it grows older. Splendid pitching marked both these games, no twirler allowing over four hits.

GARWOOD VIISTORS AT AVON OVAL

Tabs Will Have Hard Time Capturing a Victory Tomorrow.

The Garwood Y. M. C. A. will come to this city tomorrow afternoon, prepared to snatch victory from the grasp of the Tabs. The team that will represent Garwood on the Oval tomorrow is not the same one that performed here last Sunday. Those who ought to know state that the Y. M. C. A. team is the best team in Garwood and is by far more representative of that place than the other outfit was.

Johnny Gray, whose popularity with the Scotch Plains fans was worth considerable, will play with the Garwoods, as will Fay Washburn, a former member of the Plainfield Pets. The Mason brothers are also members of the visiting squad. The Tabs will have Jack Denny on the mound with Teeling doing the receiving. Britt Martin will umpire. The Royals are the Tab opponents next Sunday.

RALPH RUNYON A COMER.

This is what Howard Valentine, sporting authority of the Globe, thinks of Ralph Runyon:

"There are few more promising young athletes in the metropolitan district right now than Ralph Runyon, the polo vaulter, who until recently represented the Pastime Athletic Club. Runyon is one of those boys who has had to "plug" to gain success, but it's coming his way fast now after several years of effort. Just how much Runyon has improved in the last year was shown at the games that were held at New Brunswick, N. J., on July 4 in connection with the safe and sane Fourth movement in the hustling manufacturing town on the Raritan. On that occasion the former Pastimer astounded the athletic sharps by clearing 12 feet 2 inches. As Runyon is still but a youngster, as pole vaulters are rated, this performance stamps him as one of the most promising vaulters in competition today.

It is interesting to note, in connection with Runyon's case, that until he went to college last year he was just an ordinary 10-footer. Why is it that all of our good pole vaulters are developed in the college atmosphere? Runyon was just a passably good performer in the vault until he went to State College (Pennsylvania) last year. After but one term as a college student we find Runyon doing a full 18 inches better than he was as a member of the Pastime Athletic Club.

There is good reason to believe that Runyon will shortly be seen in the colors of the New York Athletic Club. The former Pastimer will affiliate with some local club within the next three months, and it is reported that Paul has whispered the magic "yes" into the waiting ear of the Recruiting Officer, Paul Pilgrim, of the Winged Foot organization.

PLAN ATHLETIC MEET.

An athletic carnival for the benefit of the Monmouth Memorial Hospital at Long Branch, N. J., will be held at the Hollywood Horse Show Park on Saturday, September 2. In view of the fact that the national track and field championship games will be held at Newark the following week it is expected that many crack athletes will participate, using the meet as a final workout.

HAND AS MANAGER.

Frank Hand will lead his Washington team against the Northampton Club at Washington this afternoon. This will be "Nib's" second attempt as a manager. In his first effort he attained unusual success, the fact being due to the good pitching of Cliff Randolph, who will, perhaps, draw the hurling assignment this afternoon.

BENCH COMMITTEE MEETS.

The Bench Show Committee of the Plainfield Kennel Club will hold an important meeting in the Queen City Hotel on Monday evening. At this meeting plans for the coming show to be held at the Driving Park under the auspices of the local club will be formulated.

PRESS AMATEUR DEPARTMENT

Now that the Royal Giants are to do battle with the Tabs let us consider what each team has in the line of talent. If we do that, we will be, at least, keeping abreast of the times.

In the pitching line, the colored team does not boast of an abundance of material, although Butler, Maiden and Kline, the hurlers that pastime with the club, are as good as they come. However, we would not be surprised to see Murphy, a Philadelphia Giant hurler, do the mound work for the locals. Of course, every fan realizes that the Abstainers have plenty of hillock material, though it is barely possible that the Royals will "wade" through the whole clan. There are Jack and Tone Denny, Benny Rosenson and Mickey McFadden on the Fourth street roster. If these fellows cannot cope with the colored lads, Manager Jim Scott will have to issue a call for the reserves.

Catchers are valuable men. And the Royals are in need of a couple of them. We have never seen Condict work and, therefore, cannot comment on his ability. But, it is a foregone conclusion that he is by no means as good a man as Teeling. If Simmons secures Tommy Washington to attend to the backstop work for his team, hopors in the catching department will be about even.

How about an umpire? We guess that Britt Martin will be acceptable to the Royals. We know that the Tabs are satisfied with his work and believe that Peter Simmons will consent to his working in this series.

On first base the Royals have "Tune" Kline. He is a fast man, and a hitter. His comic capers have made him a distinctive feature of all games in which the Royals have been engaged. It is doubtful if the Tabs' initial sackers have anything on "Tune." Honors are about even.

The rest of the infields of the two clubs are about evenly matched, the Royals having a shade in batting but not in fielding. In the outfield, there is little to choose between the two outfits, although a glance at the record of the Teetotaler clan would lead one to believe that that team was a little the better in the garden work.

Taken all in all, it looks as though the two clubs were unusually equal as far as general ability is concerned. Which team is the better will have to be decided one week from Sunday, when the "big show" opens. The rooters of both squadrons are ready for the shout "play ball" and fandom in general will greet the opening play with gratitude.

Eddie Deady, they tell us, is one of the most promising young players in this vicinity. Eddie steals bases to his heart's content. We watched him at practice yesterday and were forced to confess that he can wear out more pairs of knickerbockers than any youth that we know.

Bill Reasoner is still busy with the bat. Bill would like to get a chance with the Royal Giants and we believe that he ought to be given a trial.

GOSHEN DRIVING CLUB INCREASES CUP LEAD

The Goshen Driving Club increased its lead in the point competition for the Club Cup on the second day of the Junior League meet at the Weequahic Park track yesterday, when Leo A., a black gelding owned and driven by New York Supreme Court Justice A. S. Tompkins, came in first in the 2:12 trot, the fastest and closes race of the matinee. The Road Horse Association of New Jersey is runner-up in the point table, and the Metropolitan Driving Club of Boston is third.

The 2:12 trot was so close that it took about five minutes for the judges to decide upon Leo A. as the winner. Amo, a gray mare, driven and owned by Charles S. Phipps, of the Wilmington Driving Club, gave Leo A. a hard battle all the way around the course. Amo's driver protested against the judges verdict. Bond Issue, driven by Dr. Mitchell of the Goshen Driving Club, finished third.

BOROUGH COUPLE POISONED FROM EATING CRABS

Two more cases of poisoning from eating prepared food have been discovered in the family of F. Edward Conshay, of 24 Summit avenue, the borough. A week ago today the family had cooked crabs for their meal purchased from a local shop. Last Sunday the condition of Mr. and Mrs. Conshay became such that Dr. Albert Pittis was summoned to attend them. He diagnosed the case as poisoning from the crabs.

Mr. and Mrs. Conshay were confined during the entire week, the first few days being ones of intense suffering. Today Mr. Conshay has resumed his business duties although still not entirely well, inasmuch as it takes some time to get the poison out of the system.
